FIVE ACCIDENTS REPORTED SUNDAY; TWO ARE INJURED

Five traffic accidents were reported to police headquarters over the week-end with one arrest being made and two persons admitted to hospitals for treatment.

John Miller, Eugene, charged with being intoxicated and disorderly following an auto collision at Sixth and Lawrence streets Sunday evening, pleaded guilty and was fined $50 in police court Monday morning.

According to the police report, a car registered to Minnie A. Miller, route 3 Eugene, ran through a stop street and crashed into a car driven by Cyrus Clark shortly after 7 o'clock Sunday night. The Clark car was proceeding east on Sixth and the other machine entered the intersection from Lawrence street.

Occupants of the Miller machine, police said, left the scene of the accident immediately, and could not at once be found. John Miller appeared at the police station at 1 o'clock to report his car stolen and later police found that Neil Preston and Ed Tomseth were in the Miller car at the time of the accident. Miller said he was not in the car, that someone had taken it without his knowedge.

Both machines were badly damaged in the crash.

Mrs. A. L. Neyhart suffered a bad scalp wound and several bruises and sprains when she was thrown out of a roadster in which she and Mr. Neyhart and their daughter were riding Sunday evening. The Neyhart auto had entered the intersection of Eighth and Olive streets when it was struck by a larger machine, driven by Gaylord Stenzhall. Both Mrs. Neyhart and her daughter were thrown from the machine. The daughter also suffered a scalp wound, but it was not serious.

At the Eugene hospital Mrs. Neyhart was said to be recovering from the accident. The scalp wound caused considerable loss of blood, her physician stated, but no bones were broken.

Mrs. Monica Ruth, Eugene, was admitted to the Eugene hospital at 1:15 Monday morning suffering from injuries described by her physician as painful but not serious, which she received in an accident at Tenth and Willamette streets. Mrs. Ruth was riding in a car driven by Percy Van Osdal, which struck the machine driven by Warren E. Shisler. The Van Osdal machine was following the Shisler car north on Willamette and the collision occurred when the Shisler car started to turn left into Tenth. The Van Osdal car struck the rear of the other machine, sending it across the intersection into the light post at the corner.

At 10:30 o'clock Sunday evening, another accident occurred at Tenth and Willamette in a similar manner. A car driven by Ray H. Thurman, going north on Willamette, started to turn east on Tenth when it was struck in the rear by a car driven by Glenn Shaw, going north on Willamette. There was little damage.

Clifford Smith reported his machine struck by a car driven by Roscoe Cameron at Thirteenth and Willamette at 8 o'clock Sunday night. Smith said he had stopped at Willamette and was starting across when the accident occurred. Cameron stated he did not see the lights of the Smith car in time to avoid a collision.

POWER PROJECT STORY

thing on a plan somewhat similar to that followed at Muscle Shoals. It would create a "Rennie Authority" which would bear the entire initial costs.

After that the Eugene water board offers to operate the properties under lease and contract of purchase, complete ownership to be accomplished for Eugene out of the expected revenues.

Elaborate briefs and engineering statements accompany the application. The water board claims it could wholesale power to the various communities at 1¼ cents per kilowatt hour and that this would make possible retail rates comparable to the average of 2.06 cents per kwh which now prevail in Eugene as compared with a 3.38 average now prevailing in Mountain States territory.

Many Cities Affected

It is estimated that the Eugene board would take over some 20,000 customers in an area with 100,000 population in addition to the 6,613 customers it now has in an area with 20,494 population. These Mountain States customers now use approximately 30 million kwh per year and the board's engineers claim this would jump to 50 million on the lowered rates.

The following towns would be affected by the change:

Albany, Aumsville, Brownsville, Coburg, Corvallis, Cottage Grove, Creswell, Dallas, Elmira, Falls City, Halsey, Harrisburg, Independence, Jefferson Junction City, Lebanon, Lowell, Lyons, Marion, Marcola, Mahama, Monmouth, Monroe, Philomath, Rickreall, Scio, Shaw, Shedd, Sodaville, Springfield, Stayton, Sublimity, Sweet Home, Tangent.

In many of these towns there are franchises for the Mountain States, some of them running as far as 1992 as in the case of Springfield and Lebanon. How these franchises would be disposed of the report does not state.

The project is visualized as supplementing and rounding out the huge power project which the government has in mind on the Columbia river at Bonneville to serve the north end of the state. The McKenzie project is visualized as giving cheap power to the entire mid-section of the Willamette valley.

