

NEW METHODS FOR TEACHING IDEALS GIVEN BY TUTTLE

"For 60 years the schools have been teaching the effects of alcohol and tobacco. The information has been formal and isolated. That is the reason the teaching has had so little influence on conduct and ideals," said Prof. Harold S. Tuttle of the University of Oregon school of education in an address at the luncheon of the convention of the Oregon Congress of Parents and Teachers, Wednesday noon at the Baptist church. His subject was "Juvenile Protection."

"The new program demanded by our modern knowledge of psychology must deliberately cultivate attitudes, interests, tastes, and ideals. We have cultivated patriotism by means of flag drills, songs, and emotional stories and poetry. These methods have proved effective. The same methods are now utilized in health education. Posters, slogans, pictures, dramatization, songs, and stories are used to impress health ideals. Charts and contests and certificates develop health habits," he said.

"The strategy of an effective program of citizenship training must focus around interests. "The vital task of education is to cultivate interests in advance of the knowledge taught. In this way only can knowledge be related to life. "The same method is used to cultivate music appreciation, love of poetry, and enjoyment of art. It is entirely feasible. Interests and attitudes with reference to alcohol, tobacco, and degrading literature can be consciously and deliberately cultivated," he said referring to the health and patriotism methods.

"No agency is in better position to bring about this revolution of methods than the Parents-Teachers association. No unit smaller than the state, however, would be feasible for such a movement. The Oregon State Congress of Parents and Teachers could in a two-year program fundamentally change the treatment of the temperance problem in the schools, and incidentally in the community. "While every precaution must be maintained to enforce the laws already secured and to bring about the passage of further laws for the protection of the child, his final protection depends upon the adequate cultivation of his own tasks and interests."

TRUNK MURDERS STORY

abandoned a belief that Mrs. Judd had an accomplice in the crimes and, after examining the complete history of the case, had concluded that she acted alone. He said the principal evidence toward this end was that in moving the empty trunks she had dragged them. "If she had an assistant, the trunks would have been carried," Andrews concluded. He believed she had plotted the deaths of the two women. Originally, he said, she probably planned to send the bodies in one trunk but, of her own volition, she decided to change her mind, fearing too heavy a load would arouse suspicion.

MAN SUSPECTED

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Out of a maze of conflicting rumors, there grew today conviction in the minds of Phoenix investigators that a man was implicated in the murder of Mrs. James Le Roi and Miss Helene Samuelson, of whose slaying Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd is accused. "At the same time police revealed that a search of Mrs. Judd's apartment had revealed a small quantity of several bottles of wine and a quart of rum. Dr. William C. Judd, the woman's husband, told Los Angeles police that she had used the mild drug to quiet her high-strung nerves. Police Chief George Brisbois was informed. Car is Noted Neighbors of Mrs. Judd declared a car bearing a California license plate number 10-10-10, was seen at Mrs. Judd's home Thursday and Friday, just prior to the time of the killing. Police also were informed that a man accompanied Mrs. Judd to the station Sunday when she checked two trunks to Los Angeles. "Although it was at first believed someone had aided Mrs. Judd in moving a trunk from the apartment of Miss Samuelson and Mrs. Le Roi on Saturday, it later was established that the work was done by Richard M. Swartz, truck driver. Mrs. Judd was in the women's apartment when it arrived, and accounted for the weight of the trunk by saying it was filled with books, he said.

Body Later Removed Police now believe both bodies were first placed in the one trunk, and that Miss Samuelson's body was removed and placed in a smaller steamer trunk owned by Mrs. Judd after being dissected, at Mrs. Judd's residence. A case of surgical instruments was also found in her home, police said. H. L. Grimm, Mrs. Judd's landlord, took the two trunks to Union station Sunday, he said. A series of parties had been held recently in Mrs. Judd's apartment, police learned. Quantities of liquor were consumed. Miss Samuelson and her companion attended, it was learned, and later found among their effects indicated the former could "drink her's straight."

Police had tentatively fixed 10:30 p. m. Friday as the approximate time of the slaying. Miss Peely, a fellow-employee of Mrs. Le Roi at the Grunow sanitarium, called upon the couple about 8 o'clock Friday evening. Mrs. Le Roi at that hour was dressed in pink silk pajamas and Miss Samuelson was in plain white pajamas, she said. The body of Mrs. Le Roi was still garbed in the pink outfit when it was removed from the trunk in which it was sent to Los Angeles.

Sharp Reports Heard An hour later, Mrs. Jennie McGrath, a neighbor, said she heard three sharp reports, but paid little attention to them and went back to sleep. Autopsy surgeons have agreed that the women were shot to death before being beaten about the heads.

TRAGEDY RECALLED PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 21.—(AP)—By a ghastly turn of fate three girls, all young, all pretty, bound close by the ties of friendship, have met violent, tragic deaths within a year. The gruesome slaying of Agnes Le Roi and Helvie Samuelson of Phoenix recalled today that a year ago this month Bath Nella Rinsler, young Portlander, was slain, and that her close friend, disappeared mysteriously from the steamer Princess Louisa while enroute from Wrangell, Alaska, to Portland. Mrs. Le Roi saw Miss Reinhart off on the Princess Louisa when she left Wrangell to sail south. Her disappearance from the boat never was explained.

state police force, Salem, was to be a speaker at the meeting Wednesday afternoon on safety. Up to noon, 145 accredited delegates had registered and many visitors were present for the sessions. Other delegates were to arrive during the afternoon.

