reached down for bricks piled through the block.

Police Superintendent Glassford ran toward the center of the camp. The men began to close in. I was standing on a pile of scrap iron when the howling crowd started a barrage of bricks and chunks of concrete. Glassford dodged, but some hit him. I saw a policeman struck in the temple with a jagged block of concrete. He keeled over and was taken away.

Police lines strengthened and the brick tossing stopped. Veterans taunted the police, but Glassford's coolness dissipated their only mood.

Waters and Glassford went into conference. Waters admitted he had lost control of his men. He looked frightened. Glassford warned him the situation was getting serious.

Shooting Is Started

Suddenly pistol shots cracked in the throng. Then more. Then an ominous silence. Then another volley. They dragged out several ragged men. One was dead. He was William J. Hushka, Chicago bonus marcher. They dumped his body in a patrol wagon. Another clutched at his throat. His face looked greenish.

The policeman who fired the first shot—the fatal one—walked out battleless, coatless and limping. Blood was on his shirt.

I talked with a wild-eyed veteran who said he witnessed the killing.

"Our boy just pushed the cop a little," he jabbered. "Then the bull whacked him with his stick, knocked him back about five feet and fired punk-plunk right into his gut."

Then came word that President Hoover had called troops to break up the veterans' army.

"Let's see the tin soldiers," the ragged men jeered. Then another volley. Then another volley. They dragged out several ragged men. One was dead. He was William J. Hushka, Chicago bonus marcher. They dumped his body in a patrol wagon. Another clutched at his throat. His face looked greenish.

Within half an hour their laughter changed to tears. Infantrymen pushed them back from the sidewalks. The troops donned gas masks and showers of tear gas bombs in and around the old buildings. Red-eyed and crying, some nearly overcome, the veterans retreated hastily.

The "left wing" bonus marchers who tried twice to picket the White House left their billets before the troops arrived. Their empty shacks were put to the torch.

Anacostia Comes Next

Five thousand men, women and children encamped on the river flats at Anacostia three miles away, heard the troops were coming.

"They just can't come down here at night and terrorize our women and babies," Edward P. Atwell, camp commander, said. The camp was in panic. Children cried in several tents.

The cavalry arrived at 10 p. m. Atwell carried his shirt forward as a truce flag. He was given another hour to clear the camp.

Troops fired a shack on the outskirts of the camp. Soon a dozen fires started, set by the retreating veterans themselves.

CURTIS ARRIVES

LOS ANGELES, July 28.—(AP)—Vice-President Charles Curtis arrived here today for the opening of the Olympic games tomorrow.

A delegation headed by Mayor John C. Porter, William May Garland, head of the Olympic organization committee, and Louis B. Mayer, film executive and republican leader, welcomed him.

Mr. Curtis will present Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic flier, with the distinguished flying cross today.

Telling a crowd of 2,000 gathered at the railroad depot to welcome him that President Hoover, despite an ardent wish to come to the games, was confined in Washington by press-delivered a message from the president, reading:

"Will you please extend my cordial greetings to all those gathered at the Los Angeles for the opening of the Olympic games and also my hearty welcome to our visitors from abroad. I deeply regret that I am unable to be present for I had looked forward with eagerness to the pleasure of seeing those wonderful sports and also to visiting my home state."

"In the years since the Olympics were held in America for the first time at St. Louis, they have grown steadily in the interest of all the nations, until today they occupy at least as great a significance in our world as the original Olympic games occupied in the ancient world when Greece was at the height of its glory. They have become a positive force for international acquaintance and understanding and good will.

"I wish to teach that the hardest competition may be accompanied by good humor and that rivalry may be expressed with good sportsmanship. I warmly hope that the games may be in every way successful. Especially do I send my encouragement and best wishes to our American athletes."

They stared poyoped at five tanks, then laughed.

Within half an hour their laughter changed to tears. Infantrymen pushed them back from the sidewalks. The troops donned gas masks and showers of tear gas bombs in and around the old buildings. Red-eyed and crying, some nearly overcome, the veterans retreated hastily.

The "left wing" bonus marchers who tried twice to picket the White House left their billets before the troops arrived. Their empty shacks were put to the torch.

usually contagious. It may be that after the demonstration of yesterday cooler heads will prevail, but it is all too likely that the disease will spread its violence. In that event, as in yesterday's instance, reason will depart; passion will masquerade as intelligence and vengeance as conviction.

Birmingham Age-Herald—"The bloody collision between veterans and police in Washington is surprising only because it has been so long delayed."

Philadelphia Inquirer—"... The disorders of yesterday are serious, and the government has acted properly in taking them in hand at once. ... It would be futile to place the whole blame on this straggling army of homeless and hungry men. The agitators who have misled them, the politicians who have yielded to impossible demands for fear of the consequences to themselves—these are much more to blame."

Columbus (Ohio) Evening Dispatch—"... Only Moscow will vie with the event with comparison over its president Hoover was entirely within his right."

Boston Evening Globe—"Come what may, the national government must maintain its authority over its own property and in its own capital."

Boston Herald—"The only criticism, if there is any that lies against the president is that he did not act sooner."

The Seattle Times—"After congress adjourned whatever objective the veterans might have had in their march to Washington, vanished. Most of them recognized that fact and left the national capital. Those who remained... were a menace to health and sanitation and served no purpose other than to offer vain hopes to the radical groups that are readying a plot against the American people and their government."

New York World-Telegram—"Basically the blame rests with vote-seeking politicians, who, in the beginning encouraged the men to come to Washington on a mission those politicians knew was doomed to failure. ... Finally the government made the serious mistake of calling out federal troops. That has made a dangerous situation more dangerous."

OREGON COMMENT

Astoria Astorian-Budget—"Were these angry rioters not veterans of the World war, there would be little sympathy for them. As it is, the public judgment is tempered with consideration. Even so, it is unthinkable that the government would yield to mob rule. When such things happen, government disintegrates, and perhaps this is just what the radical leaders of the B. E. F. seek to accomplish."

Cook Bay Times—"While the bonus marchers have our profoundest sympathy outright defiance of federal authority cannot be tolerated, especially as it has been provoked by super-politicians and communists."

Salem Capitol-Journal—"The bonus expeditionary force constitutes a distressing chapter in American history—not only its tragic finale, but its assembly. Its inspiration was political demagogues that misled stranded veterans into attempted coercion of the government for federal largess by mass pressure—a most undemocratic proceeding. Had it succeeded, it would have established a precedent that would eventually spell the overthrow of the government. While the vast majority conducted themselves admirably, it is impossible to gather such a heterogeneous force without including radicals and revolutionists. The situation was made to order for communists. ... the Washington police force handled the dynamic issue very tactfully until their orders were openly flouted."

Bend Bulletin—"It is too much to charge the whole bonus army now in Washington with immediate responsibility for the beginning of yesterday's conflict but all its members are responsible for the existing situation. In taking steps to preserve law and order against the actions of what was rapidly degenerating into a mob, the police were doing the only uncontrolled mob President Hoover could support."

MAN IS FINED

E. B. Rochell, charged with selling clams and crabs without a license, was fined $100 and had the fine suspended in justice court Friday. He was required to buy a license to dig and retail clams.

OATS ARE STOLEN

Theft of 15 sacks of oats, some tools and harness from a grain field on the Goodman ranch near Coburg was reported to state police Friday. Investigation failed to provide any clues other than tracks showing that the material had been taken out with a car.
