CHALLENGE TO LABOR-INDUSTRY.

IN a time like the present the horizon is fairly cluttered with signs and portents. None of these is much more significant than the sudden epidemic of strikes—an epidemic that has broken out in the last month or so and that is giving the federal doctors one of the busiest seasons they will ever have.

Whatever else these strikes may mean, they at least prove that industry is no longer stagnant. They didn't put in an appearance during those dull months when we were at the bottom of the depression. They're coming now for a number of reasons, but chiefly because things are picking up. Men don't strike when the plant is closed down for lack of orders.

And the strikes present—to a nation which already has a century's supply of problems to settle in a few months—a new problem; one that carries a double-barreled challenge, one barrel for industry and the other for labor.

It is a challenge that must be read in the light of the NRA program. The National Labor Board's ruling, which emphasizes the fact that the law guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining means exactly what it says, is part of the background for these strikes, and it conditions their significance.

First of all, the problem challenges the directors of industry. It is a test of their spirit of fairness, of their willingness to co-operate in the tremendous experiment of the new deal. Labor has gained a great victory in the Industrial Recovery Act; the industrialist who seeks reprisals and wants to "put labor in its place" is piling up trouble, not only for himself but for the entire country.

Secondly, the problem challenges labor itself. It puts upon labor the necessity of developing some broad-gauge statesmen. It calls on labor to take the long view of things, to exercise patience in places where patience comes hard, to get rid of the racketeer and the self-seeker.

Both of these challenges must be met. The present outbreak of strikes could, if unchecked, lead to a catastrophic situation. It can, if the leaders of the contending forces meet the test with intelligence and patriotism, be the forerunner of a new era in American industrial history, an era in which both sides can profit as never before.

PROMOTING CHILD HEALTH.

IT is encouraging to read that Labor Secretary Frances Perkins is undertaking to tackle the problem of restoring the health of children who have suffered by the depression.

Figures presented to Miss Perkins indicate that no less than one-fifth of all the children in the country are now showing signs of under-nourishment, lack of proper medical care and inadequate housing.

That statement speaks for itself and needs no comment.

Now Miss Perkins has called a meeting of child health leaders, to convene in Washington on Oct. 6 under the auspices of the Children's Bureau.

To say that this conference will have plenty of work to do is to put it very mildly. It will have to find a way to meet one of the most distressing situations imaginable. The whole country will wish it all kinds of success.

COMIC RELIEF

PERSONS with democratic tendencies sometimes wonder just why England continues to support the luxury of a peerage. Now and then some individualistic member of the peerage will unwittingly furnish the answer—or, at any rate, an answer.

There is, for instance, the Duke of Devonshire, who made a little speech at a horse show in Derbyshire the other day, in the course of which he unleashed a diatribe old Tory's dialke of the age of modern inventions. The auto was the chief object of his attack; he called autos "foul, stinking things" and "horrible brutes making life hideous," and he added:

"When I first knew this horse show we came here as gentlemen, and not as crashing cads."

And there you have it. It must be almost worth while for a nation to support a system which produces old gentlemen who can make speeches like that.

SPECTACLE AND WARNING.

THE Navy Department is now preparing to send six or 12 seaplanes on a mass flight from San Diego to Honolulu, according to recent reports. Such a flight would be the longest single over-water hop ever attempted by a mass formation.

It is also reported that if this flight is successful, a group of at least 25 planes may be sent to Europe next summer, as a gesture to balance General Balbo's flight here this year.

However much the layman may quibble about the utility, or otherwise, of such flights, they at least make gorgeous and exciting spectacles. Furthermore, they are excellent demonstrations of military strength. A nation that puts on such flights tacitly warns its potential foes what they can expect if they start anything.

OTHERS MAY FOLLOW.

ONE way of getting a line on the things our government is doing these days is to find out how they look to people in other lands. It is rather instructive to note that the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, for instance, has unanimously endorsed the NRA program in the United States and has urged the adoption of a similar plan for Canada.

A few days before this happened, the Trades Union Congress of England passed a resolution calling upon the British government to adopt similar measures. The South African parliament is considering its own NRA plan.

The NRA, of course, is not a cure-all, and it has handed us some problems which will probably keep us busy for a long time. But foreigners find that it is a program of vast promise, and they would like to copy it themselves. The fact speaks volumes for the impression which the campaign is making on disinterested observers.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Gov. Robert H. Gore has returned to Puerto Rico and it isn't believed that he will stay on the job very long.

Gore isn't happy. The Puerto Ricans are riding him. The administration wishes it could think of someone to handle a difficult assignment.

Far from empty-handed, the government took back about $4,500,000 in promises of public works, home loan and R. F. C. money. But the politics of the island won't let up in their attempts to make his life miserable and Gore, who is thin-skinned and unable to handle them, is understood to be fed up.

