where 2000 socialist families once lived.

WOMEN, CHILDREN KILLED VIENNA, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Women and children were fed to the flames of civil war today as government artillery smashed the Karl Marx apartment building housing 2,000 socialist families.

No one knows how many were killed. The howitzers apparently smashed the third and fourth floors of the greatest apartment building in Europe. The middle arch collapsed.

The shelling of the $4,000,000 structure was only one corner of the aspect of Austria today while the forces of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss struggled through bloody streets to put down the rebellion of the socialist party.

Apparently at least 200 have been killed outside Vienna.

Battles raged at Steyr, Graz, and Linz as well as Vienna. At Steyr, sharp fighting broke out again early this morning when socialists stationed machine guns on top a hill and commanding the town.

Other forces of socialists were in possession of the great war-time munitions plant. Government forces charged the plant repeatedly in a desperate attempt to take the position.

Men fell, dead and wounded, but there was no time nor opportunity to count the casualties.

The battle at the Karl Marx building was as horrible as some of the veterans who fought had seen in the days of the World War.

Machineguns blazed from the windows of the houses of laborers at the soldiers who sought to enter.

The government forces found machineguns, hand grenades, and tear needed, as the soup should not be too thick. Bind with the flour and butter. Cook 2 or 3 minutes good. Season with salt, pepper and paprika. Serve plain or with croutons.

Croutons are made by cutting stale bread into slices about 1-3 inch thick, and remove all crusts. Spread with butter, cut in cubes and bake in the oven until delicately brown. Put in the soup at time of serving or they may be passed in a separate dish.—Mrs. James A. Welch, 1207 Lincoln St., Eugene.

Tomato Soup 2 tablespoons butter 2 tablespoons flour 1 quart milk Salt and pepper to taste and a pinch of soda.

1 quart canned tomatoes. Strain the tomatoes through a sieve and put on the stove and let come to a boil while you make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Add a pinch of soda to the hot strained tomatoes and then add the white sauce. Stir thoroughly with an egg beater. Add salt and pepper to suit taste and also a little sugar if desired. Will serve about six and will not curd as most tomato soups do.—Mrs. Norman Baebelder, Black Butte Route, Cottage Grove.

Potato Soup 3 cups diced potatoes 1 cup of celery 1/2 cup of onions 2 tablespoons butter Milk Salt and pepper. Cook potatoes and celery and onions separately. When they are not too done, put them together, nearly cover them with milk. Add butter, salt and pepper to taste, and simmer until rather thick.—Evel Polley, 1504 Columbus St., Eugene.

Lamb Broth 2 pounds neck of lamb 2 quarts cold water 1 teaspoon salt 1 small turnip 1 small carrot 1 small onion 2 stalks celery 2 tablespoons barley 1 teaspoon minced parsley Additional salt and pepper to taste. Wipe meat, cut into small pieces and place in sauce pan with cold water, bring slowly to boiling point, add salt, simmer one hour, skimming occasionally. Add vegetables, cut into dice, also barley and cook until vegetables are quite tender. Season to taste and add parsley just before serving. Serves six to eight.—Mrs. H. H. Brusean, 87 West 8th Street, Eugene.

gas insufficient to batter down the stubborn resistance. So they unlimbered howitzers. The big shells ripped into the concrete structure. Cement dust rose in the air. Whole corners of the building disappeared.

Following up the artillery attack, government forces swarmed into the courtyard.

Socialists continued their firing from machine gun nests. Little fire also was directed against the attackers.

Hand grenades fighting developed as the combatants came to close quarters.

LIQUOR PRICES STORY

of this district for the state liquor control commission.

"The Eugene store will not be placed in operation till the issue of the location is settled definitely," he said. "In the several other towns in the district, the sites are selected and as there is no trouble there we will install the stocks as soon as possible, now that the act has been upheld in the supreme court."

The board of directors of the Eugene chamber of commerce decided to take no part in the controversy Monday night when the matter was presented to them. It had been pointed out that with meetings of women, girls and boys in the chamber, it might be better not to have the store in the same building.

Tuesday night the city council was to consider the matter from a traffic standpoint, but it was thought unlikely any protest would be made.

The council's problem is more a matter of police and while the police committee feels it may be necessary to have additional officers to police the present location, the council is faced with the problem of lack of funds to hire additional officers.

Liquor agencies about the county probably will be opened before the Eugene state store is in operation, Mr. Morris said. There is less to be done to put the agencies in business and their stocks will not be so extensive.

"There has been some criticism as to the price schedule for liquors, but the public should bear in mind the fact that liquor supplies at the present are limited and the price therefore is higher than it probably will be later on," the supervisor said.

"The commission intends to sell its liquor at the lowest price possible. This is shown by the fact the commission has declared it will revise the price in accordance with the development of the business as we go along."

Mr. Morris stressed the fact that liquor to be sold by the control board would be of high grade, considerably better than any bootleg liquor and as good as that which was sold before prohibition.

Old-timers declared that the average whiskey bought in the saloon era, called "bar whiskey," was cut and blended by the bar tender and put before the customer in an unlabeled bottle. Always good whiskey has been more costly than this type of "cut" liquor, they declare.