Has Great Opportunity

Mrs. William T. Brice, Portland, state president, declared the depression had given the P. T. A. a greater opportunity than ever to show its value in child welfare work. In her report she told of the extensive work the P. T. A. is doing with study groups, 4-H clubs, adolescent groups, child welfare work, parent education courses for the institutions of higher learning, sponsorship of student loan funds, work among children in migratory families in auto camps and such places, classes for foreign born mothers, the work of the P. T. A. in helping to put through the state free textbook bill, the work of the crime commission, the work in defeating bills for the repeal of the state prohibition amendment, and the program ahead to create public opinion for public safety and other work for the 1932 legislature.

Unemployment Listed

Unemployment has made the welfare work a big item for the P. T. A. the past year. Milk and hot lunches for under-nourished children have been provided in larger quantities; shoes and clothing have been given, especially in the industrial sections, under acquisition of the superintendent. Social hygiene classes for mothers have been sponsored, physical and mental clinics have been held in cooperation with doctors, dentists, and nurses; and considerable work has been done in promoting the weekly Bible classes. Thirty-three new associations and five old ones were reassociated during the past year for the P. T. A., Mrs. Brice said.

A plea for greater leadership and organization in rural P. T. A. work was made by A. Walker, a state vice-president, from Grants Pass. Mrs. Armand Perkins, eastern Oregon district, Mrs. C. W. Straley, Klamath Falls; Mrs. William Klester, Portland; Mrs. R. L. Wright, Salem, were other district officers or vice-presidents making reports of their groups during the morning sessions. Tuttle gives Tuttle gives the "Juvenile Protection" was the title of an address given by Prof. Harold S. Tuttle of the University of Oregon school of education at the luncheon meeting of the convention at the First Baptist church.

JOE LILLARD STORY

man's agreement concerning semi-pro baseball was not violated. From authoritative sources it is learned that Lillard was disqualified for having played baseball under the name of Thompson. This is and has always been admitted by Lillard and Dr. Clarence W. Sears, Oregon coach. Lillard's step-father was named Thompson and Joe went by that name during a part of his life. Later, he began to use his real name of Lillard. Another charge against Lillard was that he accepted money for playing basketball. Lillard is definitely able to prove that this is untrue and that the boy who played under Lillard's name was a colored boy who was "washing in" on Joe's reputation as a hoop star.

That the Lillard matter was "railroaded" through the conference committee is generally conceded, and considerable criticism has centered around Butler for his part in the matter. It is claimed that the colored boy can definitely disprove all of Butler's claims, but that he was given no opportunity to speak at his "trial." Prof. Howe has expressed regret at the hasty action of the conference and believes that Lillard may yet be reinstated. The colored star will continue his education at Oregon, and has turned down numerous offers for his appearance in professional prize fights.

TRIPLET FOUND DEAD

M. L. Triplett, who on April 25 of this year was sentenced by Police Judge Bryson of Eugene to serve out a $20 fine for being drunk, was found dead in his bed at Roseburg Tuesday with a bottle of poison and a bottle of moonshine by his bedside. It is presumed that he drank the poison. Triplett served out the entire fine here being in jail 12 1/2 days, according to Captain Elmer Geiger, desk officer at police headquarters. He was employed in a restaurant at Roseburg.

Dr. L. E. Giville will give a talk Thursday at the convention.

FARM DEPRESSION DIRECT CAUSE OF SLUMP AT PRESENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde said today that the present business and industrial condition was the direct result of the agricultural depression of the past 10 years. The secretary was a speaker at the eighth conference of major industries, held at Columbia university. "There is no longer any debate as to the cause of the agricultural collapse," said Secretary Hyde. "There are many contributory causes, but the one cause which stands out above all is overproduction. One year of over-production is not in itself fatal but ten years is more than any industry can stand." The principal factor in agricultural over-production is the un-economic use of land, Secretary Hyde said.

"The present policy of unplanned agriculture must be replaced by a policy of scientific utilization of our land, providing for its protection against erosion and limiting our agricultural plant to such size as will supply our national needs without the blight of overproduction," he said. "What agriculture now needs is not more wheat lands but more forests, more game reserves, more airports, more and larger golf courses, and more city farmers with larger estates and smaller production.

BUDGET TACKLED BY COUNTY GROUP

The preliminary meeting of the Lane county budget committee was held Wednesday in the county court room of the Lane county court house, starting at 10 a. m. and continuing through the afternoon. No definite action was taken at the meeting which had as its prime purpose the appointing of the members of the committee to study the county budget for 1932. The 1932 budget as tentatively outlined is expected to be about the size of the 1931 budget of $1,194,801.22, the bulk of the budget being cared for by means ascertained by law or voted for by the people.

There is little hope of materially cutting the budget, Judge C. F. Barnard told the committee as it considered State taxes paid by the county will be lower but moneys needed by the county will be greater because of the shift of the burden from the state to the county, he said. Indications at the Wednesday meeting were that an effort would be made to effect a saving in the salaries paid county employees. A decision will not be made, however, until the committee undertakes the actual work of paring down the budget. Under budgets presented by the various departments, county salaries for 1932 would total $820,000.

Items tentatively listed under the general fund, the road fund, market road fund and the school fund for 1932 reach a total of $961,103.52, most of which the county must appropriate because of statute requirements or because it has been voted by the people. This total is the maximum which can be raised for these funds without exceeding the six per cent limitation.

Debate on the status of the county fair appropriation was postponed by the budget committee until after meetings to be held by the fair board and county groups concerned with effecting a change in the conduct of the fair. Copies of the majority and minority reports submitted by the county investigating or finance committee investigating the fair were provided each member of the budget committee.
