Add prep hoop prospects-Forward Bill Charles of Don Wilson's Molalia quint, This sixfooter, in the opinion of refereeing Bruce Williams, is the best looking prospect he's seen around the valley this semester. Based mostly on the fact that Charles can get up in the air and do his chores very efficiently while he's up there, too often a scarce item in a prep player's makeup. . . .

Add another out-and-at-'em, Phil Bell. Phil's return to civvies may come as a surprise to many, for many opined the prewar Cliff Parker sporting goods lieutenant would keep his captain's bars and stay in the air forces. Instead, he's out and plans returning to work in Cleveland, his home during three army years. . . . Willamette U's fall footballers have picked up another possibility via GI discharge, too. Held in Secret Blanchard Selected By Pittsburgh '11'

By Sid Feder

NEW YORK, Jan. 14-(AP)-Te avoid revealing any information to the rival all-America conference, the National football league's club owners held the most secret player draft in their history tonight but it was learned that Felix (Doc) Blanchard, Army's great fullback, was selected as the No. 1 choice of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Aside from Blanchard, only four other selections were disclosed-Boley Dancewicz by the Boston Yanks, Leo Riggs of Southern California by the Philadelphia Eagles and Cal Rossi, former UCLA star and Walt Koslowski of Holy Cross, by 'the Washington Redskins.

The probability is, of course, that Blanchard, who still has two more years of varsity ball at West Point, will remain in the army. Although he is only in his second year at Army, he began his collegiate career at North Carolina and became eligible for the National league draft with the graduation of his class at North

Merely a few of the quotes and unquotes gathered without effort from Hilda and Harry Hoop Fan after the Friday-Saturday sessions at the Villa between Astoria's Fishermen and Salem's Vikings. It seems the customers, and there was no shortage of 'em for the series, didn't appreciate the way Wally Palmberg and his lads went at it with Harold Hauk and his'n. Defensive basketball, as taught by two of the state's best prep hoop brains who hate like blazes to bow to each other, isn't palatable to spoiled villagers, in other words. They want to see the hoop-suiters burn the varnish off the floor-not get stuck with it while playing keepaway, you might say.

A' Church Loop:

The series was hot enough in one sense of the word, all right-Fishermen and Vikings together on the basketball floor would just naturally love to make like Joe Louis and Billy Conn. And in the eyes of many of the clients 'tis too bad they can't. But when two cage coaches of the Palmberg and Hauk caliber toss repertoires at each other, same clients must expect to see the silk-pantied lads drooling caution. Those who saw the series needn't be reminded both Hauk and Palmberg know what basketball defense means. They dote on it. The Hauks wanted to run the Finns ragged on offense, but the Coasters would have none of it and took to the thrift-lacking bergs, knowing it would be silly to gallop with the Salems, were content to take their time in both games. Salem's sharp defense helped 'em. All of which doesn't add up to ;

which tends to make the hot-forhooping customers a disgruntled pack. Maybe later when the two gents meet in the state classicif they get here-they'll instruct their laddies to make like fire engines. Twould be okeh by the
