PAGE FOUR

"No Favor Sways Us; No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

CHARLES A. SPRAGUE, Editor and Publisher

Member of the Associated Press

The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for publication of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited in this newspaper.

Our Interests Are Mutual

Three Portable Houses

There is no use mincing words in saying that there hase been a wrong approach, on the part of all sides. in regard to the city-suburban controversy over the extension of municipal fire protection and other facilities outside Salem's boundaries.

It is unfortunate, that a home just south of Salem had to burn down last Wednesday night with city firemen within striking distance. But it is more unfortunate that there has been, unnecessarily, a growing cleavage between Salem and its immediate neighbors.

It is to be regretted that some city officials have commented that those who reside just outside the city do so solely for the purpose of escaping city taxes. That is far from 100 per cent true. Some of them need or want more room than could be acquired within the municipality. Many were unable to find a suitable residence within the city itself.

But it is just as much to be regretted that many of these suburban neighbors have come to regard the city as Uncle Shylock. Their stand is ill-advised. The city for years has attempted to draw in the confines of its public facilities, so that they served only those who pay city taxes. And there was plenty of notice given when the city council finally took action to limit fire protection to the city limits.

The mistakes have been, on the part of the city, not in the desired ends but in the comments which have surrounded their achievement, and in the lack of a helping hand.

The mistakes, on the part of the suburban residents, lie in the lethargy with which they have greeted the city's justified announcements of limitations. They should have formed their own districts or joined the city.

9

The remedy is made up of the same factors that could have constituted the preventativethe city should go out of its way to have representatives meet with the suburban areas and offer all aid and advice possible. The suburbanites should seek the help of the city in charting their course, and take some specific action.

Salem's immediate neighbors spend their money in Salem's stores, restaurants, filling stations and other businesses which pay city taxes, and the city thereby shares both directly and indirectly in their prosperity. It could well afford to recognize the city's problems and seek its aid-not just get their water all hot when the city sits tight on a well-publicized decision which was prefaced by plenty of sober con-ment, of competition so keen it nearly came to brawls, but now we have the spectacle of ponderous units of government engaging in grave controversy over three (3) portable houses. The houses were part of the government housing project at Richland, Wash. The state of Oregon's board of higher education pounced on them as housing for veterans at state colleges. It took a trip by Secretary Byrne to Washington and numerous phone calls with other agencies to get release of these and other housing units for Oregon. But the bureau of reclamation says it wants these three houses for Grand Coulee, and has "nibs" on them because as a federal agency its claim takes priority. To counter the reclamation bureau the board of higher education is appealing to Senators Cordon and Morse who are to go to Harold Ickes, boss of the reclamation bureau, to get the latter to release its claim on the three portables.

Actually the houses were en route to Eugene last week; have probably arrived; and may be occupied now. Thus possession may be worth nine points for Oregon in the final showdown. If so much squabble occurs over three portables what chance does a lone civilian have to get a roof over his head

"X Marks the Spot"

The Linn county authorities have a difficult crime problem on their hands. They have a man in jail who confesses he murdered another man, and they have a material witness to the crime. The body of the victim has been fished out of Marys river in Benton county. But the authorities are stymied in filing of murder charges because they do not know where the crime occurred.

Three men were in an automobile. One man shot another and killed him. The car was driven around in the valley and the body dumped in Marys river. The witness said at first that the shooting took place in Portland; the reputed murdered says it didn't but is fuzzy on where it did take place.

It is necessary to establish a spot for the crime in order to know in which county to bring the charge. Justice would get a bad bump if the murderer should go free for lack of proof of the location of the crime. The spot is definitely X. an unknown quantity. This Tommy Manville marriage-divorce busidents of the city entrust their children to Mc- ness is an affront to common decency. The eighth wife has gone for the Reno cure after 28 days of marriage. She must have been just a gold-digger. As for Tommy, everyone knows what the cure for him is.

