YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

WHAT are "abnormal" children? They are not mentally deficient, but merely those poor little mites whose emotions and natural impulses have gone off at a tangent for some reason or other.

That many of them, indeed most of them, attain a great degree of normalcy when they reach maturity, when their judgment develops, shows that treatment in their early days is largely responsible for their condition.

Everyone in the world is more or less abnormal. Few of us are rounded out perfectly. And it is a fact that if we had all had perfect understanding in early childhood of our particular needs we would be less abnormal than we are, if at all.

Found Him Intelligent One time when I was teaching there was a little boy in a room near mine. His name had gone over the building as being queer, impossible, vicious. I picked up a paper a year or so ago and read that he had graduated from one of our outstanding schools of technology and was going to take up aviation.

To go back a dozen or so years finds me in the room where the small outlaws sat in a special small chair six feet removed from the rest of the class. The regular teacher was ill and I had given up my own room to take charge of hers, as the substitute could not handle it with that disturbing element inside.

I found the boy in my room and I went over. I took Daniel out of his chair and gave him an empty seat in the back of the room, not under my nose. I was there two days and nothing happened. He was normal as far as I could see in every respect. He was smart and quick, but seemed to live in a detached world; he had a dejected circle around himself, a dejected circle that I found out that he was living in a world alone, a world into which he had voluntarily withdrawn.

That he spat on the other children, pulled their hair, snatched their things, and did even more outlandish things I had heard and knew to be true. Yet he gave no trouble, and at the end of two days I talked to him without making it conspicuous or drawing down serious attention on his already notorious young head. I found him as normal as any child I ever had talked to.

Conflicting Treatment Yet his reputation followed him through school as an "abnormal" child. One day I met his mother. She had been in to talk with the principal about Daniel. There had been more trouble and the poor woman was there again. She was well dressed, quiet person and seemed intelligent, but her face had the distressed lines of the neurotic. Nerves written all over her.

She explained that they had done everything they could, that his father had beaten him every time a complaint came in, and so on. "He has a terrible temper," she said. I decided then and there why this little boy was "abnormal." His parents knew no more about his make-up and training than they knew about Eskimo huskies. His behavior was a result of two emotional extremists at home. And he was an only child who got it all.

Welfare League's Charity Work Varied

WELFARE LEAGUE members held a called meeting Friday at which time the group completed its plans for charity work during the Christmas season.

The League is to assist six needy families in the county, and possibly eight or a dozen, with Christmas baskets of food and necessities.

Saturday, a corps from the membership assisted at the clinic held at the Public Health association office.

On Tuesday, members from the League will assist the Red Cross in bringing bundles to be distributed for Christmas. On Friday members helped at the Red Cross office in tying up bundles of toys for poor children.

Each day through the Christmas season, members are assisting the Red Cross in collecting articles and in supplying transportation for other errands at the office.

The next regular meeting of the League is to come on Friday, January 2.

TODAY'S RECIPE

By SISTER MARY

By SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer HOMEMADE noodles are a valuable addition to the emergency shelf. So when making a batch make a big one and store the surplus in boxes lined with waxed paper.

Noodle soup makes an excellent winter luncheon dish. Or noodles cut in tiny straw-like lengths add much to the cup of dinner consommé or bouillon. Noodles used in the clear dinner soup should be boiled in salted water before adding to the meat stock.

This same noodle paste is also used in dumpling sort of fashion that is rather unusual and quite attractive. Fried noodles can take the place of a starchy vegetable.

A platter of fried noodles garnished with halves of hard cooked eggs and served with a smooth cream sauce is delicious and nourishing and can be quickly and easily prepared for an emergency supper or luncheon.

One egg will make enough noodles to serve four persons with a generous amount of noodle soup. The following rule makes an extra amount for keeping.

Noodles Three eggs, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 2 1/2 cups flour (about). Beat eggs slightly. Add salt and enough flour to make very stiff dough. Knead well on a lightly floured rolling board. Divide into six parts and roll each as thin as possible. Cover with a clean towel and let stand for half an hour. Roll each sheet separately, like a jelly roll, and cut in very thin slices. Shake out slices and toss lightly on board to dry. When thoroughly dry store in covered jars or boxes for future use. When needed, cook 20 minutes in boiling beef broth or salted water.

Noodle Balls Prepare noodle paste as usual, using one-third the rule. Roll thin and cut in two-inch squares. Fill with finely chopped, well-seasoned meat bound with an egg. Draw corners together and dampen edges with a little cold water. Press firmly. Drop in boiling salted water or meat broth and boil 15 minutes. Serve on a platter and garnish with parsley. The meat from the soupbone can be used in these little balls in a most attractive manner. Carefully trim off fat and gristle and chop meat very fine. Season well with salt, pepper and a bit of minced onion. Add one raw, unbeaten egg and mix well. Add milk if necessary to make moist enough to stick together.

Fried Noodles Drop noodle ribbons into boiling salted water and boil ten minutes. Drain. Melt three tablespoons butter in frying pan and add one cup soft coarse bread crumbs. Stir well to coat crumbs with butter and let brown slightly. Add noodles and cook ten minutes, stirring to prevent burning. Serve very hot.

Two cups noodles should be boiled in about 2 1/2 quarts of water to which 1 tablespoon salt has been added.

