TODAY'S RECIPES By SISTER MARY

PERHAPS you belong to a family that likes to eat dinner on the porch or in the garden during the hot months of summer. The man or woman who has spent the day in an office, or the woman who has spent a good share of her day in the kitchen, or anyone who has been indoors all day, will find infinite pleasure in meals served in the fresh air.

The first consideration in planning meals for serving away from the family dining room is to reduce the number of dishes to a minimum. A one-dish combination of some sort with a salad and dessert simplifies serving as well as dish-washing. Very often the salad can be put on the table in an attractive salad bowl for each member to help himself "right on his plate." If you use compartment plates, the salad plate is quite unnecessary.

Casserole dishes combining meat and vegetables, fish, chowders and soups are excellent. There should be a main dish for dinners "a la fresco." These dishes keep hot longer than steaks and chops and do away with the necessity of serving extra vegetable dishes.

Veal and vegetable pie is made with seasonable vegetables and also takes care of the bread-stuff usually included in family dinner menus. This dish served with a tomato salad and a simple dessert made with milk, such as floating island, offers a well-balanced meal that is appetizing and easily prepared.

Bread and butter sometimes presents a problem in porch and garden meals if served separately. Bread and butter sandwiches or hot buttered rolls will solve the problem. A satisfactory solution to this because they combine two foods in one.

One pound lean veal, 1 cup tiny cooked onions, 1 cup diced cooked carrots, 1 cup cooked green peas, 2 cups cooked potato marbles, 2 teaspoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper, 1-1/4 cups milk, 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1-2 teaspoon salt, milk.

Choose veal from small part of leg since it is usually cheaper and the meat must be cut in small pieces and cut into cubes. Boil in water and simmer until tender but not broken. Add salt and let cool in stock, over night if convenient. Remove fat and bone from meat, making neat pieces for serving.

Arrange meat in a buttered casserole. Remove fat from stock and strain through cheesecloth. There should be about 2 cups of stock. The liquid in which vegetables, except the onions, were cooked can also be used. Melt butter, stir in flour and when mixture bubbles, add stock, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and season with salt and pepper. Add prepared vegetables to meat in casserole and pour over sauce. Sprinkle with flour, salt and baking powder. Rub in shortening, and cut in milk with a knife. Use enough milk to make a soft dough.

Roll on a floured rolling-board and cut with a small biscuit cutter. Cover top of mixture in casserole with biscuits and bake in a hot oven until biscuits are thoroughly baked and brown on top. Allow about thirty-five minutes for baking the biscuits because the sauce, meat and vegetables retard the baking. Serve from baking dish.

TOMORROW'S MENU
BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal cooked with raisins, cream, crisp toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Stuffed eggs with hot greens, rice bread and peanut butter sandwiches, cherry shortcake, milk, tea.
DINNER: Beef loaf with browned peas, parsley, potatoes, creamed cauliflower, radishes and green onions, pine apple tapioca, milk, coffee.

Pythian Order Has Big Picnic Sunday

About 300 persons attended the district picnic for the Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters held Sunday at the Benton-Lane auto park. There were delegations from Eugene, Corvallis, Albany, Brownsville and other points in the district.

OUR CHILDREN By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

ROSE had a new stepmother. Her father had said she must be very, very kind to the new mama. She couldn't remember the old one, only "Aunt Minnie," who had now gone away. She missed Aunt Minnie but she didn't care much. Aunt Minnie's face was always worried and gray and all she could talk about was order—when she talked at all.

The little girl acted as hostess to the new guest. She was very polite and tried to make conversation.

"I'll show you my doll clothes, but they aren't worth much. I made them."

The pretty new mama took them in her hand and held them up one at a time. "What nice dress this is! What a very good-looking shawl! And did you fix this hat? They are lovely."

"Oh," deprecating Rose, "they are not worth much. I can't do things right."

"I see a wonderful talent here, dear. I like your sewing."

Then Rose showed her little garden where a few shoots were struggling out of the ground for air. "These are my flowers," she explained, "but they are not worth much. I don't know much about gardening."

"Well—it looks good to me. Why, I know people who would be as proud as Punch to be able to get flowers out of the ground. I think you are a very good gardener indeed!"

Next the little girl showed her new mother her paint box. "I tried to copy the pictures," she said, "but I guess I smudged everything. They're not worth much."

All over the house she dragged out her failures, according to her, for the sake of politeness. But nothing was any good. "She didn't know how to do anything!" Apology after apology.

And the new girl saw where her own work lay.

One day Rose walked into her room. There, lying on the floor, was her little bed, beautifully laundered. The awkward little slips, the crookedly knitted sweaters, the loosely seamed dresses all looking like posies with the different shadings of rose and blue and green. Quick-dye clothes had disguised mistakes.

"Are these really the things I made?" She rushed excitedly down to the kitchen, holding them in her hands. "I can't believe they are mine."

"Yes, you made them, dear. Aren't you a smart little girl? You see, they are really quite worth while."

Another day Rose came in and found two nasturtiums and a pink on the dining room table with many leaves added to build up a bouquet.

"Aunt Minnie always used the finest flowers on the table," she explained, secretly pleased. "Mine were never enough to count."

"Oh, yes they are. I never like a lot of flowers together. Just these are my favorites. Next year you can have a big patch. You grow the things I like."

Six of her "paintings" one day appeared in paste-potout frames on her wall. They looked really quite well strung in a row above her mantle.

Her confidence gradually returned. She was getting over her complex. The god of "order" had given way to the deity of "encouragement."

"Poor child," Aunt Minnie was saying, far away, "to have a step-mother!"
