in congress. Last November, however, the six-foot two-inch tall congressman was defeated for re-election in a strenuous campaign which his friends said they believed so tired him as to make him susceptible to pneumonia.

Miss Ethel Johnson, his secretary, was with him when he died. His daughter, Elizabeth Annabelle Butler, 23, at her father's request, had remained in school at the University of Oregon. He was born September 24, 1880, in a little Tennessee town of the same name as his. He first went to Holly Springs college, a small mountain country institution, and later was graduated from the legal department of Cumberland university at Lebanon.

After practicing law in Tennessee for a time, he moved to Oregon in 1903, practicing law there until 1909 when he was named circuit judge for the eleventh judicial district in the state. In 1911 he retired, moved to The Dalles, Ore., his last home, and resumed his law practice.

He served in the Oregon senate as a presidential elector, and later was elected to congress, defeating Walter M. Pierce, formerly governor of the state. Last election, though, Pierce finally defeated him.

In the house, Butler was a member of the claims, irrigation and reclamation and public lands committees.

BAND TO APPEAR THIS AFTERNOON

A large crowd is expected at the university music auditorium this afternoon when the university band presents the opening concert of a series to continue throughout winter and spring terms. The concert will begin at 3 o'clock. There will be no admission charge.

The second division of the band will present today's concert. This division of the band, according to Director John Stehn, has presented the spring outdoor concert on the mill-race in past years but has never given a concert in the music auditorium before.

The program will open with "Guard of Honor" (Lohndorf), a fine march in the German military style. The "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna" overture by Suppe will follow. Suppe himself a Viennese, ranks as one of the great light opera composers of all time, and at least 20 of the overtures to the hundred and more operettas he wrote are still regularly performed by bands and orchestras.

Excerpts from "Rose-Marie," by Friml, one of the most popular of recent musical plays will occupy a central place on the program. A classical touch will be given the program by Beethoven and Bach chorals for bass instruments only. The program will close in impressive style with Friedemann's "Slavonic Rhapsody."

COOLIDGE RITES STORY

road were those from the villages and farms of the countryside. Among them were men and women clad in the homely clothing of the fields. With them were men and women from the cities who had followed the slowly moving cortege as it moved northward from Northampton.

Hail and hail fell upon their bare heads as the little family group assembled beneath a canvas marquee above the grave and the Rev. Albert J. Penner, pastor of the Edwards Congregational church of Northampton, who conducted the funeral services, stepped forward for the burial. He intoned the simple committal service for the dead. There was a brief prayer, a poem, the service ended.

Mrs. Coolidge stepped back and walked firmly from the graveyard, her son and his wife with her. A moment later she had entered her car. She drove to the old homestead from which she and Mr. Coolidge returned to Northampton barely two months ago after their barely visit and there received the sympathy of Miss Aurora Pierce, long housekeeper at the home. Then she turned homeward, to Northampton.

Five visitors were present from Corvallis, including Mrs. Dolly Brown, president of the Corvallis corps, Mrs. Ollie Miner, Mrs. M. Chesley, Mrs. Eva Young and Mrs. Wilson. Mrs. Parilee Lealey was present from Newport.

replace the 2 mill elementary school tax on property.

The sales tax had hardly been passed when the ways and means committee submitted its report recommending "that we take no action toward absorbing the entire state deficit at this time. However, we do intend making certain changes in the budget and to provide revenue to absorb the state property tax if possible."

Lane Men Vote "Yes"

The report, coming as it did after passage of the sales tax bill, legislators said, was too late to be considered.

Both members of the house from Jackson county voted against the passage of the general sales tax, each presenting arguments against the passage. Both Earl Day and E. C. Kelly likewise voted against the repeal of the three-mill tax levy.

All three Lane county members, Charles A. Huntington, Earl H. Hill and E. A. McCracken voted for the general sales tax, but Huntington voted against the repeal of the tax levy while others voted to retain the levy.

The bill as passed by the house and

EUGENE MAN SEEKS TO OBTAIN CENSUS OF RABBITS HERE

Marius Andersen, 290 North Polk street, is making a request for a census of rabbits in Lane and southern Benton counties. He is seeking the cooperation of all rabbit owners in this territory in hopes of reviving the industry. He is sending out an appeal to the owners of rabbits as follows:

"As we have just entered a new year it would be good business to take an inventory in order that we may know just how many rabbits there are in Lane county."

"But this is something we cannot do without the full cooperation of everyone who owns a rabbit. So I will ask everybody who owns rabbits to write a card or letter and address it to M. Andersen, 290 North Polk Street, Eugene, Oregon. Give the kind of rabbits you keep, and the number of each kind."

"The past year has been a year of low prices on all farm products, and rabbit meat has been sold far below the price of production."

"We must remember that when the rabbit industry was first introduced in Lane county it was for fur production. The meat at that time was considered only a by-product. But now the meat is the only thing of value, as the rabbit's fur is so low in price that it does not pay to save it."

"However, through cooperative efforts, much can be done to revive the rabbit industry."

SMALL COMMUNITIES GET WIRE SERVICE

Extension of service to smaller communities of the country hitherto without domestic or world-wide telegraph facilities, was a highlight of the year in 1932 in the telegraph field, according to a review of the telegraph field by Clinton B. Allison, vice-president of the Postal-Cable company.

The year also witnessed a remarkable growth in the use of telegraph messengers for nation-wide sampling and distribution work, with large corporations claiming very satisfactory results at low cost from the service, which at the same time proved productive to the telegraph companies from a revenue standpoint.

Through arrangements with independent telephone companies several millions of people are now being given a telegraph service 24 hours of the day, the review stated.

SOIL EXPERT TO TALK ON RUSSIA

A discussion of "The Soil and Agriculture of Russia," will be given at Condon hall, Wednesday, Jan. 11, at 8 o'clock by Dr. W. L. Powers, soil scientist of the Oregon State college. It was announced Saturday by Dr. Warren D. Smith, adviser of the university international club association which is sponsoring the address.

Dr. Powers is recognized as the best soil scientist in this part of the country and was a member of the U. S. delegation to the International Soil congress held in Russia in the summer of 1931.

"Agriculture has long been the basic problem of life in Russia and that country leads the world in soil technology," declared Dr. Smith. "Soviet leaders are now trying to change the country from an agricultural basis to an industrial basis and it is this phase of the soviet experiment about which least is known by the public at large. Dr. Powers, recognized as an eminent soil scientist, and having had the opportunity of seeing at first hand the conditions in Russia, is fitted to discuss this question. It will be well worth the while of anyone to hear this lecture."

A small admission will be charged, the proceeds to be given to the International club on the campus.
