

F. D. AND STIMSON CONFER AT LUNCH

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Jan. 10.—(AP)—President-Elect Roosevelt and Secretary Stimson discussed the whole field of international relations at an informal luncheon conference here today but each declined to disclose specific details of the discussion for publication.

At the dining room table of the Roosevelt home here Mr. Roosevelt and the secretary of state received newspapermen before setting out together by automobile in a driving snow storm for New York City.

"It was very delightful to have the secretary of state to lunch," said the president-elect. "Everything in relation to foreign affairs was discussed. We will continue the conversation on our way to New York."

"I endorse thoroughly what the president-elect has said about the delightful lunch," smilingly interposed Mr. Stimson. "The conversation was most satisfactory."

There was no amplification of the statements. It was presumed of course that the desire of Mr. Roosevelt to have the secretary of state here at this time was indicative of a determination on his part to take promptly and in a disinterested manner any and all issues confronting this country in the field of foreign affairs.

greater difficulties with the possibility of a dictatorship. "Organized crime," the authors state, "will probably continue."

"No reduction in the number of crimes, either major or minor," they say, "but the fact that the major crimes reached an approximate level in 1925 which has been maintained since that time indicates that we need expect no great increase in the immediate future."

The report finds no support for the belief that an immense crime boom has engulfed the United States. The number of arrests and of court cases per 100,000 population increased moderately from 1900 to 1930," it says, "with a tendency to rise more rapidly after 1920 than before."

"A large part, however, of the increase in the last decade is explained by traffic cases, which increased at approximately the same rate as automobile registrations.

"Arrests and prosecutions for major crimes increased even less rapidly than the rates for minor crimes." Prosecutions in federal courts were fairly constant from 1900 to 1917, after which an enormous increase occurred, but this was due principally to the large number of liquor cases.

"The record of crimes known to the police, which is potentially the best index of the number of serious crimes, shows a slightly lower rate in 1931 than in 1930.

"These figures do not indicate that crime has swept over the country like a tidal wave."

Though there is no expectation of a great increase in crime in the immediate future, neither is there an encouraging prospect for greater efficiency on the part of the police, the courts and the other agencies for dealing with criminals.

"A principal limitation on the increased efficiency of these institutions is 'politics,' says the report. "A second limitation is the unwillingness of the public to pay taxes sufficient to make efficiency possible. And a third limitation is the localistic restrictions on the agencies of justice by the American framework of government."

As for criminal laws, the number of them will continue to increase, the report asserts, but with a tendency toward a decreased rate, perhaps because of a growing public sentiment against regulations, which seems to be an offshoot of the prohibition issue, and to the substitution of flexible administrative regulations for rigid criminal laws."

It says the increase in criminal laws between 1900 and 1930 was at the average annual rate of from one to two per cent, which it does not consider startling.

A perfectly balanced program is being offered at the Heilig with Ruth Chatterton and George Brent heading the cast of the feature, "The Crash." The program starts with an interesting newswear of important 1932 events. Then there is a Mickey Mouse cartoon, a musical subject, "The Municipal Band Wagon," a John P. Medbury "Travellings," and a two-reel comedy, "A Cleanup on the Curb," with Hoopee Ates.

Up to the time she played the role of a tempestuous primitive child of nature in "Wild Girl," Joan Bennett's characterizations on the screen had been confined to society girl roles. Her success in this picture, however, led to her assignment as the feminine lead in "Me and My Gal," in which she appears as a worldly-wise, wise-cracking restaurant cashier who has a romance with an imperious young detective.

Spencer Tracy portrays the leading male role and others of the note in the cast are Marion Burns, Henry B. Walthall, George Walsh and J. Farrell Macdonald.

"War Correspondent," Columbia's thrilling picturization of war-torn China, co-starring the popular team of Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, with Lila Lee taking the feminine lead, opens Tuesday at the State. Holt, Graves and Miss Lee are the only white persons in the cast. But they are able supported by Victor Wong, playing the part of the venerable leader of the Chinese Nationalists, and Tetsu Komai, portraying the murderous rebel war lord.

Lionel Barrymore, as a brilliant, domineering leader who rules men, but is in turn ruled by a woman who almost plunges him to ruin, is the unique figure of a unique story in "Washington Masquerade," which plays Tuesday only at the Colonial. Karen Morley is the woman and the cast includes William Collier, Sr., William Morris, Burton Churchill and Diane Sinclair.

RAILROAD WORKERS MAY CALL STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A possibility railroad workers might strike to force shorter working hours in order to spread employment, unless congress orders lessened laboring periods, was asserted to a senate committee today by Arthur J. Lovell of Cleveland, vice president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

He endorsed the bill of Senator Black (D. Ala.), for a five-day week and six-hour day.

"Suppose the courts held this bill unconstitutional?" asked Chairman Norris. "Do you think it would be possible for the men and their employers to agree on any shortening of the work day?"

Lovell said: "The situation would become desperate with hundreds of thousands of railroad men out of work. When men are losing their homes, they become desperate. I'm not so sure they wouldn't find recourse in their economic stress, through strikes. I would be reluctant to resort to strikes. Legislation should be enacted to remedy such conditions without warfare."
