

UPTURN IN HIDES INDICATES TREND OF COMMODITY RUN

BY VICTOR EUBANK

(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Special)—The first of the commodities to show signs of recovery from low price levels, have added several cents to their value per pound.

Hides are claimed by some experts to be among the best barometers of economic conditions. From the lowest level since 1892, or around 3-4 cents a pound last June, packer hides have advanced to about 7 cents a pound today. It is said offerings are diminishing as the demand grows.

Hides prices reached their all-time peak at about 90 cents a pound right after the war. This was abnormal. They dropped to 7 cents a pound in 1921, recovered to between 12 and 18 cents by 1927 and, in 1928, they preceded the bull market by attaining a rate of 25 cents a pound. Hides began to sink, however, just before the bull market attained its full bloom. They were among the first of the commodities to go down. Also they were among the first commodities to show signs of emerging from the recent depression depths.

Unlike other commodities throughout the depression hides have never been an over-supply of hides. But, as prices dropped, cattle began to grow scarce. People ate less meat than usual because of economic conditions, bought fewer pairs of new shoes and tanners depleted their stocks to such an extent they were not ready for the firming demand that came from manufacturers.

"It was inevitable that hide prices should advance," said a man at the New York hide exchange. "The first signs of improvement really came from abroad and soon prices in England were double those in this country."

ANTI-DUMPING STORY

onal, said Chambers. It is probable that the identification amendment will be included, but the constitutionality of the first amendment is questioned.

State Eyes Move The entire state is watching the Eugene movement with interest, says Chambers. Max Gehlar, head of the state department of agriculture, says that the Eugene ordinance will probably be adopted in other cities in Oregon as a protection for Oregon products.

If the ordinance passes it will probably not effect retail prices for fruit and vegetables, says Chambers. He points out that tons of outside produce is trucked here every month, most of it picked up as cull stuff in California or Washington. An instance pointed out was the arrival recently of a 10-ton truck from San Diego with lettuce, cauliflowers and peas. The produce being perishable, the trucker unloaded it at 10 cents a crate when he found he could not sell it at the regular rates charged. Some was given away.

The ordinance was drawn up by City Attorney Calkins at the request of the agricultural committee headed by Chambers and made up of Frank Metzger, Elmo Chase, William James and Lee Turner.

Moody, John Maughn, D. F. Ray, Elmo B. Chase, Leo Stump, B. R. Posey, O. J. Andrews, J. F. Metzger.

"The ordinance, if passed, should immediately improve conditions in this farming district," says Chambers. "Eugene consumes close to a million dollars in fruits and vegetables per year. If the ordinance will save only a percentage of this market for Lane county growers, its effect can readily be understood.

"Potatoes, fruit and vegetables of all kinds are being shipped in by itinerant truckers to this city. Most of the produce is of the type not handled by legitimate agencies, but it competes with the produce raised here in Lane county.

"The new ordinance will not prevent the shipping in of outside produce, but it will confine that shipping to established and responsible agencies. A Lane county grower will not bring in a truck load of lettuce to the Eugene market, for instance, and find that a truckload of second grade lettuce from California has preceded him at unreasonably low prices."

Heffron is making a bid for the vote in his campaign against James W. Mott, republican, and Harvey Starkweather, democrat. He will gather dry forces of the district to fight the initiative attempt to repeal the state bond-dry law.

The prohibition question will be one of the major issues in the campaign. Not many people vote for their man on this issue alone, although many "wets" are expected to lean toward Roosevelt, as the democratic party leaders here declare they have not lost any support through the stand of the party for repeal. Herbert Hoover's acceptance speech has had a favorable reaction here and has added confidence to republican ranks.

Democratic women of the county are planning an active campaign. Their first rally will be held August 31 at 8 p. m. at the courthouse, when J. K. Carson of Portland, member of the platform committee at the national convention, will speak at a meeting planned by the women.

The Young Republicans organization will start work a. u. A campaign to obtain a large registration for the election will be started and Senator Frederick Steiwer will be brought here to speak, according to Robert M. Fischer, Jr., president.

Socialists are looking around for a candidate for state representative to succeed G. W. Thompson, who refused the nomination. Wallace Campbell of Eugene, who is now in California campaigning for a congressional candidate of the socialist party, may be the choice. Lee Giddings of Harrisburg has announced that he will accept the party's nomination for congress.

FAMILIES SEEK CABINS COLUMBUS, O.—(UP)—Hundreds of families are returning to abandoned homes and log cabins in the hills of southeastern Ohio, where they may at least raise enough food to live, a survey recently conducted by J. H. Sittler, Ohio State University rural economist, showed. Fifty-four per cent of the abandoned cabins are now occupied.

FLOUR HAS DUAL USE LA FOLLETTE, Tenn.—(UP)—When distribution of flour started here to unemployed coal miners, officials noted that the miners were asking for corn meal instead. One official checked up, discovered that miners were providing half the meal for their families, using the rest for making corn whisky.

STILL PLENTY OF TAXIS COLUMBUS, O.—(UP)—Although taxicabs have decreased in number here during the past five years, there is still a cab for every 670 persons, which compares at least favorably, if not better, with the number in larger cities in the country. Rates now have decreased to ten cents for a seven mile ride.

This constitutes the returns after the boats have cast their nets several times during each night. Most of the catch being made is that of fish which have been in the river from the ocean for some weeks. The heavy run of the salmon is not on as yet, however, and when the spawning time arrives, fish will not be stopping for Florence on their mad race up the Siuslaw river to its headwaters and the river's tributaries.
