

Hayesville Service Men Home, Spend Holidays With Families

HAYESVILLE — Many homes in this community were made happy this year when members absent for several years returned to make the family circle complete on Christmas day.

Clarence and Leonard Greig have received their discharges. Capt. and Mrs. Vernon Greig arrived at the family home Thursday before Christmas. Captain Greig expects his discharge soon. Mrs. Clarence Greig, Sally Jo and Billie; Mrs. Leonard Greig, Donna and Jimmie; Mrs. Harry Schultz, Vernon and Mary Lou completed the family circle. Captain Greig has been serving in the south Pacific.

Mrs. Elsa Frey had her family but it was not complete. Her daughter, Phyllis, Aldene Frey, is at the US navy hospital at San Leandro, Calif. The family group included Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Christensen and daughter Linda, Lt. and Mrs. Quinten Rowland and Alvin Frey.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McAllister entertained four generations at their Christmas party. The eldest guest was her mother, Mrs.

In 1860 River Flood Crest Hit 39 ft. in Salem

The highest mark the Williamette river has reached in the recorded history of Salem was reached as 1860 was becoming 1861 when 39 feet was reached in Salem at the place where the steel bridge is now located. No bridge spanned the river at that time.

The second high mark was 37 feet on February 3, 1890, when the first bridge ever built went out while Salem residents lined the banks on the east side. The only house then located in what is now West Salem is the first one on the right as one leaves the bridge on the west side.

No flood like that of 1860 ever came except after melting snow. The 1860 flood was such that a steamboat was run to a point where the Marion county courthouse now stands. An $8900 fill was later put in.

Powers Population Checked in at 762

Going Oriental

Return of Chinese Foods in the Market Recalls Pre-war Favorites

We who like oriental cooking, even if it is an American version, are getting a break these days. There are chop suey vegetables on the canned food shelves at the grocery and there are bean sprouts too. Then you get ten cents worth of sprouts for three times that much, but a jar of sprouts makes a lot of chop suey or sukiyaki.

Even conservative Family Merritt Farmer comes out with a recipe for chop suey in one of the later editions of her cookbook, and while this is not a real Chinese favorite, Americans enjoy it as such.

CHOP SUEY

1 pound white meat of beef, veal or chicken

4 tablespoons chicken or other fat

1 cup celery, cut thin pieces

1 onion, peeled and sliced thin

6 mushroom caps

6 Chinese water chestnuts

1/2 pound bean sprouts

1/2 pound bamboo shoots

1 teaspoon sherry sauce

2 cups stock or water

Salt if needed

Cut meat in thin one inch strips and cook in frying pan in half of the fat. Cook vegetables five minutes in remaining fat, add sprouts, shoots and sauce, stock and meat. Simmer gently for a few minutes to cook well. Thicken slightly with cornstarch. Serve with boiled rice.

Variations must be made as bamboo shoots and water chestnuts are not available, but the dish will be satisfactory without them.

Better suited to flexibility made necessary by lack of materials is the Japanese dish, sukiyaki, which might be called "hot metal steak" by those whose prejudices make the dish's nationality distasteful. Just the same, sukiyaki when well made is a fine dish and to the American eye has a fine difference between the two. The Chinese chop suey is that it is largely vegetable flavored with meat, while chop suey is mainly meat, flavored with vegetable.

ITALY TAKES OVER CONTROL

ROME, Dec. 31 — (AP) — The allies tonight handed back to Italy the administrative control of four northern regions, Piedmont, Venezia, Lombardy and Liguria.

In which he was returning from England to the United States was forced down on July 5, 1945.

in an oriental restaurant, by the waitress or even the chef, who comes in to officiate. Vegetables are brought neatly cut up on a hardwood board, each piled separately. The large heavy skillet is placed on a charcoal burner or gas plate in the center of the table. The dish must be served immediately or the flavor is spoiled.

We'll modify the recipe to suit the available ingredients.

Heat the skillet add some suet or grease and then add 1 pound shoribits or beef that have been boned and sliced paper - thin across the grain. Stir a few seconds, pull to one side, add a pile of bean drained sprouts, 2 large onions sliced, 6 green onions sliced including the tops, 4 celery stalks cut diagonally, 1 sliced green pepper. As additions are made, keep each separated in piles, poking carefully with a knife (the orientals use wooden disposable chopsticks) to keep from burning. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons sugar over the vegetables, add 1/4 cup water mixed with 1/2 cup soy sauce. Simmer a few minutes until vegetables are beginning to soften but are still crisp and until meal is done. Cook about eight minutes and serve very hot. Each guest should take a pile of rice on his plate and top with the sukiyaki and sauce.

This recipe serves four.

When other ingredients are available, there will be bamboo shoots, tofu (a sort of curd which comes in cubes about the size of a quarter pound of butter) and shirataki (a spaghetti shaped material made of rice flour, sometimes called "waterfall").

Keep Clean and Warm

with the CLEAN FUEL

Pres-to-logs

Trade Mark Registered.

For heaters - furnaces - fireplaces - cooking

Thousands of happy homemakers have found "Pres-to-logs the fuel incomparable! They know from actual experience with "Pres-to-logs" as fuel for fireplace, heater, range and furnace that no other solid fuel meets their fuel needs quite so efficiently. That is why the number of "Pres-to-logs" users is daily increasing.

Here are some of the advantages "Pres-to-logs" users enjoy:

1. Cleanliness and Convenience. — "Pres-to-logs" are made of kiln-dried sawdust, compressed into "logs" of just the right size. They are free of dirt, pitch, slivers, soot, smoke and ashes.
2. Economy. — "Pres-to-logs" burn slowly, giving intense, even heat. Half a "log" cooks a meal. One or two "logs" are sufficient for an evening's fire.
3. Heat Value. — Measured by heat value, "Pres-to-logs" are cheaper than other solid fuels. One "log" equals four average sticks of firewood.
4. Neatness. — "Pres-to-logs" stack neatly and compactly in your basement, eliminating dust and litter.

As an all purpose fuel, use "Pres-to-logs"