Distributed by King Features Syndicate

The Literary News Behind the News Guidepost By W. G. ROGERS (Distribution by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in whole

WRITTEN BY THE WIND, by Rob-ert Wilder (Putnam's; $2.75). Money lasts but blood runs out . . . that is the idea behind this story of the Whitfields: old Andrew who built the tremendous tobacco fortune, his son's Joseph and Cassius, the latter's daughter Ann-Charlotte, son Cary, son's wife Lillith, son's friend Reese Benton. There's some reflection, silghtly lurid, of recent life in America: impossibly rich heiress, high times, vast amount of drinking, illicit loving. Though you would have missed the rounded, cred-, could at any ible characterizations and the nice motivation provided by this stimulating author, you could have read some of this in newspaper headlines. Wilder doesn't point a moral, he tells a tale, yet there is always the intriguing suspicion that fact spices this fiction. The Whitfield home is in a place called Winton, N. C. With the founder of the fortune laid away in a mausoleum right outside the front door, Cassius is having toruble bringing up his boy and girl, who somewhere along the line have got spoiled; with Cary it's liquor, with his sister, sex. Cassius persuades a penniless neighbor to turn over to him his son Reese in the hope that Reese, already Cary's chum, can exercise the influence of which Cassius is incapable.

or in part strictly prohibited.) WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. - I one has. Work is essentially only wrote a column yesterday men- a devotion of energy by the intioning incidentally how the un- dividual. A man has a natural ions, in their recent strike camright to withdraw his energy paign, had built up the striking if he chooses. Employers have a power to atomic proportions. right to shut down their busi-

Waiting for the Reaction

By PAUL MALLON

iness strike.

themselves.

The strikes they called-but not simultaneously --- in telephones. telegraph, radio, electricity, truckage, elevators, streetcars and buses, demonstrated that a few unions time abliterate commercial life in the entire country, with-Paul Mallon outtouching the major industries like steel. autos and meat packing.

Large cities could get little bool the teamste would stop with a strike of pow-

An elevator strike would kill it did in New York. Without buses and street cars, local transportation could be broken down.

Telephones, telegraph and radio walkouts would furnish whatever added impetus was needed for a complete national collapse

This is what I meant by my allusion to the new power of the strike weapon. I am saying this to editors and readers who asked an explanation, some of whom striking privilege, and its relation to the era of grievances in which we are trying, with im-

When you think about it, the right to strike is a right every-

If this novel is not manufactured, it is not, on the other hand, inspired, "Written on the Wind" is better than most, not quite a

By Lichty

pediments, to live.

match for the best.

Everyone Shows Right

in the processes of living.

er house workers.

Kills City's Business

have to buy and maintain and be found anywhere, and at very pay taxes on their own rights- low fares," will be on the Portof-way.

terests have used is the loss due of this year, it was disclosed Monin various states. They call dent.

ruption of commerce at state Each Has 14 Cars lines might be avoided. Several on trucks a game of leapfrog: ter. Jumping the states one at a time.

eliminate "trade barriers" if the orange and black of the San trucking interests themselves Francisco-Los Angeles daylights, persist in breaching the stand- which the company believes will ards, always by moving the tol- show to particular advantage erances upward?

time permit the length is in- and characteristics of the Oregon creased to 60 feet and the weight scene. to 68,000 pounds. Unless the law Oregon Items Called For the old limits will be reestab- it was stated, will also be reprelished after July 1, 1947. My sentative of Oregon through the nesses. Indeed, they have done prediction is that concession to items to be carried on the menus. so in Argentina in a general busthe truck lines probably will be Although details of the train demade to make permanent the sign interior equipment and fur-A Broadway columnist has wartime limits. Oregon high- nishings are not ready for ansuggested we should all do the ways have been improved to such nouncement at this time, it was same-just withdraw our eneran extent and, will be further disclosed that new-type windows gy, individually, as the unions improved so the larger vehicles are being planned to give passencan be accommodated with rea- gers a wide-angle view, vertically But it is not natural for insonable safety to roads and as well as horizontally. It was dividuals or businesses to want bridges and to other users of the also pointed out that when the to strike, both for the same reahighways.

