

Easter Marks An Important Day for Children

Statesman's HOME
Panorama
 Women ... Music ... Fashions ... Features

(Sec. 3) Statesman, Salem, Ore., Sunday, April 21, 1957

Children's voices will sing out in Salem churches this Easter Sunday. All through the year the youngsters prepare for special occasions and their programs are preferred by many over adult choirs. Pictured above are members of the Cherub choir of the First Methodist church directed by Mrs. Eleonor Schramm.

Left to right in the front row are Ricky McNall, Ronald Frederickson, Jollaine Kitzke, Mary Lee Mills, Craig Richards, Coleen McEldowney, Linda Pincus and Terry Troth.

In the second row, left to right, are Lynette Hansen, Karen Zeigler, Sylvia Rothweiler, Linda Huntsinger, Jennie Johnson, Diana Church, Elaine Elfeldt, and Clifford Brush.

Back row, left to right, are Marcella Mink, Bruce Williams, Barry Olson, Susan McAnnally, Gary Gardner, Marie Stewart, Ann Chisholm and Donald Judson.

Dressed in their new Easter outfits are Deborah and Pamela Walker, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. Reginald Walker, above, who will attend Sunday School at the Westminster United Presbyterian Church today. The picturesque church is situated high on a hill in Salem Heights amidst a grove of trees.

Serving as altar boys is wonderful experience for teen-age youngsters, such as Tim Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meyer, and Merrell Cray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morrell Cray. They serve regularly at St. Joseph's Catholic Church and will take part in the Easter services today.

The Easter bunny captivates the interest of two youngsters, Dolph and Leslie Taggesell, children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Taggesell, pictured at the left. It's a big day for the little ones, who are up early to find what Mr. Rabbit has left and search for colored eggs. Then it is on to church and later a family dinner.