Lane county with a delegation of 44 had one of the largest registrations at the state convention of granges in Pendleton this week. The local representatives attending the session are returning home this weekend, some arriving early Saturday. The convention closed Friday night.

Elmo Chase, master of the Lane county Pomona grange, served on the legislative committee of the convention as chairman. F. B. Harlow of Willakenzie grange is on the standing committee. Mrs. A. W. Graham of Triangle grange served on the home economics committee at the meeting; A. W. Frases of Waltherville on the education committee. N. O. Isaacson of Triangle also on the education, O. S. Fletcher of Willakenzie and the county agricultural agent, on the good of the order committee. Marjorie Kingsley of Elmira was on the home economics committee too.

Two major items before the convention were the sales tax and the county unit system. The group was unanimously against the sales tax and delegates and visitors from the convention say they feel that the farm population of Oregon is unanimously against the tax.

While the county unit system is law now, the grange expressed its disapproval of the system as it stands now and named a committee to report back for next year's convention.

There were 1034 registered at the convention, this being one of the largest grange sessions. The 1934 meeting went to Eugene. Following is the list of Lane county folk who attended:

tion is considered critical, and R. E. Vetterli, agent in charge of the Kansas City bureau of investigation, who returned the fire of his assailants as they drove away.

Lackey was shot three times in the back. Vetterli suffered a slight wound in the left arm.

Arrested Friday

Nash, a member of the Al Spencer gang which terrorized northeast Oklahoma ten years ago, was arrested by agents of the bureau of investigation, department of justice, at Hot Springs, Ark., yesterday after a long and relentless search.

"I don't believe they intended to kill Nash," Vetterli said in recounting the details of the slaughter, apparently staged by four men armed with machine guns who had hidden themselves near the officers' car and calmly waited for them to group themselves about the automobile.

"We went to the station to meet the officers who were bringing Nash back from Hot Springs," Vetterli continued.

"Raymond Caffrey and I drove to the station in his car. The two Kansas City detectives, Hermanson and Grooms, drove to the station in their car. We met the Missouri Pacific train and started over to Caffrey's car, handed the papers to the station driver across from the east door of the station.

Nash in Driver's Seat

"There were eight of us, including Nash, the prisoner and seven officers. We were to enter Caffrey's car and the Kansas City detectives were to follow us to Leavenworth in their car."

"I was standing at the rear and west side of Caffrey's car. In the back seat were Lackey and Smith, the agents from Oklahoma, and Otto Reed, chief of police at McAlester, who came up with the prisoner."

"Caffrey was to drive. Nash had sat in the driver's seat temporarily until the car was loaded and then he was to move over into the other front seat which was folded up to allow the three men to enter the rear seat."

"Caffrey stood on the pavement beside Nash on the east side of the car waiting for Nash to slide over into the folding front seat. Hermanson and Grooms were standing on the west side of the car and toward the front. Suddenly I heard a man say 'Put 'em up, up, up.'"

Gunners Stand Close

"I looked and saw a man blazing away with a machine gun from near the southwest corner of the car. He seemed to be standing on something—perhaps the running board of a car. I don't know exactly. But he was very close to us."

"I crouched under the murderous fire. I believe there were other ma-

Several high hills lay between Russell's place and the emergency field, and it was feared the aviator may have crashed into one of those. Darkness interfered with the search to-night, although planes were flying over the country in the hope that Young might yet be safe and would blight a signal fire.

Two Portland planes, and the Hobi Airways plane, part of the searching party attempted to locate William Young, young Portland aviator missing since Friday night, returned to the Eugene airport late Saturday afternoon after a fruitless search over the rugged mountains of Douglas county Saturday afternoon.

Seven other planes remained at Roseburg for the night. All planes will again concentrate at Roseburg Saturday to continue the search for the missing flier, thought to have been forced down somewhere in the wild Cow Creek canyon area.

