

Flier Located, Stricken With Cold Exposure

SEATTLE, Feb. 14.—(AP)—Wayman N. Todd of Abilene, Tex., 24-year-old navy student pilot, was found today by a logging crew 12 miles from the town of Vail, Wash., alive but suffering from cold and exposure after spending five freezing nights in the hills. Todd took off in a rented aircraft on a flight to Portland, Ore., Saturday morning and failed to reach his destination. The loggers who found him said he was just 400 feet from a cabin, well stocked with food and fuel but masked by trees.

They said his plane also was located and that it had crashed against the snowy side of a peak. Todd was unable to move or talk, they said. He was taken to McChord field, near Tacoma, Wash., and was to be flown tonight to his home base, the San Point naval air station here.

Ship Sails Sans Cargo Due to Labor Dispute

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 14.—(AP)—The Amantillo Victory sailed last night without taking on cargo here, after being idle since Jan. 23 because of a longshore-operator dispute.

The Boston Victory, idle in the same dispute starting over the number of checkers to be employed, is still here. Both are American-Hawaiian Steamship company vessels.
