Ranch Ramblings By the Rural Reporter

By Lillie Madsen Farm Editor, The Statesman

Agriculture Secretary Clinton Anderson has changed his mind regarding food subsidies and price controls.

The cabinet officer added his voice to that of President Truman last week in asking that congress extend these measures beyond their June 30 expiration date.

Last fall, he had advocated letting the subsidies expire. They have been costing the government more than one and one-half billion dollars a year. As he exhis department had "under esti- He disclosed that for one of the mated the tremendous demand for major vegetables, snap bean food and the great buying power price control on the 1946 page in the hands of workers and re- is being suspended and the cre turning veterans."

West Salem Man Gets University Training In Army at Oahu, T. H.

PFC Robert E. Brown of 1545 Franklin st., West Salem, is now attending the army university center, Oahu. He is taking courses in newswriting, typing, and English composition. The army university center, Oahu, is located at scenic Schofield barracks in a remodeled quadrangle that formerly housed many Pacific infantry regiments. The school is fashioned after the army universities in England and France and courses are offered at a college level.

To be eligible for attendance at the university, students must have a high school education and offer reasonable assurance that they will not be separated from the service before the end of the term. Each school semester lasts four weeks and students are allowed to select two of the university's eighty-five subject curriculum.

There are more than 1000 students attending the Pacific university, some coming from areas as far distant as Iwo Jima. Students are enrolled on a basis of quotas published by Middle Pacific headquarters.
