Powers of Speech Fail to Unsettle Majesty of Law

Powers of oratory were wasted Monday when Walter E. Hempstead, former instructor in public speaking at the University of Oregon, was brought before Justice of the Peace Victor Oliver of Albany, according to reports from Albany.

Hempstead, brought before Judge Oliver on a charge of angling without a license, promptly launched into an account of the details of his expedition to the Marion lake country, where he was arrested by State Officer Ted Rodman.

Evidently believing that the court would be influenced by his powers of persuasion, Hempstead spoke at length, concluding with a summary of the reasons why he should not have been arrested. Officer Rodman presented evidence that Hempstead had been fishing in the vicinity for two days.

Judge Oliver, after hearing Hempstead's dissertation on the beauties of the Cascade streams, took the floor and spoke just five words: "Twenty-five dollars and costs."

Hempstead, however, has had experience in debate as well as public speaking, and demanded his right to rebuttal after Judge Oliver presented the affirmative's closing argument.

In fact, Hempstead, argued for five blocks with Officer Rodman, who conducted him to the front door of the Linn county jail when the university man couldn't produce the necessary money.

Sheriff Herbert Shelton, acting as critic judge, agreed to take a check for the balance of the fine, and Hempstead wended his way.

POSTPONE CUTS, RAIL MEN TOLD

WASHINGTON, June 21. (AP)—Railroad management today received a suggestion from administration sources that proposed wage reductions be postponed.

Joseph B. Eastman, coordinator of transportation, conferred in an unofficial capacity this morning with the management committee of the carriers which is handling a proposal for a permanent reduction of 22 1/2 per cent in railroad wages.

At the close of the conference Eastman indicated he had suggested to the railroad managers that the issue be postponed.

"The course of events," he said, "will depend on subsequent developments. We had a most satisfactory conference and there probably will be more meetings."

The wage situation was discussed from the management viewpoint. One of the questions considered was whether there should be a postponement of the issue. At this time, no information is possible as to what will occur.

Eastman is understood to be representing President Roosevelt in the negotiations.

W. F. Thichoff, general manager of the Burlington railroad and chairman of the management committee, said the committee will remain in Washington "until released by Mr. Eastman."

Eastman was to meet with the railway labor executives association this afternoon to discuss the situation from labor's viewpoint.
