TODAY'S RECIPES By SISTER MARY

LET'S use vegetables and more vegetables this summer! Their vitamin and mineral content and lack of protein calories make them ideal for summer meals.

While a balanced diet is always necessary, the energy-producing foods are needed in lesser ratio during the summer months than during cold weather, when fuel is needed to keep the body warm.

Few vegetables are of high caloric value. The old phrase, "cool as a cucumber" is revealing in that it admits this vegetable contains no heat-producing calories. The large amount of water present in all vegetables makes even those known as "starchy" low in calories compared with cereal foods.

Sauces Add Nourishment However, remember that to make a vegetable serve may add many calories. Butter immediately adds fat calories. Sauces contribute protein, fat and carbohydrate calories. A cup of medium white sauce contains about 120 calories of protein, fat and carbohydrate. One tablespoon butter furnishes 100 calories of fat, so the richer the sauce the more calories.

Some knowledge of the composition of vegetables is a help in planning and serving vegetable meals. Peas, corn and lima beans provide some protein calories themselves that are worth considering. Tomatoes and spinach, although their proportion of protein calories is good. The summer vegetables contain little of the woody fiber known as cellulose which has no food value. This shows that vegetable supplemented with milk provide a wholesome and adequate diet if they are used in abundance and variety. It also makes it possible to build menus around one main vegetable dish to furnish interesting meals at moderate cost.

Tomorrow's Menu BREAKFAST: Cantaloupe, broiled Canadian bacon, creamed potatoes, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Macaroni, Creole, fresh fruit salad in banana boats, iced cream. DINNER: Vegetable plate of baked lima beans, chopped spinach on toast, baked mince pie, shredded savory carrots, sautéed cucumbers with brown sauce, cream brulee, milk, coffee.

Some Can Be Baked Most of the summer vegetables are cooked in water, using as little as possible to prevent burning. Baking is an excellent method for many vegetables. Scouting is another method of cooking that makes for variety.

EGGPLANT, summer squash, tomatoes and cucumbers are delicious sautéed in butter on top of the stove. This is a quick way to cook them. These vegetables also are good baked in a covered baking dish or casserole in the oven.

Peas, carrots, beans, spinach, in fact all vegetables can be baked to good advantage. Contrast in color and texture as well as method of cooking and manner of serving prevents monotony in vegetable meals and should be carefully worked out when planning menus.

DINNER IS HELD CRESWELL, Aug. 21.—(Special)—A group of young people surprised Janealice Everson at her home Tuesday evening in honor of her birthday anniversary. An evening of games was enjoyed by all, followed by refreshments.

Those present were Faler Henriksen, Kathryn Treanor, Martha Warner, Alberta Gillett, Mary Jane Bibby, Betty Wallace, Helen Lassiter, Gladys Fisher, Carol Fisher, LeRoy Coleman, Robert Smith, George Gerthner, Avalo Gerthner, Earl Groubeck, Fern Groubeck, Wayne Petty, John Weber and the honor guest.

YOUR CHILDREN By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

INTERIOR decorators got very busy on the nursery for a while, but someone else stepped in and on the mother goose "chaure saurik" insisting that the eternal parade of rabbits and pigs and storks in grotesque array was disconcerting to the small observer who was trying to grab off some sleep.

I don't know, I think these things are cute and we're getting awfully touchy about babies. Goodness knows the babies of the nineties who had to look at Nottingham lace curtains and lambricquins and tassels on everything, to say nothing of violently upholstered chairs and Brussels carpets that resembled flower gardens in bad taste—those babies slept the sleep of the just.

Advantages in Plainness But just the same it may soothe the mother who hasn't time nor money for all the modern nursery doodads in decoration to know that better taste still leaves them out. I'm pretty plain in my own taste so I know I'd rather not have to do a mental hurdle every time I looked at

Calendar

Friday 7 p. m.—Picnic for Gitchell camp of Royal Neighbors of America, in park back of butte. Saturday Over-night trip of Twees club for business girls at Swimmers' Delight.

Puss-in-Boots take a flying leap over a fence every four feet on the wall-paper, or sympathize with Humpty Dumpty's tragic expression as he balances at an angle of 45 degrees on his wall-on-the-wall.

I don't like a restless room and I'll shake the hand of any baby who doesn't like one either. Of course when he is a bit older a nice picture here and there is different. But have a care—what on earth is the use of having classic prints on his wall. He might like Reynolds' "Strawberry Girl," or Gremze's "Girl's Head" or Gainsborough's "Blue Boy," but why expect to train his appreciation when he is two or three or four with Frank Hals portraits or Michael Angelo's fat Madonnas. Give him something he'll like.

Let Child Be Decorator I saw a boy's room this summer, two boys' room, and their smart mother had had synthetic wall-board placed over the native wall. It was cream colored and plain and those children had it plastered and pined from ceiling to floor with pictures they had saved or cut out. There was real interest in that decoration because it was their own.

Oh, yes, it was a "restless" room, but these youngsters were a little older, their nerves didn't bother them and they slept like dead. As soon as a baby can paste up pictures, I think a blank wall might be a great joy to him.
