NEW SCHOOL LAW STORY

the possibility of having to levy some $21,000 tax to pay for bus transportation—is settled in the new law. Rather than put the cost on the county as under the tuition fund law, the new act would make each high school district pay for the transportation of pupils within its area. The county school office has received an opinion from the attorney general which states that the county must stand the cost of bus transportation under the tuition fund law.

This new law was first conceived by Representative B. F. Nichols of Douglas county. County Clerk Walter B. Dillard, Senator H. C. Wheeler, and Representatives Hill and McCornack of Lane county have modified it to suit the county's needs. It is said to meet with the approval of officials of the large city school districts.

Smaller Districts Hit—Smaller high schools of the county, which have long prospered under the Wheeler law, are in dire straits since the county was forced to adopt the tuition fund law, which is designed primarily to help the larger schools. Laurence C. Millett, school superintendent-elect, predicts that a fourth of the districts will go to the wall under the new law, as the high schools will receive less money from the new law.

And while support for the smaller high schools has been diminished the tax on the real property in rural districts in which there are no high schools has been increased. The county levy under the 1933 budget will be reduced between $80,000 and $90,000 but the cost of teaching non-resident pupils must be borne entirely by the people of the non-resident districts—rural communities. In other words, the school tax in Eugene will decrease, but the taxes of persons residing in the outlying territory will be boosted from two to six mills, according to the estimates of county officials.

It is said that Coburg will lose $2000 under the tuition fund law and that the levy there will be increased 6.5 mills. Dorcas high will lose $1100, and the people of that community will pay a tax of 4.5, an increase of 2.3 mills.

No Session Thursday—Springfield's income from the tuition law will be reduced $6000, and the levy will be boosted 2.2 mills. Like situations will arise in other communities.

The county budget board was not in session Thursday, electing to try to work out the school tangle and the tax delinquency problems informally before taking official action. In the meantime O. E. Crewell, county commissioner, was supervising completion of the 1933 general fund budget, which has been finally approved by the board. No time has yet been set for calling the budget committee together again, but Fred Piek, chairman, will probably call it within a day or two.

The budget must be completed by January 1. In order that it may be completed by that time the committee must finish its work 21 days before the last day in December to allow for legal publication before the final taxpayers' meeting is set.

"Owing to the opportunities for community service, character building and healthful outdoor activities offered in the scouting program, the movement in this council has enjoyed a rapid development during the past few years, as is shown by the fact that in 1930 there were 265 registered scouts in this council with 13 troops and in 1932 there are 713 registered scouts in 32 troops." Mr. Baker declared.

"At the present time every troop in the city has a waiting list of boys and with the program of troop organization now under way in connection with the Ten-Year plan, which aims to enroll every fourth boy in scouting, this council will see a growth of scout enrollment from 713 boys to at least 1000 during the next 12 months.

"It is to furnish funds to handle this growth that the council is going to the people in this campaign starting Monday." Figures compiled by Henry Sallee, scout executive, show that in 1930 there were 407 advanced awards listed while in 1932 there were 1515 advancements awarded. This advancement in scouting comes under the merit badge program in which scouts interest themselves in more than 100 subjects, supervised by men of recognized proficiency in the various lines.

"The great value of scouting, as I see it, lies in the fact that the program is designed to occupy the leisure hours of the normal youth in America today," Mr. Sallee said. "Scouting directs the inherent gang tendencies of boyhood into useful production; it teaches them to learn by doing."

During the drive for funds an appeal will be made to every family in the city, the drive chairman declared. During the first day of the drive, Monday, team members are to contact their captains, reporting progress. On the second day, Tuesday, team captains will report to scout headquarters and on Wednesday final reports of the drive are to be made at scout headquarters.