Daily Menu BREAKFAST—Oranges, cereal, cream, corn beef hash, corn bread, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON—Fried noodles in cream sauce with hard cooked eggs, rye bread, hearts of celery, apple sauce, ginger cookies, milk, tea. DINNER—Salisbury steak, mashed potatoes, creamed onions, entire salad with French dressing, whole wheat rolls, cranberry and prune pie, milk, coffee.

Holiday Parties At Cottage Grove Numerous

COTTAGE GROVE, Dec. 20.—(Special)—Numerous Christmas parties and club affairs formed the social calendar for the week and many Yuletide affairs are planned for the holiday season.

Tuesday evening, Dec. 23, the Masonic lodge and Royal Arch chapter will install officers for ensuing year and members of the Eastern Star are invited to be present. Refreshments will be served.

Friday evening Cottage Grove chapter, No. 4, O. E. S., will hold their installation of officers at their regular meeting.

Monday evening the Joker club will have a no-hostess dinner at the Colonial after which the group will enjoy their annual Christmas tree and exchange of gifts at the home of Mrs. C. E. Frost.

Utopia Club Meets The Utopia club met with Mrs. S.

L. Mackin Thursday afternoon for their annual Christmas party at which exchange of gifts was a feature. Yuletide greenery about the rooms was attractive. Following a social period refreshments were served.

ye christmas feasts Underwood and Elliott's have the most convenient service! Remember, we told you at Thanksgiving time how they would take your turkey or pick one out for you, stuff it, roast it, and deliver it to your door? Lots of clever ladies availed themselves of that service, both for their home dinners and for their club affairs. Now they're doing it again for Christmas. They'll stuff and roast your turkey, goose, duck, or what have you for $1. If you prepare the bird yourself, they'll bake and deliver it for 75c. All this up till Wednesday noon, and you reheat it Thursday if you want it then. For extras, mince, pumpkin, and cranberry pies, and real English plum puddings. And if you want a Christmas gift, have about one of those Silch outfits, with a pound of extra fine steel cut ground Silch coffee to go with it.

jack; nell's bells —! The dear old uncle and his family just telegraphed they'll be with us for Christmas, Sunday! Louise, what'll we do? What'll we do?

Louise: Well, Jack, you know your relatives think they can descend on us en masse at any time! Of course, there isn't a bite to eat in the house, and they'll expect turkey for dinner. Jack: Tell you what we'll do, old sweet! We'll just load the way down to the Royal Cafe. I happen to know they are having turkey, goose, and chicken for Sunday, so they can all take their pick. How does that sound?

Louise: Oh, Jack, you darling! They'll love it. And I just love the Royal Cafe anyway. It's so beautiful, and you always get wonderful service. Let's do it!

get that boy A little violin for Christmas. I saw them at M. S. Barker's Music Shop—complete outfits—for $6.50. Nothing better for a small child just beginning, or too small to handle a big instrument. The small violin is so light and so easy for them to play that they do not become discouraged, or fatigued.

Mr. Barker has a whole shopful of fine instruments of all kinds. He took half an hour this morning to show me a few. Some are new and some have been used or traded in on more expensive ones as the players advance in technique. They're bargain! I saw one slide trombone for $5.50, and very fine ones for $10 and $25. And ukuleles, new ones, for $1.95, some enameled in gay colors. You know where it is? 512 Willamette.

essence of oregon If you have friends and relatives who live in less favored lands, another splendid idea for a gift is the Oregon box that the Eugene Fruit Growers Association puts out and distributes to most Eugene grocers at this time of year. I went through the plant the other day to see them making these Oregon boxes, and to sample the candied apples and lovely chocolate candies filled with Oregon fruits. Variety! I could hardly believe that our own outlying suburbs are the source of all these wonderful things. I saw extra-size apple boxes, wrapped in Xmas paper, and filled with enough assorted fruits and nuts to keep a hungry family all winter! And, at the other extreme, dainty little tins of candied cherries and peaches and apples and grapes and prunes! In the tins are exquisite in themselves. Then, there's a woven grass work-basket filled with bonbons—but see them!

deck the hall with Christmas holly! For holly is the very spirit and essence of Christmas. Just seeing it around the home, with its jolly wreaths of it garlanding the windows, is enough to make a holiday, without the big dinner and the Christmas tree and the presents and the carols and—and—everything! Margarette Campbell, 444 E. Broadway, get your Fox McDonald pass at The Register-Guard office. Mary Ann knows where you can get the real stuff—English holly, and lots of it. The University Florists have it, and they also have the most gorgeous, gorgeous poinsettias! And cyclamens, with a whole forest of dazzling blooms, and azaleas, at their prime for the holidays, and begonias, great big tropical-looking beauties!

old english prints Have you ever seen old English tapestries, and old prints, gaily colored, showing jolly fat guinea's presiding at groaning boards with a host of apple-cheeked family round about, and the fire roaring up the great chimney, and the great hunting dog lying on the rug in front of it?

Well, a walk through the Producers Public Market these days just before Christmas, gives you just the same sort of feeling. The Market is just chock full of Christmas spirit! Christmas trees and turkeys and flowers and Oregon grape and Christmas trees and turkeys and geese and ducks and chickens and pumpkins and cranberries and home-made candies and cakes and pies and older and thicker cream and cheese and apples and pomegranates and—stop! We'll all famish before dinner!