But the trucking interests ern Pacific Daylight streamliner should set limits to their own service will be available for aldemands and not seek to give most the entire length of the Pafresh turns to the jackscrew at cific coast.

every session of the legislature. "We believe the streamlined If they are sincere in their de- Cascades and Shasta Daylights sire for uniformity in interstate will not only be popular with the commerce they will not create people of the Pacific Northwest further irregularity by pushing but also with travelers from all up the states with liberal toler- over the world." Mercier said, ances to still greater heights. Fine Scenery Cited "The daytime streamliners will And if the legislature makes permanent the higher limits for enable tourists to see some of the truck operation it should impose most magnificent scenery to be higher taxes on commercial found anywhere, and at very low trucking as was recommended fares. "Southern Pacific started an by the interim committee which reported to the last legislature. extensive improvement program That report showed that trucks long before the war, which was have not been paying their full carried steadily forward even durshare of road costs (to say noth- ing the depression years," he coning of escaping most taxes for tinued. "The war stopped all consupport of state and local gov- struction of passenger equipment. ernment). If they are to get fav- We are now stepping ahead again ors from the state they ought to with plans for streamlining the be willing to pay their own way. Cascades and putting the Shasta Daylights into service. There will be other improvements over our system, which we expect to be able to announce from time to the most magnificent scenery to land-San Francisco run of the One argument the trucking in- Southern Pacific before the end to differing standards on trucks day by A. T. Mercier, S.P. presitrade barriers those restrictions "We have given our ideas for which force cargoes of large these (Shasta Daylight) stream-trucks to be unloaded at state liners to the designers of car lines and reloaded in smaller building companies and they are vehicles that are allowed to op- now working out the technical deerate in the next state. There tails and specifications," he exhas been a movement among plained. "As soon as this informahighway officials to standardize tion is available and bids can be truck allowances so this inter- made, the orders will be placed. The Shasta Daylights will be years ago these officials meet- postwar editions of Southern Paing at Reno established the cific's famous Daylights on the standards which they thought coast and valley runs between were proper. This difficulty de- San Francisco and Los Angeles. veloped, however; -- that while Each of the new trains will have trucklines were trying to bring 14 cars in addition to the Diesel-"backward" states like Oregon electric power units, and besides up to the so-called standard, the coaches, will include baggage they were working at the same car, diner, kitchen car, coffee time in states where that stand- shop, tavern car and observationard already was legal to get in- parlor car. The diner-kitchencreases. It is easy to see that coffee shop will form a three-car this practice makes law-making unit, with the kitchen in the cen-

Exterior color scheme of the How will we get "standards" and new streamliners will be the red. against the contrasting greens of The established maximum the Oregon landscape. The intetruck and trailer length allowed rior color scheme and exclusive in Oregon is 50 feet and weight fabrics, while not yet worked out 54,000 pounds. Under the war- in detail, will reflect the colors is changed at the next session . The dining car and coffee shop, new trains start operating. South-sideration

It is worthy of comment, too, that many resi-Kinley school-which is outside the city limits and therefore outside its fire protection zone. It is not a time to cast stones .- W.W.

Truman's Message

President Truman's message confirmed prophecies that he would endeavor to bring the budget into close balance. The estimated deficit for the next fiscal year is less than $5,000,000,-000 which will require no further borrowing by the government. It can be cared for out of > Ireasury reserves. This should have a tonic effect on confidence in government finance. It marks the first return to a near-balance of the budget since 1937. While spending continues at fantastic rates it will be only a little over a third of the wartime peak.

The president touched on the current industrial unrest, warning that it checks badly needed reconversion and threatens the whole economy. What the country needs, Truman said, is full employment and increased production. He described business as a public trust which must adhere to national standards, and said that labor as it grows in political and economic power must assume increased responsibility. He urged that disputes be settled by collective bargaining, without government compulsion.

