Church School Draws Record Enrollment

Enrollment of 105 students in the current weekly classes for Salem church school workers is a record high enrollment in the local project, it was reported to the Salem Ministerial association at its monthly meeting Tuesday morning in First Presbyterian church.

The association voted to fill two posts left vacant by men leaving Salem. The Rev. Robert W. Coulter of First Nazarene church was elected to succeed the Rev. Willard Hall as secretary, and Prof. Lawrence Riggs of Willamette university was chosen to fill out the term of Harold Davis as a director in the public school bible work project.

Ministers at the meeting heard a talk by Capt. Walter Lansing of the state police, who discussed ways the church may assist in law enforcement.

The group voted to sponsor Holy Week union services in a downtown location, probably a theater, instead of in a centrally located church as has been the custom. Noonday services, 12:15 to 12:45, Monday through Thursday and three-hour Good Friday service beginning at noon, were decided.

Women Active In Nip Politics

TOKYO, Feb. 19.—Premier Kijuro Shidehara said today there was no telling just how democratic next month's elections might be, but he remarked that Japan's newly emancipated women were "becoming quite active in political affairs."

The March 21 balloting, Japan's first national election since the war, will also be the first in which women may exercise their recently acquired right to vote.

Shidehara predicted the feminine influence would be good, "because they stand for peace and stability."
