

Contract Bridge

By GEORGE SCHAEFERS Associate Teacher—Culbertson National Bridge Studios of N. Y.

Some time ago when writing about justifiable over-bidding I said that one could overbid and take a huge set rather than let the opponents make a slam.

North opened with a bid at one heart (his longest of two suits). What was East to do? He had nine almost certain tricks in the club suit and a singleton heart.

South passed and East passed and North showed his preference by taking the contract to 5 hearts. East now bid 5 spades which can be set, but from the South position it looks like the opponents have the spades and diamonds solid and the bid is a cinch so South bid 6 hearts, intending to take a set rather than let the game be made.

Of course you have looked the hand over and know that 6 hearts are doomed to defeat, but wait a minute. All humans err at times and this time West went to sleep momentarily and led his fourth best diamond. South played the nine from dummy and East, thinking that if his partner held the Ace of diamonds he would have led it, and also thinking that South therefore had the singleton Ace of diamonds, played low on the trick, giving South a discard of his one losing spade. Now there was nothing to lose but the Ace of trumps for the clubs were easily set up by trumping one round. And were the grins broad?

West and North passed and East bid seven clubs. He was sure that he would be set three or four, probably doubled, but the opponents' slam looked a certainty. North doubled this bid and East succeeded in making his nine trump, going set four, but this was a bid saving over allowing the opponents to make a vulnerable small slam.

The fact that the North and South hands held a grand slam did not detract from East's performance. North and South couldn't know that they had the grand slam, and the double looked like the best bet.

Here is a hand that illustrates the same principle, with one huge exception—it shows that sometimes, either through finding an unusual fit between the hands or by opponents' error, or both, the overbid is made. This is the kind of a hand that turns some hearts to joy and sows the seeds of venom in others.

East dealt, vulnerable. North and South were not only not vulnerable but had been losing steadily all evening. These cards were dealt and played and resulted in much wailing and gnashing of teeth.

A large crowd attended the dance Saturday night at Triangle Lake.

A meeting of the citizens of the community was held this week, to begin the preparations for a formal observance of Labor day here this year. The main features of the entertainment for the day, as it is announced now, are to be a big picnic dinner on the lots near the Florence bank building, a wrestling card to be held indoors and dancing in the evening.

These are exclusive of the baseball game which is to be played in the afternoon, when Florence's baseball boys, who have now taken two close games from the strong Reedspoint team, will meet the Honeyman nine of the Portland city league.

Willie M. Jones, principal of Siuslaw high school here last school year, was in Florence Thursday from his home in Waterville, Wash., closing up his contract for again assuming the principalship of the local high school for the forthcoming year. He will receive $100 per month. At the recent meeting of the high school board Clair Keltner, of Myrtle Point, was also engaged to again teach in the high school as was Miss Maude McIntyre, whose home is in Marshfield. Both Mr. Keltner and Miss McIntyre, who taught here last year, will receive a salary of $90 per month during the 1933-34 school year, the board decided.

Jerry Meek arrived here this week by airplane from Oakland, Cal., for a visit at the Sam Seymour home in Cushman. The lone pilot of the airplane made quite an auspicious arrival, circling over Siuslaw bay for some time, before making a landing on the sandy beach at Spruce Point, in the western edge of town, before proceeding on to Cushman, where he made another landing on the Warner Waite ranch. A grandson of the Seymours is attending the aviation school in Oakland which Mr. Meek conducts. Mr. Meek took off from Cushman for Vancouver, Wash.

Mrs. Fred Thomas of Eugene visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Coleman from Tuesday until Thursday. She was accompanied on her return home by her sister, Miss Cornelia.

BEACH ROAD NOT FAVORED BY U. S.

FLORENCE, Aug. 12.—(Special)—A letter received by Secretary Lee Griner of the Siuslaw chamber of commerce conveys the opinion of the federal road bureau that the proposed new road from Florence to Helecta Beach is purely a local proposal and is not particularly appealing to the government's plan. That was the sum and substance of the answer in response to a request of the federal road bureau's idea of the matter. But the chamber of commerce here has also written to the lighthouse department at Seattle and the word from that source was that the proposition here could be investigated thoroughly, but upon this there has been no further word. The matter of eventually securing this new direct road from Florence to the beach is also to be brought before the Lane county chamber of commerce meeting on the McKenzie next Thursday.