The Rennie dam is estimated to develop an ultimate capacity of 81,000 horsepower, divided between three units. It would give this city a total of more than 100,000 horsepower distributed as follows:

Walterville plant	4,200 h. p.
Leaburg plant	10,000 h. p.
Standby plant (steam)	8,000 h. p.
Rennie plant	81,000 h. p.
Total	103,200 h. p.

An additional 15,000 horsepower unit is said to be available further upstream.

Jobs for 1500 Men

The Eugene water board recites that it has already expended $39,734 in surveys, diamond drilling and stream measurements on the Rennie site, that it is ready to put work under way at any time and that the job would give employment to 1500 men on the average for three years. It is estimated that at least $6,000,000 of the $12,000,000 involved would be labor.

The Eugene Realty Board has been working with the water board on the project for some time. The water board claims also to have had advances from many of the communities affected suggesting that they would be glad to make a deal for power.

The action of the water board deciding to lay the petition before the federal public works administration was taken at a meeting Sept. 11. Percy Brown, Orlando Hollis and L. D. Pierce and W. H. Fell, president were present. Board Member C. H. Fulton is in Montana on an extended trip. W. H. Fell as president did not vote. He says, however, he concurs in the program.

Board's Soundness Shown

Although the project as suggested would not involve the city of Eugene or the water board in any new borrowing, detailed financial statements are submitted with the application. They show:

City General

Warrants outstanding	$ 277,428.43
General city bonds	1,094,340.45
Improvement bonds	1,029,073.06
Bond interest coupons due	14,404.19

Water Department

Bonds	$ 631,659.55
Sinking fund	234,612.43

ELECTRIC DEPARTMENT

Bonds	$1,160,000.00
Sinking fund	210,500.00

As proof of the financial soundness of the water board, its history is related in detail. The statement is made that it came into being in 1910 with a debt of $215,000 (for buying and revamping old plant) and that after 22 years of operation it has a total value of $4,009,214 with a net indebtedness of only $988,000.

The brief to the federal authorities also contains lengthy citations by S. M. Calkins, city attorney, to show that there are no legal obstacles to the proposed plan.

Realtors Start Move

The idea to construct the Rennie plant with federal funds originated with the Eugene realty board which has fathered the plan and promoted its development since its inception, Chairman Fell said Monday.

C. F. Hyde, president of the Eugene realty board, said there was every indication that the project would liquidate itself within a 20-year period, at no cost to taxpayers of the city.

"The Realty Board is the father of the proposition and has promoted the idea vigorously in the past few months," he said. "We feel it is an opportunity for development of the community, furnishing work at a time it is greatly needed and furnishing power to surrounding cities at a rate far less than they pay at present.

"We expect the government to grant 30 per cent of the cost and to advance the other 70 per cent, taking the plant as security for the loan. We hope to be able to sell enough power to other cities to make the plant pay out in 20 years. If the power market should not materialize, the city of Eugene would not be 'stuck' for the cost of the plant."

New Skyline Trail Being Built Nearer Summit Than Before

A new route for the Skyline trail in the McKenzie pass section is being laid out by C. C. C. men under the direction of Dee Wright, veteran mountain guide and forest worker, according to C. C. Olsen, construction engineer in the Willamette national forest. Mr. Olsen has just returned to Eugene from a trip to that section.

The new trail will strike the McKenzie highway near the summit of the mountain instead of at Frog camp. It is being routed by way of Camp Riley, the Collier Glacier and Mathieu lake to the big cut near the summit and proceeding north, it will extend past Mt. Washington and to Big lake. This will move the trail much nearer the summit on the entire route in that section of the Cascades and it will come more nearly fulfilling its name.

Another new job that is being handled by C. C. C. men is the building of a road from the old Willamette highway to Timpanogas lake and extending from there to Warm Springs butte, thence along the Calapooya summit.

The big bridge over the Willamette 21 miles above Oakridge is nearing completion, Mr. Olsen said. C. C. C. men have built this structure which is 250 feet long and is entirely of wood.

OFFENDING DITCH WILL BE PLUGGED

The 800-foot ditch excavated by the county last year in the vicinity of Elmira with the expectation of relieving the overflow situation on the Long Tom river in that locality, will be plugged up and the obstructions in the original channel of the river will be removed. This was decided upon at a conference Monday between a dozen or more farmers of the Elmira district and the members of the county court.

When the rains came last winter the overflow of water was worse than before the ditch was excavated and it was apparent that relief was needed before another winter.

