HARNESSING OL' MAN RIVER FOR LAKES-TO-GULF SHIPS!

One of the great projects making the Mississippi river navigable for Gulf-to-Lakes and northwest shipping is the construction of 26 dams and locks between St. Paul and St. Louis. Here is one of the 26 under construction, spanning the river between Rock Island, Ill., and Davenport, Ia., shown across the river. The dam, which will be a quarter-mile long, is of the roller gate type, with four of the rollers shown in place. The dam will raise the river sixteen and a half feet. The government locks are shown along the Illinois shore.
