Books Asked For Russia

English books for Russia to replace those destroyed during the war will be collected in Salem during the next two weeks by the Salem branch of the AAUW. This is a national project, sponsored by the American society for Russian Relief, Inc.

The collection depot is at the Salem public library where book plates, which may be inscribed with the donor's name are available.
 English and American books in good condition and by standard authors are desired. Suggested authors welcomed are Scott, Shakespeare, Dickens, Milton, Hardy, Emerson, Hawthorne, Whitman, Melville, Longfellow, Stevenson, Sinclair, Wells, Bret Hart and Jack London.
 Translations, wild west, juveniles, encyclopedias or text books are not desired. Lloyd Hockett, local chairman, states. English is now taught in elementary schools in the large cities in Russia and waiting lists at libraries for English books are from six to eight months long.
