VOICE OF THE PEOPLE BACKS F. D.

A MAN who is looking for straws to show which way the wind is blowing could do a lot worse than to study those stories about the thousands of letters President Roosevelt is receiving commending him for the NRA campaign.

These letters, mostly, are from people who don't ordinarily sit down to write to the president. Some of them are misspelled, some of them are mere scrawls on bits of wrapping paper with stub pencils, some of them are formally typewritten and some are on scented paper.

There is no uniformity. They come from everywhere and everybody. But they all agree in one thing; each is an effort by a deeply-moved American citizen to tell the president that the blue eagle campaign is crossing the land like a strong, refreshing wind, and each is a heart-felt pledge of support.

And the influx of these letters is possibly the most important single symptom to be found in all the land today.

These letters, that is to say, show how deeply responsive the American people are to this stupendous, complex and puzzling campaign against the depression.

For the letters are not being written by cranks or freaks. They are coming from ordinary people, men and women who do not usually dream of sending letters to the White House.

Not once in two or three generations do the American people really become aroused. If an awakening is coming now—and this flood of letters can hardly mean anything else—it indicates that the nation is tossing into the scales a united force of a size and strength such as America has employed only three or four times in all her history.

No one could make a greater mistake than to underestimate the significance of this.

This is not just another political movement; it is not just another fad, just another safety valve for confused and inarticulate public emotion.

The blue eagle is the emblem of a drive which has a united country back of it; and it all makes one think of General Johnson's recent remark—"God help the man or men who get in the way of the national recovery program."

FLYING UPSIDE DOWN

THAT California flyer who set a new world's record by sailing around in his airplane upside down for a flight of 125 miles may have accomplished something that no other flyer ever did before, but it is a little bit difficult to see just how he has added anything very definite to the science of aviation itself.

Daring flyers discovered a long time ago that the average plane can turn over on its back without falling. Stunt flyers have elaborated on the feat, and the ability to cruise about bottom-side up for a short time is probably useful to army combat flyers, who have to get used to performing all sorts of odd tricks.

But outside of those restricted fields the stunt doesn't seem very useful. Aviation as a science is just about where it was before this inverted flight of 125 miles was begun.

THE CONSUMERS' DUTY

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON seems to have a way of saying something sensible every time he opens his mouth; and his recent speech at Baltimore urging his fellow countrymen to trade at stores which display the blue eagle contains a few paragraphs that are abundantly worth consideration.

associates here think of an ancient Roman pro-consul. Wells is cynical and his sense of humor sardonic. But he won the co-operation of both chief factions in Cuba during months of negotiation designed to straighten out a political and economic mess.

He left his post as assistant secretary of state and went to Cuba backed by the personal confidence and friendship of Roosevelt and a record of personal achievement in previous Latin American negotiations. Those two assets lead his friends to believe that he may have the State Department's top job before Roosevelt stops being president.

Roosevelt sent Wells with a flexible program for settling Cuban troubles. His first success was re-establishment of constitutional guarantees for justice in the courts, civil law, free speech and the right of assembly.

It was inferred here and at Havana that the tyrant Machado would feel called on to resign sooner or later. That prospect was hastened when workers, taking advantage of restored civil liberties, began to strike and precipitated the recent crisis.

Except for a few years of retirement during the Collidge and Hoover administrations, Wells has been our star trouble shooter in the Caribbean area since our star trouble shooter of the department's Latin American division at the age of 28. He wrote the Washington treaties for Central America and settled serious problems in Honduras and Santo Domingo. He speaks Spanish fluently.

Two newspapermen, experienced in the way of the Department of Agriculture, wandered in on the secret session of the Crop Reporting Board while it was making up what it considered the most important report on probable production ever made.

Under the rigid rules governing such occasions, they were locked in and compelled to stay there for the next half hour.

(The indicated cotton crop of 12,314,000 bales would have been the second largest on record if the board hadn't counted out the 4,000,000 bales which the government expects to eliminate through farmer agreements.)