After several conferences with the farmers interested the court called a meeting for Monday and after thorough discussion action was agreed upon. The county will furnish a caterpillar tractor and the farmers will do most of the work of filling in the entrance to the ditch and removing the obstructions in the Long Tom.

bread, with a vegetable filling, and preferably with a leaf of lettuce added. Add a hard cooked egg, peeled, and wrapped in waxed paper, or chop egg up, put in cup and season to suit taste. If left whole, don't omit a salt shaker, or wrap a little salt in a clean white paper: If the child relishes tomatoes, add a nice ripe one to the lunch. The salt will come in handy for this too.

A glass of fresh or canned fruit, or a peach or banana. Some crackers, with butter spread between, which will be relished with the soup.

For dessert, piece of angel cake or sponge cake, wrapped in waxed paper (or some jelly tarts or graham cookies). Don't forget to add a spoon, and a paper or other napkin.

Vegetable filling for sandwiches: Any leftover vegetables, such as string beans, carrots, raw cabbage, raw onion, butter beans, or kidney beans, used separately, or two or three may be combined. Chop them fine, add enough mayonnaise to moisten. Spread between slices of bread, on the lettuce leaf. Wrap the sandwiches in waxed paper.—Mrs. Mattie Radabaugh, River Road, Eugene.

EDUCATION ROW STORY

Kerr, but well-grounded indications point to the possible removal of Starr from the presidency of the board. This the governor has the power to do under the act creating the board. A new appointment may also be made.

The controversy between Sammons and other members of the board against Starr was started more than 18 month ago when the appointment of a chancellor was before the board. Kerr was the selection of the Starr group while Sammons, aided by Mrs. Walter Pierce, protested the selection and Sammons went east to recommend an educator. While he was out of the state, information was obtained that Kerr's selection was virtually cinched.

Would Defend Kerr

During the noon hour today Mrs. Miles K. Cooper, who stated she was president of the Mothers of Oregon State college, was here seeking an interview with the secretary of state and also with the governor. She was informed the governor was in Portland, and that arrangements would be attempted soon for her to confer with Hoss. Her mission, it was indicated, would be in defense of Chancellor Kerr in the event any move was made to ask his resignation. She stated she would confer with the governor on her return to Portland.

In the meantime the chief development would come from the governor and an early announcement was awaited. The board of higher education was scheduled to meet again in about two weeks.

000 and did not encourage new retail businesses.

The report of the merchants' division, A. Quackenbush, chairman, mentioned the annual meeting of the group as the largest gathering of Eugene merchants in many years. There were 817 tickets sold for the occasion which was held at the Osburn hotel Feb. 13. The pet parade, sponsored each year by this group, was a success in every way this year, it was reported. The committee reported maintaining a constant battle against the invasion of "rackets" in this city.

Organization of the Oregon State Mining congress, through which, the state legislature was persuaded to create a state mining board, was listed as the outstanding achievement of the Western Oregon Mining Congress, George Jennings, president, an activity sponsored by the chamber. The chamber and the mining congress sponsored a series of 12 lectures attended by 3,000 persons, on practical mining problems as found in this region.

The membership committee, headed by Ernie Hook, reported an increase of 47 members during the year.

Cook's Biscuits Perpetuated by Mountain Peak

How a mountain's name resulted from a cook's failure with biscuits, and another was named by a scholarly student of the ancient myths is told by Frederic S. Dunn, head of the Latin department at the University of Oregon, in a letter to The Register-Guard.

The two mountains are Death Ball and Thor's Hammer. They are located west of the well-known Castle Rock in the upper McKenzie valley, easily visible from the highway. Death Ball is nearest Castle Rock. Thor's Hammer being the most westerly of the three.

For some score of years the name of Death Ball has been alternately attached to each mountain. This past year the Obsidians climbed Thor's Hammer, thinking that it was the other peak they had scaled. To make matters worse, the old maps through a typographical error named the mountain Death Ball.

The story of the naming of Death Ball is told by Mr. Dunn in the following words:

"The origin of the name is a classic of the upper McKenzie valley, where men are still living who essayed the leaden qualities of a batch of biscuits to which the ironic designation of 'death balls' was given. The story was first recounted to me way back in '93 by my room-mate at Harvard, a member of the identical surveying crew that camped at the foot of the mountain destined to get its christening from the cook's failure to satisfy really good taste. This reconteur was Arthur J. Collier, son of the revered Dr. George Collier of Oregon's pioneer faculty and brother of the commandant of the surveying crew, Charles M. Collier, for so many years county surveyor of Lane."

