

WITNESSES TELL STORY OF MOOSE LODGE LOTTERIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Special)—The government today extracted from reluctant witnesses the story of the 1931 charity ball of the Loyal Order of Moose which the government charges brought in $3,000,000.

Davis faces a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a $25,000 fine if convicted.

His political future may also be at stake as he is a candidate for reelection in November.

Perry A. Shanon, head of Moose lodge No. 15, New York, and Matthew A. Fishette, member of a Moose lodge in Clyde, N. Y., described the mechanics of ticket sales for the charity ball. The tickets had coupons attached which entitled purchasers to participation in "drawings" for large prizes of money and merchandise.

The tickets arrived by express, Fishette said. Members were given merchandise for selling books of tickets. From each $20 collected, $5 went to the local lodge, $11 to the propagation department of the national order, and $4 for merchandise or as commission to salesman. Where a member sold one book of tickets, he was given a second book and allowed to keep the proceeds from its sale.

Shanon described two drawings, one of the charity ball of 1930 and the other for the 1931 ball. The first was held at Mooseheart, near Chicago. Bernard C. McGuire and Theodore Miles, head of the Moose propagation department, both under indictments similar to those under which Davis is being tried, were present. The second drawing was held aboard the S. S. Percella while it was cruising off the Long Island sound.

RE-COVERING BOOKS

If the backs of your favorite books are growing shabby, cover them with some of the gay, heavy papers, especially designed for that purpose. If you prefer you may try fabrics. Books that are used on tables especially need attention. By using covers you will serve two purposes. The book will be preserved and the tone of your room will be more colorful.
