(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) tion to some industries and have threatened others. Like Pulling Teeth? Yes! He cited the elimination of child labor in the cotton industry as an example of reform that could be accomplished by group action. "You've got a lot of teeth you need pulled," Johnson said. "You want to have them pulled and you have to pull them yourself. An unprecedented step toward peaceful relations between capital and labor was taken today by the cotton textile industry in cooperation with the recovery administration, through creation of a board to compose present and future labor troubles. May Settle Labor Wars In this move the recovery administration saw a possibility of similar structures for all big industries, so that in the future American employers and their workers may sit down with a representative of the government and an intermediary to deal with mutual problems fairly and with a minimum of strife. The national cotton board was provided by an amendment of that industry's code of fair practice. This was done by unanimous adoption of a report by a committee which had been named especially to deal with the "stretch-out" system by which mills have been speeding up individual workers' output through requiring them to attend many machines. Johnson declared in temporary force, pending hearings, codes of fair practice which will shorten work hours and increase wages in thousands of the country's banks and in factories manufacturing electrical products, radio, bedding and rayon. By these orders, more than half a million additional workers are intended to be given quickly the benefits of the recovery program. The bank code applies to the 14,000 members of the American Bankers association and may be subscribed to also by the 4,000 additional banks not affiliated with the association. By complying with its terms the bankers will be able to display the Blue Eagle insignia.

LUMBER STRIKE STORY

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) the lumber code now before Administrator Hugh Johnson at Washington. Adjustments Planned The pulp and paper industries of the city made no change, because, their executives said, the code for their industry is expected to be approved in a few days "and the scale can be adjusted in accordance with that agreement." The M and M Plywood company late today announced that effective August 15 its 135 employees would be paid in accordance with the president's voluntary agreement code, at a 40 cent an hour minimum. The lumber companies said the new rate of pay is effective until the lumber code is signed by the president. A. L. Haight, manager of Longview operations of the Weyerhaeuser company, said the higher paid workers will receive wage adjustments proportionate to the new minimum established.

WAIT FOR CODE PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Headquarters of the Oregon League of Loggers and Lumbermen said today lumber mills on the Columbia and Willamette rivers near Portland are generally paying 32 1/2 cents an hour to their employees. The 42 1/2 cent scale is expected to be adopted by the mills after the national lumber code becomes effective. The 4 1/2 cent increase on the wage scale commencing to 42 1/2 cents in the Weyerhaeuser and Long-Bell plants, said if any mill in the Portland district is paying that wage, it has not come to the attention of the Portland office. Some smaller mills in the Willamette valley are said to be paying less than 32 1/2 cents. Aircraft engines have increased between 10 and 15 per cent in power for the same gross weight during the past two years. ARROW MESSENGER—Phone 610

"Perhaps I am a prisoner of the state of Oregon by reason of these abstract disclosures." In his forward, the author declares: "In the pages to follow it is the purpose to discuss freely and without fear of being misunderstood, the principles of government, endeavoring to establish the characteristic difference between a democracy founded on Christian principles (as provided by our forefathers), and a dictatorship, as developed under our modernistic reversion to paganism. . . . Modern America professes no religion. It long since eschewed its faith in Christianity. In fact, nothing to the 'modernist' appears quite so ludicrous, so perfectly silly, so obnoxious and distasteful as Christianity. . . . Mr. Banks was assisted in writing the book by his wife, Edith R. Banks, who is here in Eugene with their daughter, Ruth May Banks. The book is printed by the Valley Printing company and is an interesting presentation of typography. It has a blue binding with simple arrangement of the title and author's name on it. A second book, "The Remedy," is to be published later. Mr. Banks states, however, that "Weighed in the Balance," being a prophetic book must be read first to get the significance of "The Remedy."

Is the lumber code, on which hearings were completed some time ago, ready for promulgation? Deputy Administrator Cates has not yet completed his report. Is there anything the administration can do in regard to the coal strikes in Pennsylvania now? Johnson has no jurisdiction until the coal code is formally adopted. What is the administration's attitude toward the proposal that steel include in its code a provision for a planning committee to include representatives of the government? No codes have been approved and none will be by Johnson that doesn't provide for such 'control' committees. What action will be taken if employers who are under codes violate their labor or other provisions? If any of these reports are substantiated Johnson would turn them over to the control committee and if the practice were not corrected take "very prompt action" to the maximum extent of the law if necessary. Has the administration had any complaints from communities with frozen banking facilities of inability to comply with the agreements? "I have had complaints of every kind you can think of," Johnson replied.

"Colonel" Turnbull will organize and conduct the publicity and advertising work of the local group. Dr. Smith assists in the general program and represents the women in the new set-up. General McMorran in assuming his command Wednesday morning said: "We are waiting for more information before launching full force into this campaign. We expect the full cooperation from citizens to join in with the spirit of the act. "From the start, the committee in charge wants it distinctly understood that it will not deal with any complaints made by individuals that firms or employers are breaking the rules unless such complaints are verified with signed statements." Anonymous Complaints In Already, Wednesday, there were anonymous letters at the chamber of commerce, complaining that certain local firms were violating the rules of the N. R. A. Mr. McMorran stated that such letters had better be thrown away by the sender before they are sent. The committee will give its whole time when it has verified facts to work with. As announced at the meeting Monday evening, however, the committee in charge is not a disciplinary group, but an educational organization to spread the aims and working of the National Recovery Administration and to build up public opinion. Headquarters for the local N. R. A. group will be at the Eugene chamber of commerce. To Pick Chairman Each of the committee chairman is to name his own assistants. tinued to be very busy Wednesday dealing out the "Blue Eagles" and all the N. R. A. insignia that goes to those who have "signed up." A new shipment of the eagles and insignia came in late Tuesday night for distribution here. It is expected that within a day or so the big rush will be over and every one will have his Blue Eagle displayed. An interesting feature of the scramble for Blue Eagles is the attitude of the small store owners, who did not specifically receive the pledge from the national N. R. A. to sign, but who are as eligible as any one else to pledge his support of the program and display his eagle. Many of these one-man operators and business men, many of them in lines where it takes only one or two people, have called for their eagles. Patriotic-minded officials in city and county, too, want their Eagles displayed. The city police office, seeing the Eugene hospital next door with a big eagle peering out, immediately sent out its pledge to get its eagle, although the city offices are not under the plan.