To explain the naming of Thor's Hammer Mr. Dunn writes as follows: ". . . when my family and I began to frequent the McKenzie localities, the peak across from Blue River was unnamed. With a somewhat sentimental whim I took it upon myself to establish a proper appellative and secured the approbation of all the available inhabitants of Blue River for the name Thor's Hammer. It was suggested by the fancy that the two great crags on the eastern slope below the summit of the peak were the fragments of the Thunder God's hammer when he hurled it last."

Mr. Dunn continues by expressing the hope that with the revision of the map by C. C. Olson for the Willamette forest the confusion which has arisen concerning the names and locations of these two peaks will be eliminated. The name "Thor's Hammer" has never been registered and this is thought by Mr. Dunn to account for much of the error which has been made in the names of the mountains.

Cigarette Ad Bill May Be Initiated

A bill to prevent cigarette advertising in this state will be initiated prior to the election in November, 1935, E. F. Atchley, head of the Oregon Anti-Cigarette league said Monday. At a recent meeting of the league in Portland a short time ago this step was decided upon.

While the election is a long way off, it was thought advisable to begin the campaign early in hopes of working up sentiment in favor of the bill, Mr. Atchley said.

The state legislature might be asked to pass such a bill, but it is realized that this may be hard to accomplish and it is altogether likely that the people will be asked to pass upon the measure, the anti-cigarette worker said.

Fish-porters in the Billingsgate Market, London, wear peculiar heavy leather hats which weigh between 5 and 6 pounds each; 14 hours' work is required to make one of these hats, which contain hundreds of nails.

EXECUTIVE MEET C. E. UNION HAS

The Lane County union of the Christian Endeavor society held an executive committee meeting Sunday afternoon in the chapel of Central Presbyterian church to make plans for a rally and to elect officers to replace those who have resigned.

The rally is due to come within the month and will be held probably at Creswell. If it can not be held there it will be at Pleasant Hill. Dorothy Johnson, Vetsa Orrick, both of Eugene, and Bill Cox, Springfield, are arranging for the rally.

Bill Cox of Springfield was elected a vice-president of the county union and Mina Peterson, Eugene, the intermediate superintendent.

Ruth Coleman resigned as lookout superintendent because of her recent election as vice-president of the state Evangelical young people's conference. A successor in her position will be named by the C. E. group later.

Rev. Milton S. Weber, one of the pastors working with the 3-C camps in the Eugene district, announced that the Christian Endeavor society could aid with the program for entertainment of the 3-C boys by contributing the C. E. World and other religious literature. The literature is to be left in a box at the C. P. chapel.

Work on Highway in Cottage Grove Urged

Resolutions urging the county court to speed action on contemplated improvements of the Pacific highway through Cottage Grove were adopted by the Grove chamber of commerce and the city council, it was announced Saturday. The resolutions were presented to the county court.

Following is the text of the resolutions as adopted:

"Whereas, the federal appropriation is now available for the construction and completion of improvements to be made on Pacific highway, and,

"Whereas, the immediate need in this territory for relief of the unemployed is evident, and employment will be necessary for the coming winter, for the peace and happiness and general welfare of those now unemployed, and that employment may not be a burden to the taxpayer of this community, county or state, and,

"Whereas, the benefits so derived from the immediate construction of said improvements, will be a great benefit, not only to the unemployed, but to every taxpayer in the city of Cottage Grove, inasmuch as it will stimulate the payment of taxes and become a benefit to our school district, our city, our county and to our state,

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the county court in the county of Lane, state of Oregon, use every effort and urge that the contemplated improvements on Pacific highway in the city of Cottage Grove begin and that the work be started at the earliest possible moment, and,

"Be it further resolved, that other organizations be and they are hereby invited to join in this appeal to the county court and governing bodies."

Wages Case Heard In Court Monday

The case of A. W. Merkey against the Consolidated Lucky Boy Mining company, involving wages alleged due the plaintiff, was heard before Judge G. F. Skipworth in circuit court Monday forenoon and that of H. M. Bicknell against Goldie Eustad and others was being heard at the afternoon session.

Tuesday is motion and divorce day and Wednesday the case of Wilmer C. Lowe against Rube Delemater will come up.

MONDAY PROGRAMS

HEILIG — "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble," with George Sidney and Charlie Murray. Last day.

McDONALD — Double bill, "Voltaire," starring George Arliss, plus "Midnight Club," with George Raft, Clive Brook and Helen Vinson. Ends Wednesday.

COLONIAL — "The Kiss Before the Mirror," with Frank Morgan, Paul Lukas, Gloria Stuart and Nancy Carroll. Last times Tuesday.