MOSES AND CORDON GO TO WASHINGTON

Victor P. Moses, county judge of Benton county, and Guy Cordon, district attorney of Douglas county, will leave Medford tomorrow Sunday for Washington, D. C., where they will present the case of the Oregon and California land grant counties before the Solicitor-General McCard in hopes of retaining the fund that the government has appropriated each year for a number of years past in lieu of taxes on the grant lands. Notice was received several weeks ago that there is not enough money in this fund to meet the payments this year and that hereafter the fund would be cut off.

Judge Moses was elected president of an association of the O. and C. grant counties at a meeting here a short time ago and he and Mr. Cordon were appointed by the executive committee to go to Washington to fight for the retention of the fund. They will be armed with facts and figures gathered by Mr. Cordon, covering the history of the land grant cases from the time the bill was passed by congress to the present date. Mr. Cordon assisted in preparing figures in the case when it first came up in congress.

Judge Moses was in Eugene Saturday and left in the afternoon for Medford.

possible moment and, while keeping in the closest touch with official government delegations, renew their effort to hammer out an accord for fixing currency values as a satisfactory figure.

The French delegation, which has insisted from the beginning of the conference that stabilization of American and British currencies must be the first step taken at London, was hopeful before the news of President Roosevelt's opposition to the tentative agreement was received, that the first stage of stabilization might soon be achieved.

The rejection of the currency scheme by the American government brought gloom to the conference which had closed its first week on a hopeful note in view of the general expectation that the dollar and the pound would soon be subjected to control operations.

A proposal for a general all-around 10 per cent reduction of tariff rates was presented to the economic commission today by the American delegation, increasing the feeling that the conference had well begun and was on the road to real achievements.

DEATH MYSTERY IS STILL UNSOLVED

No new clues as to the identity of the man who was found dead on the S. P. right of way near Junction City last Wednesday or as to his murderer, if he was murdered, have been found, state police reported last night. Further than the finding of the name "M. H. Hard," written in small letters on a piece of canvas among the man's effects, there is no indication of who the man was or where he came from, police said.

Opinions differ as to where the man was killed. The state police say they believe he may have been killed on a freight train and his body and clothing thrown overboard at different places, but Special Officer Stewart of the Southern Pacific company offers the theory that he was murdered on the ground and that he was not on the train. The fact that a cap and a sack containing a shirt just like the one the man had on when his body was found, a pair of trousers and some toilet articles, including a razor, were found hidden in the grass not far from the scene leads Stewart to believe that the man was killed while walking on the right of way.

Farm Loan Debts To Be Scaled Down Says Federal Agent

A substantial scaling down in debts of many farm borrowers will be effected in the near future, C. F. Hyde, secretary-treasurer of the first national farm loan association, announced Saturday following receipt of a letter from J. A. Scollard, agent of the farm loan commissioner, stationed in the federal land bank of Spokane.

The reduction will be effected by the fact that farmers getting a loan will be able to offer cash for settlement of debts which he might not otherwise be able to pay, Hyde said.

"Commissioner's loans are being made to reduce and refinance farmers' debts on a longer term basis, to supply working capital and to refinance foreclosed farms," Hyde said.

"The collateral accepted is first or second mortgages upon all or any part of the farm property, real or personal, including crops. Of course, before the commissioner makes a second mortgage loan he will ask the holder of the first mortgage to waive foreclosure rights in accordance with the commissioner's regulations."

brought no information. By dawn several planes were in the air in search of the missing man, and by noon today 15 others had assembled from Portland, Salem and Eugene.

Eleven planes were on the airport here late today, alternating in a systematic search of the wide area in which Young may have crashed or been forced down.

Joe Russell, living 5 miles south-east of Azalia, told authorities here tonight that he heard a plane, believed to be that flown by Young, about 12:30 or 1 a. m. today. The plane, he said, was flying low, apparently at a height of not more than 500 feet, over the rough and heavily timbered country of Starve-Out Creek divide.

Russell said he heard the plane for 5 or 10 minutes, then it disappeared toward Quakemill mountain, in the direction of an emergency landing field. This information led the searchers to believe that Young's plane had developed trouble, and he was attempting to make the emergency field.