Gore's troubles have been widely publicized and some of them were his own fault. Others were traceable to a bad situation, and to the fact that Gore virtually had to govern alone, other American officials not having been appointed.

The administration is thinking seriously about Puerto Rico, whose basic trouble is physical hunger and starvation. Hunger is universal among the common people and the small wealthy class is not subject to an income tax.

The island is so crowded that it's impossible to go anywhere there without hearing voices and there's twice as much labor as is needed for crops, which only offer seasonal jobs. It's a country of itinerant agricultural laborers, where no one owns much and the total income of a working family doesn't exceed $200 a year. Subsistence is largely on imported polished rice and beans. Puerto Rico's 1,500,000 people have the highest tuberculosis rate in the world.

No American governor is likely to be generally popular there, although some do better than others.

One complaint to the NRA tells about an electric light bulb salesman, operating in nearby Maryland, whose packages were covered with Blue Eagle stamps. After the packages were opened, purchasers found the words "Made in Japan."

Secretary of State Hull is a lot happier now that his friend, ex-Congressman R. Walton Moore of Virginia, has succeeded Ray Moley as assistant secretary of state. He likes and respects Undersecretary William Phillips and the other assistant secretaries.

Every secretary of state has had a personal friend under him whose judgment he can trust. Moore is 74 years old and not very busy, but he will have important old jobs which require study and many conferences and which Hull hasn't time to handle personally. He may be assigned to the debt question.

As Hull has picked Moore, so Secretary Stimson selected the late Joe Cotton, his former law partner, and Secretary Kellogg picked Robert E. Olds, another former law partner—both as assistant secretaries.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

NOT A CURE-ALL
 (Salem Capital-Journal)

SENATOR THOMAS of Oklahoma, leader of inflationist forces in Congress, proposes the march of a million men on Washington to demand the president use his powers to start the printing press to inflate the currency.

Senator Thomas' aims are the same as those of Mr. Roosevelt—both want higher purchasing power for the people as a restorative of industry and agriculture. The president is on record as saying:

"The administration has the definite object of raising commodity prices to such an extent that those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of dollars which they borrowed."

The difference between the senator and the executive is the difference of methods to attain the end sought. Mr. Roosevelt has probably given more study to inflation than anyone else, but he hasn't yet been convinced that inflation will do the work—and many others think along the same lines. At any rate, the president is evidently determined to give the NRA a chance to put men back to work and raise wages, the AAA to get rid of depressing crop surpluses to raise prices, stimulate export expansion and to release the billions frozen in bank files.

Prosperity cannot be restored overnight. The effect of four years of slump cannot be overcome in a few months, but a start towards recovery has been made, and while a controlled inflation has been resorted to, there is plenty of time for other inflation in case economic planning fails. A million men marching on Washington would not spell a cure-all nor would it force the president's hand against his judgment.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

THERE is a time when any woman thought herself quite capable of taking care of a child and helping to rear it.

Now so much has been learned about child training, about proper nutrition in childhood and similar subjects associated with the development of the child, that the care of the child has become a distinct profession. There are in this country, as well as abroad, so-called mothercraft schools and other organizations for training women in this special vocation.

Once upon a time the position of nurse or governess was considered among the menial occupations, but today it is recognized that the proper training for this work is useful regardless of the future plans of the girl who undertakes it.

As was recently pointed out by Miss Liddiard, leader of this form of education in Great Britain, if the girl marries after having had this training, she becomes a competent and careful mother; if she does not marry, she may carry on in this occupation for many years with a surety of a good home life and an important influence upon boys and girls of the future.

It is pointed out that the girl that takes such training should first of all be healthy because parents do not want to trust their children to delicate or unhealthy people.

The girl must be practical. She must have not only a sentimental love for children but an enthusiasm for the work balanced by steadiness in her character and attitude.

Many of the British schools demand the equivalent of our high school education before a girl may enter for this occupation. Some of the schools limit themselves to the care of children from birth to the age of two years, whereas other schools train the girls for the care of the children up to 12 years of age.

In the school that specializes in the care of infants, the student first learns general principles, then spends time in nurseries and diet kitchens. In the diet kitchen she is taught to be clean, to measure accurately, to prepare vegetables and all of the special foods eaten by infants.

She also learns the simple points of first aid and hygiene and the element of sewing for the baby. Later each of the trainees is given actual practice for a period of three weeks in the care of the baby.

One of the most eminent authorities in this field, Sir Truby King, who is credited with having brought infant mortality rates in New Zealand down to the lowest of all in the world, has this to say about the child's first six years:

"Every child is more or less made or marred before the ordinary school age of five to six years. These years are of far greater formative and constructive importance than the next 60 years, not only from the standpoint of bodily form, physique and freedom from disease, but also as concerns the mind, moral nature and whole future habits and character of the individual."
