YOUR CHILDREN
By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

ONE night during the last heavy snowfall we were driving along a boulevard when, rounding a curve, we came upon a group of two dozen or so children with their sleds.

It was only because the road was recently wide and there were no other cars near us at the moment, that we were able to swerve into deep snow and save one little chap who was almost under our wheels.

Another little boy kept on ahead of us after we straightened the car. It seemed as though he must be blind, deaf and dumb, to defy danger the way he did.

We were afraid to drive around him because he might take it into his head to bolt either one way or the other. We couldn't stop because another car behind us might crash. We couldn't take to the left because other cars were coming in the opposite direction. By and by the lone runner was joined by others. They kept right on going ahead of us.

Sled Near Wheels
Then suddenly, I thought we surely were in for it. As I looked out of my side of the car I saw a dark shadow

Nile Luncheon To Be Held Wednesday

Four Generations In Family

Four generations in four ways in a family is the record of the A. C. Wells family.

Beginning with Mrs. Rhoda Wells, her son, A. C. Wells, his daughters, Mrs. Kirby and son Vern, and Mrs. Shadley and daughter, Melba Jean, four generations, two ways are present.

Starting on the other side of the family, with R. Robertson, his daughter, Mrs. A. C. Wells, and her daughters, Mrs. Kirby and Mrs. Shadley with their children, Vern and Melba, four generations two different ways are again found.

All except Great-grandmother Wells are native Oregonians. She came to Oregon from Iowa, fifty-five years ago. She is the widow of the late Edmund Wells, and the mother of four children, A. C. Wells, J. E. Wells of Eugene, Mrs. Cora Byers of Eugene, and Mrs. Stella Niles of Tigard. She is the grandmother of eleven children and great-grandmother of five. Her home is at 1309 Cross street, Eugene.

Mr. Robertson was born in Lane county in 1853, and well remembers the coming of the railroad to Eugene. He is the father of the following children: Mrs. A. C. Wells, Wayne Robertson, Mrs. E. R. Danner, W. R. Robertson, Glen Robertson, Carl Robertson, Neal Robertson, R. L. Robertson and John Robertson. All live in Eugene except Mrs. Wells and Glen, who live in Springfield, Mr. Robertson makes his home with this son. He has 29 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His wife, Louisa Bond Robertson, passed away nine years ago. She, too, was an Oregon pioneer.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells are the parents of eight children: Mrs. Blanche Kirby and Irene E. Wells of River Road, Mrs. Mary Johnson of Eugene, Mrs. Alice Shadley of Lebanon, Edmund, Claude, Glen and Neal Bruce. They have only the two grandchildren, Vern and Melba. Mr. and Mrs. Wells and their sons live on the San Juan highway between Lebanon and Sweet Home.

It doesn't seem to occur to these little people that death can ride in to them so quickly and surely from outside. Where their parents are I don't know. But they trust the kind motorists to look where they are going, and their children to keep out of the way, I guess. It must be that.

There is too much trusting all around. But no one trusts an express train. In many ways it is safer than an automobile.

Surely every one knows now the mighty power of a car, even a car going slowly. It cannot be stopped with all brakes on under fifty or a hundred feet at the very least. Turns complicated matters; the unexpected terminals of other streets or roads, the car approaching the other way prevents turning out. And night sledding is twice as bad because the lights of a car play tricks with shadows. Night sledding should never for a moment be permitted except in the country.

The pony cart had to go, the bicycle almost; now I believe it is the turn of the sled. At least in cities and on highways where cars cannot be regarded as anything but potential death.

New Spanish War Auxiliary Head

To the right is Mrs. George Lammer who was installed as president of the Spanish American War Veterans auxiliary this week.

Mrs. Lammer comes of a patriotic family. Her great grandfather, Jacob Martin, fought in the Revolutionary war. Her father, Eliad Martin, fought in the Civil war. Her brother, Howard Martin, was in the Spanish American war. Her son, Eugene Lammer, fought in the World war. Mrs. Lammer herself was assistant Red Cross nurse in the war.

She has composed a poem on the flag which reads as follows:

"Our Flag"
To the flag of our nation, all honor is due,
For things that you stand for, so loyal and true,
Are dear to our hearts, and we're living today,
In the glow of your glory, for you blazed the way.

In every great battle, on land or on sea,
In glory you've won for us, sweet victory.

When you call, we are ready, for you're stood the test,
So lead onward, Old Glory, and we'll do the rest.

And now to all nations, you speak peace in God's name,
For He's your commander, through Him you've won fame.

So we stand at attention, oh long may she wave
The flag of our nation, the flag of the brave.

TODAY'S RECIPES

By SISTER MARY

THERE is no dinner that is more economical and nourishing than the old-fashioned traditional New England "boiled dinner." Carefully prepared and attractively served, this simple meal will please the most fastidious.

Arrange the vegetables around the meat on a large platter in such a way that the vegetables form a garnish. Be careful, too, that the vegetables are not over-cooked and broken and mushy when sent to the table. Everything should be piping hot. The platter and dinner plates heated before using.

Our great-grandmothers served their boiled dinners in large, deep chop-plate-like dishes which were made especially for this purpose.

The deep dish was supposed to hold the heat and keep the meat and vegetables hot for second and third "helpings."

New England Boiled Dinner
Three or four pounds corned beef, 6 medium sized potatoes, 1 small head cabbage, 8 or 4 parsnips, 4 carrots.

Rinse meat in cold water. Put into kettle with enough cold water to more than cover meat. Bring to the boiling point and skim thoroughly. Simmer for three hours. Remove meat from broth and add parsnips, scraped and cut in halves or quarters. Cook fifteen minutes and add carrots, scraped and cut in halves. Cook ten minutes and add cabbage cut in eighths. Cook twenty minutes or until all the vegetables are tender. Drain from broth and serve meat and vegetables on a big hot platter.

Salt pork and corned beef were the popular meats for New England housewives, but ham or fresh beef can be chosen if preferred. More nourishment is provided from fresh beef than from corned beef.

A boiled dinner suggests an excellent way to use up the end of a ham, too. The meat gives an unusual and appetizing flavor to common vegetables that are none too popular in the average American home. Be sure to cook the vegetables uncovered after the cabbage is added in order to avoid the unpleasant odor through the house.

Cold sliced corned beef and corned beef hash are splendid ways to use up any left-over meat.