He urged continuation of price control legislation and its extension to cover housing. He said the country would need to have an army of 2.000,000 men and that selective service should be continued if voluntary enlistments did not furnish sufficient soldiers.

The president reiterated his endorsement of a specific program of legislation: fact-finding In industrial disputes, minimum wage, fair empolyment practices, full employment, unification of army and navy administration.

The budget message was full of facts and figures dealing with the nation's financial condition and prospects. Further tax reduction is opposed at this time.

President Truman has given the congress much material to work on, and the country much to meditate on during the months immediately ahead. It looks as though his reiteration will bring early and definite action, one way or another, on the important measures which he recommends.

Bequest for Parrots

A spinster in London has left $24,000, twothirds of her estate, to the London zoo. The money is to be used to provide parrots in the zoo with larger cages, tree trunks, swings and baths. "where they can enjoy life with their amusing ways" When one reads the haunting stories of destitution among humans in Europe, lack of clothing, of food, of shelter one shakes his head over this news story. Undoubtedly there are thousands of children in Europe who wish they were parrots in the London zoo, as fas as their physical well-being is concerned. The natural presumption is, though, that the spinster in her life found more entertainment and diversion from the parrots at the zoo. "with their amusing ways," than she did with human beings, particularly those of the male persuasion.

Shortages are what we're longest on,

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 21.-(AP)-What do Japanese think about drunks, particularly drunks who get violent?

This hasn't yet been brought out in the cables that are coming in from Japan on the case of the American soldier whom a court martial has condemned to death for killing two Japanese at Nara following what was described to the court martial as a drinking bout.

No doubt the first Japanese reaction will be that of any occupied people who see a member of the occupying force get out of hand while under the influence of too much alcohol.

But behind this will be the rather contradictory attitude which the Japanese have shown in the past toward the things men do when they are drunk. Traditionally, Japanese teachings frowned upon any form of J. D. White excess, but in recent years such teachings have been ignored or preverted in many cases by a militaristic Japan. Still, the problem of drunkness appears to be a relatively new one in Japan.

The Japanese women's Christian temperance union was formed 50 years ago, but according to the Japan year book it concentrated on reducing licensed prostitution and the geisha traffic. The year book mentions no W.C.T.U. activity in regard to alcohol

There was a prohibition league in Japan which claimed 160,000 members. It worked 20 years to get prohibition for minors through the imperial diet, but the year book credits it with no other success

The customary drink in Japan is sake, a light wine made from rice and probably a little stronger than a Rhine table wine. The Japanese drank it at banquets and parties, and only the wealthy could afford to indulge regularly.

A survey remains to be made, but its likely that relatively few Japanese atrocities were committed under the influence of alcohol, but much more often under battle and victory psychology. In the five years which I spent behind Japanese lines in China, the worst thing I heard of a drunken soldier was the time one staggered up to an elderly British lady misiohary on Jan. 1, kissed her on the cheek, saluted smartly, and wished her a happy New Year. No doubt much worse went on, but you never saw any proof.

In explaining this particular case, a Japanese army officer stressed that Japanese law holds a drunken person not responsibile for his actions, considering it a type of insanity.

If his excuse is true, it would be interesting to know what the Japanese people are saving today about the American boy who allegedly stabbed two at Nara.

The Whitfields are the odd sticks; Reese's function is to fit them together into some workable, abiding relationship. He is more than Cary's friend, for he is responsible for him, but by that very fact less than a friend. He is under obligations more extensive and weighty than those imposed by friendship. The stirring struggle getween his debt to others and his debt to himself gives this book life.

There are very exciting moments; on top of a general level of excellent craftsmanship. Wilder is practised at filling his novel out, providing it with body, supplying the background for present action with past action. He writes conversation well, too. You'll enjoy watching the money flow and the blood thin out. But while you interest never flags, you are not deeply moved.

