

FOUR-H MARKETING PROJECTS TO HAVE 407 WORKERS HERE

Four hundred seven boys and girls from 99 districts in Lane county have enrolled for the Four-H marketing project for 1933. It was announced Saturday by R. C. Kuehner, county club leader.

The marketing club project consists of the study of ten lessons in marketing and the writing of an essay on the subject. Studies on the subject include the following: "What is marketing and what purpose does it serve?" "Assembling, inspecting and standardizing." "Transportation." "Preservation and storage." "Manufacturing in relation to marketing." "Advertising and selling." "Financing, risk bearing." "Insurance and speculation." "Marketing agencies and their functions." "Methods of business organizations." and "Cooperative marketing." Its difficulties and advantages.

Membership in marketing clubs is limited to eighth graders only. Experience in conducting meetings, parliamentary practice and contact with present day problems is received by members carrying the project.

The annual marketing day celebration is held for the members completing the project. At this time those eligible to attend are taken on a tour of the different types of commercial establishments in Eugene and are given an opportunity to study at first hand the different types of marketing.

The boy and girl writing the essay on marketing that is judged best are each awarded a certificate and a school to which they belong is awarded a trophy by the Eugene Clearing House association. The school winning the trophy three times in succession becomes the permanent owner. In 1932 the boys cup was won by the Bailey Hill and the girls' cup by the Ward school.

LATHAM BOYS WIN IN FIRE CONTEST

In a special farm fire prevention campaign among Lane county 4-H club members sponsored by the state fire marshal's office, Jessie Grubb and Harry McCall, both of Latham, were selected for having done the most work in the elimination of farm fire hazards in Lane county.

The farm fire loss in 1930 and 1931 aggregated nearly three million dollars. Scores of human lives were lost and thousands of dollars of valuable livestock were destroyed.

Four-H club members in the campaign sought to eliminate the hazards by checking chimneys, fire places and flues, putting matches in proper containers in safe places, properly disposing of hot ashes and coals, removing rubbish and litter, keeping the roofs clean from leaves and moss, handling lamps and lanterns properly, and many other of the common fire hazards found around the average farm home.

A suitable gold plated emblem will be awarded by the state fire marshal's office to the two county winners. The winning reports and stories will be judged in a state-wide contest with a trip to the club summer school as the goal.

E. F. G. Ships Out Last Car Of Nuts

The Eugene Fruit Growers' association shipped out its last carload of nuts, a combined one of walnuts and filberts, Saturday, to Wichita. This brought the total for the season to eight carloads, the Eugene firm beating competitors to the market despite the lateness of the season on nuts here.

The Fruit Growers' plant is now at work on carrots, putting out a car and a half a day. They will be running on the carrots all next week.

A new product from carrots is being put on the market this year by the association, carrot juice, made from pressing carrots, and filtering it. There is a growing demand for this product in the east, reports J. O. Holt, manager of the firm.

The board of the association held its monthly meeting Saturday afternoon and closed two or three small pools, including the rhabarb one of last year. The group also went on record favoring the retention of the services of the county agricultural agent if it is possible to do so.

STARRY SHOWER STORY

Information regarding the height above the earth of these shooting stars. They usually appear from 50 to 80 miles above the earth's surface, Mr. Pruett said.

A noted display of Leonids appeared in 1890 and one of least note in 1833, Pruett said. However, in 1890 the show failed to go on as scheduled and scientists finally figured out that some force had pulled the display to one side. Mr. Pruett explained that the reason we can see the Leonids is that the earth passes through the path of the flashing stars on its way around the sun. The earth reaches this path every 33 years. The meteor swarm is at the point where the earth cuts through its orbit, offering the brilliant sight to earth spectators.

Since the shooting stars appear to come from the constellation Leo (Latin for Lion) the meteor shower is termed Leonids. The November display of Leonids appears to be shooting directly away from this constellation.

FARM AGENT STORY

Government Meier, his letter denouncing the bill as a fraud in the name of economy was written in the opening days of the campaign and it influenced thousands of voters. James Burdett, of McMinnville, state president of the Oregon Tax Equalization and Conservation League was another leader who braved much opposition to denounce the measure.

"It would be impossible to name all who helped in this great cause," said Judge Harris, "but the list of those who served on the state and local committees will show that the people of the state rose up and made it their battle."

EUGENE HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

An Armistice day assembly was held Thursday morning with world peace as the theme. The action of the main feature of the program centered around the tomb of the unknown soldier.

"Armistice Day," a short poem written by Miss Juliette Claire Gibson, adviser to the News, and English instructor, was given by Bill Dawson.