REX—Double bill, "The Savage Girl," with Rochelle Hudson, plus "Elmer the Great," with Joe E. Brown. Ends Monday.

STATE — "Today We Live," with Joan Crawford, Gary Cooper, Robert Young and Franchot Tone. Last day.

Great acting and a new angle in plots features "The Kiss Before the Mirror," now showing at the Colonial theatre. Although based promarily on the "unwritten law," the film in no way resembles the customary triangle drama, and the new twist given the plot makes for thrilling entertainment. Frank Morgan, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart give superb performances in the leads.

"Today We Live," is the moving, pathetic and at times inspiring story of a soldier's hopeless love, suddenly blossoming into fulfillment, only to be crushed again. The picture closes Monday at the State, and Joan Crawford gives her greatest performance as the girl in the case. There is some marvelous aerial and naval photography, and the supporting roles handled by Robert Young, Gary Cooper and Franchot Tone are excellently played.

A sparkling, gay story is "Midnight Club," featured until Wednesday on a double bill with "Voltaire" at the McDonald theater. George Raft and Clive Brook do grand work, while Alison Skipworth comes through with a killing comedy performance. Helen Vinson, as feminine accomplice of a band of jewel robbers headed by Clive Brook, was never more appealing. Although the film is dramatic, it has a pleasant air of sophistication, and never approaches the average "crook" play. George Arliss, the great English actor, is featured in "Voltaire."

The Rex has two comedies on their Monday bill, "The Savage Girl," with Rochelle Hudson, plus "Elmer the Great," starring Joe E. Brown. Freuler Films, who are responsible for "Savage Girl," tried to make it a thriller, and an excellent comedy resulted. The fact that the picture is not consciously funny only adds to the humorous result. "Elmer the Great" is the old baseball story, with Joe E. Brown giving one of his best performances. Patricia Ellis plays the feminine lead.

The Cohens and the Kellys will chase your blues away at the Heilig Monday. The two popular comedians were never funnier than in "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble," where they are cast as a pair of aspiring but drunken seamen. The romantic lead is played by pretty Maureen O'Sullivan, with Frank Albertson opposite her. If you wish a 2 hour laugh, don't miss this.

ARLISS IS SUPERB IN VOLTAIRE RO

George Arliss, most distinguished actor of the American screen, gives a superb portrayal of Voltaire in the picture of that title which opens at the McDonald theatre Sunday. Not since "Disraeli" has Arliss had a role worthy of his talents, carrying a strong dramatic interest, lights and shadows, opportunity for master acting, and nothing less to say, takes full advantage of these

George Arliss

Voltaire was the guiding spirit of the French Revolution, and his vitriolic pen and sarcastic tongue held even Louis XV, excellently played by Reginald Owen, in abeyance. Doris Kenyon is a devastating Mme. Pompadour and although her role is more pathetic than same historians would have it, it is a perfectly acted part in a film which is almost devoid of imperfections.

Margaret Lindsay gives a satisfactory performance as Nanette, daughter of a lord unjustly executed, a role for whom the action of the film revolves, while Theodore Newton is good in a small part as her lover. Alan Mowbray, cast as the Duke De Sartine, a grand villain, intent on sending Voltaire to the Bastile.

However, the picture is completely dominated by Arliss both in plot and acting, and the barbed wittiness for which Voltaire was famous plays a large part. The film has scope, realistic, and catches the spirit of the times, troubled as they were by the tyranny of the aristocracy and the discontent of the people, fanned ablaze by the "torch" of Voltaire, his tongue and ink.

The picture is one of the truly great historical dramas, and should not be missed. In the same bill with "Voltaire" is "Midnight Club," sophisticated drama of English jewel robbers. It, too, affords excellent entertainment.—R. W. J.

M'Kenzie Surfacing Work Progresses

The crew laying the bituminous macadam surfacing on the McKenzie highway between Doyle Hill and Nimrod had reached a point about distance east of Vida Sunday, according to Eugeneans on the upper river today. The crew began at Nimrod and is working west. It was expected that Vida would be reached by Monday night.

Rainy weather has delayed the work to some extent, but if weather is reasonably good during the rest of September it is expected that the contract will be finished by October 1 or soon thereafter.

County Receives Check for $22

Lane county Monday received from the state highway department a check for $2268.71 to pay for work done by the county for the state during the past few months.

The money is for work done on several of the secondary highways in different parts of the county.

South Carolina is known as the Palmetto state.