PRISON BREAK STORY

that the men made their knives in the shop where license plates are manufactured. They evidently buried them in the prison yard, digging them up Sunday, which is "yard day."

The planned escape, which ended in mid-afternoon yesterday with bullet-torn bodies lying about the prison yard and with turnkeys suffering from knife wounds inside the cell blocks, began in the office of F. W. Jackson, head turnkey.

De Long, one of those killed, and Frank Butler, another long-term prisoner, walked in and accosted Jackson and others followed.

"Sorry to do this, but we're doing too much time," Jackson later quoted De Long as saying, as the men threatened them with their knives and other improvised weapons.

The men then leaped on him, binding him and his assistant, H. M. Williams, with wire around their necks. Jackson was then rushed into a solitary cell, and then a suddenly pulled out again. A telephone had rung in his office.

"The warden asked if everything was all right," he said later. "I had to tell him 'yes.' Then, to give him a hint, I said:

"Do you want me to come out on the lawn or to the front office?" Of course I couldn't do that.

Then, the mad break for freedom began, and William Truman, chief of the identification bureau, together with the two men and four others as shields, the convicts left the cell building, headed in a body for the main gate.

Meanwhile, Warden McCauley had become suspicious about the telephone call, a hurriedly-dispatched body of guards was rushed to the walls, and the convicts were seen below.

Heating, the little band started to turn back, when within less than 100 feet of their objective, and a rifle cracked from the walls. The bullet spurted over the shoulder of Truman, and Clark fell to the ground, fatally wounded.

"Just as the shot was fired, I felt a muscular jerk in my shoulder," Truman said later. "I thought 'they've got me too.'"

Robert Bain, 22, one of the convicts, leaped into a window well and was shot three times.

The firing continued, and three other convicts fell. The sharp shooters on the walls were aiming carefully, to miss the prison men.

The firing let up, and one of the guards on the walls shouted for the convicts to "give yourselves up, and lie flat on the ground, or - - ."

Terrified and with the dead and wounded around them, the remaining convicts complied, and within a few minutes guards were among them, disarming them. They were shortly rushed into solitary confinement.

night. The man apparently had just started operations. A test of the moonshine, made by the operator's own hydrometer found on the premises, showed it to be 45 per cent and 90 proof, officers said.

City and county officers announced Tuesday a vigorous campaign would be launched against the expected boom in moonshining here and that persons apprehended operating illicit distilleries would be dealt with severely.

Chief of Police Carl Bergman said Tuesday that an increase in activity of moonshiners "was to be expected," and that city officers would be on the alert to hold it down as much as possible.

KLAMATH KILLING STORY

The shots were believed from the gun held in Horan's hand inasmuch as both revolvers had two empty shells in the chambers.

Horan was hit twice. One bullet struck his chest and entered the heart. The other shattered his left arm.

Manning telephoned Rex McMillan, deputy sheriff at the county jail, telling him to "come and get me."

"Ralph and I have had an argument and there has been some shooting. He took a couple of shots at me and I shot him. I'm afraid he is dead," Manning told McMillan.

The veteran trial attorney, once associated with Horan in a law firm, waited for the officers in the anteroom. The shooting occurred in Manning's private office as the two men apparently conversed across a desk.

Both Manning's and Horan's chairs were pushed aside and Horan's body was found face down directly in front of the desk. Dr. George Adler, coroner, said he died instantly.

McCulloch, who also has been associated with Manning in legal practice, said Horan had made the visit late yesterday afternoon at Manning's request. He did not know the nature of the call but presumed it was merely some matter of routine business.

KNOX DECISION STORY

ment, it was not contemplated that a state be created within a state.

Home Rule Not Feasible Relative to the home rule amendment itself, the opinion of Justice Belt held that "since the clear intention of the people in the adoption of the prohibition amendments has been ascertained, the court should function by giving effect to such intention and not invoke a somewhat shadowy rule of construction frowned upon by a coordinate branch of the government."

"Therefore having reached the conclusion that Article XI, section 2 of the constitution, relative to the control and regulation of alcoholic beverages by municipalities, was repealed and that it was not revived by repeal of the prohibition amendments, we might well conclude our consideration of this phase of the case."

The opinion further held that the title of the act was sufficient to cover the subject matter of the statute, this contention on the part of the city of Klamath Falls was disposed of with the statement that "the title need not constitute an index to all matters contained in the act in order to meet the requirement of the constitutional provision."

"Finally," the opinion held, "it is argued that the act is a revenue measure and for that reason does not become operative for ninety days after it is approved by the governor. The main purpose of the act is to control and regulate traffic in alcoholic beverages. The provisions relating to revenue are only incidental to the main purpose of the act and are necessary in order properly to administer the same."

In emphasizing the criminal right to the state to supersede the home rule amendment, Justice Belt declared that "the heart and soul of the home rule amendment pertaining to the delegation of rights to municipalities is expressed in the provision such rights are 'subject to the constitution and criminal laws of the state of Oregon.'"

A coroner's inquest over the remains of Herschel O'Quinn, Springfield youth who was killed on a highway Sunday morning when struck by a car driven by Harry Neel of Cottage Grove, Tuesday afternoon.

Coroner Charles P. Poole was in charge of the inquest and District Attorney W. H. Brooks appeared for the state. A large number of witnesses were being examined.