GRIN AND BEAR IT

Japanese to death in that quiet temple courtyard "I resent the charges of being an obstructionist in passing me tegislation!-why, most of the time I wasn't even here!"

dlers struck, no matter if the at the same time they might promeat packers and farmers were tect themselves against new comworking. The local movement of petition rising up and apply to the government for funds to pay all goods to store shelves would stop. Lighting, heating and cookthe idling expenses (rent, watching in the nation's city homes men, etc.).

and if all businesses

Fundamentally, however, neither the individual nor business wants to strike. Their natural instincts are to keep things much of the city business, as going.

son. The individual must have his paycheck to live. Businesses must have receipts to sustain

Of course the individuals might seek unemployment insurance.

Instinct Is to Keep Going

The unions want to strike because, they say, they have grievances. But where in the country is there a person without grievances? I have them. You have them-just grievances.

The grievances of individuals and business are just as great as the grievances of the unionsand I suspect much greater today because of the unbalanced economy the unions have built in recent years.

The

READERS

Safety Valve

"GREATER SALEM"

LETTERS FROM STATESMAN

suggested I should go further Public Rights Paramount into the fundamentals of the

What is simple justice in this situation? I do not expect anyone to heed me, but I think I can see what it is. The right of the public is fundamentally paramount. This is the natural right of all the people to live, to earn, to work. Of this fundamental right, there can be no impairment Common justice requires this. The people have a right to service from labor as well as from business, No nation can sustain itself long otherwise.

Unions then, must find other means of getting justice than by strikes against the public interest. They easily can get it in many ways, by judicial arbitration and otherwise. They should only have the right to a fair trial like everyone else. They cannot retain the power to stop all living, restrained only by conscience, if any.

Would Force Up Prices

The people do not and should not give their government such a power. They cannot, in reason, be expected to give any special group such a power over them. With continued unrestraint this power can lead only to active strike-use of it, with a breakdown of the nation, or indirect use through political pressures to control the economics of the nation forcing wages, prices and costs ever higher and higher, from year to year until the economy cracks with inflation.

In either event, destruction is the inevitable outcome of the existence of the atomic proportions of the striking power.

Appraisers Conduct Survey in Lincoln

Three appraisers from the state tax commission have been sent to Lincoln county to conduct a survey to be used as a basis for new assessed valuations

Morse Files Again For Representative

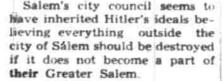

time in the near future."

To the Editor I note under the picture on the William B. Morse, Prineville, front page of Friday morning's Monday filed in the state depart-Statesman, of Mrs. Edmundson's ment for representative in the home burning, the city council legislature, 26th district, Crook made the statement, to salve and Jefferson counties, at the retheir own conscience for sitting publican primary election next by while a widow's home burned. May. Morse is now serving his that it is illegal for the fire de- first term in the house of reprepartment to come outside of the sentatives.

In America, who's sons fought Abraham Lincoln obtained his and died for Liberty and Justice. first eye glases the day before he it should not be illegal to live delivered his famous "Lost according to the Golden Rule or Speech." act the part of the Good Samar-ftan Salem's city council members need to be educated in the ideals for which the sons of Salem citizens have died.

Jay Morris.

IMPORTANT DRIVE To the Editor

I do not think the current drive for cast-off clothing for the children of European countries is getting as much publicity as it deserves. I took a bundie to town one day and no one I asked even knew where it should be delivered. It should be pointed out that a contribution to this drive costs us nothing. We are merely asked to give articles that we can no longer use and are lying idle in our closets or attics This drive seems to me much more worthy than the politics and propaganda-ridden drives for old tires, tin cans and aluminum, etc.

Yours truly,

Hugh V. Harris

Route 4, Salem.

Charms & Charm Bracelets Give her one of these charming little pieces of jewelry! Large selection in either gold Open An Account

For Hearts Rt. 3, Box 517

or sterling silver.