Postmaster General Jim Farley has been so frank in expressing his views on Democratic patronage that his insistence on retaining key men from the old regime in his department here stands in striking contrast.

The assistant postmasters general, holding political jobs, were let go. But men holding 15 or 20 of the top non-political service jobs—such as the solicitor, purchasing agent, comptroller and chief inspector—were kept on the job or given other posts in the service.

Farley also objected to dismissal of employees and established a mild furlough system in the hope that increasing business would enable him to avoid firing anyone.

Just the same, it is getting harder to obtain a job with one of the new emergency administrations without a string of political endorsements.

Unless, of course, you happen to be a member of the family of NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

THE HISTORY OF 2106 A. D. REVEALED
(The Grand Pass Courier)
H. G. WELLS, British historian and novelist, certainly is ahead of his time. Right now he is engaged in writing a history of the year 2106.

It is a strange world Wells finds himself in, or at least it would be strange to us now. Looking backward to the year 1933 he chronicles what a dirty race of people we really were, wearing underclothes for months by dint of having them washed out, dried, ironed and returned weekly.

And what does Mr. Wells see about him in the year 2106? Do people go without clothing after the fashion of the 1933 nudist colonies?

Not exactly that, but if garments are not exactly lacking, they are certainly scanty and healthful, and are replaced at least every three days by new garments of materials not yet known in 1933.

Nor are the clothes the only difference, in the world of 2106. Travel becomes the simplest of matters. Wells sees the ordinary man of that day arranging overnight for a vacation to the ends of the earth, going off in the clothes he wears, armed only with his wallet and identification papers, planning to secure anything else he may need along the way.

All very strange and very interesting. What it means we don't know. Probably just a typical Wells' reaction against the ills that plague these troublesome times.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
WHILE patients with epidemic encephalitis, or "sleeping sickness," seem to be completely unconscious, there are recorded instances in which the patient who apparently slept was aware of everything that went on in the room.

COTTAGE GROVE NEWS ITEMS

COTTAGE GROVE, Aug. 19.—(Special)—C. E. Stewart, Elbert Bede and R. P. Boyce attended a county chamber of commerce meeting Thursday evening at Blue River.

Officers and C. C. boys on Brice creek entertained a number Friday evening at a barbecue. Guests were the entire band and a number of other residents. It was desired to include all who have shown hospitality to the camp. Women given took cakes to leave for the boys.

The Cottage Grove association in Portland will hold its annual picnic Sunday, August 27, at Peninsula park. Basket dinner will be served at 12:30. All former residents of Cottage Grove, all residents of Cottage Grove and their families and friends have been invited. Mrs. W. F. Hart, president, suggests that a caravan be formed here to make the trip to Portland for the day.

The clock which hung for several years at the Bank of Cottage Grove corner was removed Saturday to Springfield and placed on the Masonic building there. The clock had not been running since the bank went into the hands of the state banking department.

Extensive improvements have been completed at the Bartels meat market that completely change the interior. The ice box and partition in the fore part of the building have been removed and there is now a 65-foot salesroom. A new ice box with automatic control has been installed. The sales counter is to be placed lengthwise, so as to give customers access to the enlarged storeroom.

The sermon subject Sunday evening at the Christian church will be "The Revolution of 1983." Rev. I. G. Shaw will stress the point of what our present duty is.

The first deserter from the Brice creek C. C. camp was reported this week. Police here and the state police were asked to pick up the lad, but he made his escape. The lad was reported to have stolen a watch at camp and to have sold it to another C. C. C. lad before leaving and also to have stolen some clothing and other articles.

Members of the Odd Fellows lodge and their families will hold their annual picnic Sunday at Loretto, three miles east of Cottage Grove. Music and cream will be furnished by the Cottage Grove band.

The young people of the Methodist church entertained with a picnic party and watermelon social on Wednesday evening at Swimmers Delight. A melon feed will follow the meeting of Neighbors of Women next Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Kitchin are visiting at the home of Mrs. M. H. Riddell. The Walker Sunday school held their annual picnic at Swimmers Delight on Wednesday. The M. A. Horn gave at Swimmers Delight.
