MCKENZIE PASS OPENING.

FOR many years, The Register-Guard has urged the state highway commission to experiment with a snow plow service to keep the McKenzie Pass open. The commission will never have a better opportunity than it has right now. Obstacles who have been exploring along the summit report only a little snow from the top of Deadhorse hill on this side to Windy Point on the east slope. On the level stretches there is only a foot or two of snow instead of the usual eight or ten feet, and in the cuts where 30 to 40 feet of snow may pile up, there are just a few very small drifts.

One plow going in right now could clean the pass out in a couple of days and be in position to make a prompt cleanup on such snow as the March storms may bring to the pass. Reports from Bend indicate the engineers are loath to put a snow plow to work right now because the roadway is too soft. But if they wait for more snow to pile up, they will find that alternate thawing and freezing the next few weeks will change the snow to pack-ice. Then plowing will become difficult and expensive. If the pass is to be opened early this year the time to get busy is now.

It will be an easy matter to shut off traffic through the pass till the roadway can be put in reasonably good shape. Likewise it will not be difficult to barricade the pass to travelers if any serious spring blizzards blow up. A little money spent now in plowing out the pass will mean big savings on future snow plowing and thousands of dollars in general benefits through early restoration of regular traffic. Even if regular traffic were to be held back till April 1 or April 15 there would be a 60 to 90 day gain in the use of a $3,000,000 road investment and much increased business on both sides of the Cascades.

This year there is no shortage of snow plows. It has been a light winter on the Mt. Hood road, the Wapinitia pass, the Dalles-California grades, the Crater Lake roads, and the Blue Mountains. In Eugene we should get behind our friends on the McKenzie river and in Central Oregon. The request for early action to open our pass and keep it open is very reasonable.

"GYP," THE PUP, PASSES.

A GREAT many people in Eugene knew "Gyp," the faithful "pup" of the George W. Davis family. The George W. Davis family is a friendly family and it is the lifework of the dog in such a family to sustain the family reputation. For 16 years, which is an enormous time compared with the brief span usually allotted to dogs, "Gyp" did his duty devotedly. Tricks he had for little Geraldine Davis and all the neighbor's children, and a friendly "woof" or a caper for proper visitors and newboys and letter carriers and milkmen calling on the Davis household. For the occasional "tramp" or possible evil-doer, "Gyp" had his special note of warning. Though he was not famous as a fighting dog, there was always the feeling that "Gyp" would do his bit in any emergency.

Now "Gyp" is gone from Lincoln street. In his old age, with his joints stiffening and his eyes dimming, the modern traffic "got" him. In the neighborhood where the Davises live there is much genuine mourning. In Dog Paradise, if there is such a place, "Gyp" is chasing rubber balls and fishing sticks out of sparkling, celestial ponds and gladdening the hearts of celestial children. If there is a Dog Paradise—But then "Gyp" was wiser than a great many "humans." With a few bones and a warm place by the fire or nights and good friends, he made his paradise as he went along. "A dog's life!" What an expression!

"Gyp" was "just dog," George Davis says, antecedents and ancestry quite uncertain (which may account for his cosmopolitan disposition). Of course, the Davises can get another dog, a fancy dog, a thoroughbred maybe, but in each family there is only one "Gyp" or "Sport" or "Tam" or "Snoozer" in a generation.

A man in Tacoma, Wash., threaded a needle with 75 strands, and one in Reno, Nev., put 91 strands of thread through a needle's eye. But they couldn't put one strand through, if their wives asked them to do it.

SUPPORTS GEHLHAR POLICY.

HAISEY, Ore.—(To the Editor.)—In your issue of Friday, Feb. 9, you print a piece in which the "Creamersmen Hit Back at Gehlhar." Glenn A. Harnden refutes the statement of Mr. Gehlhar that the cooperatives plants insisted on a three-cent spread, and etc.

Well, maybe I don't know anything about this racket but I am enclosing two cream statements. One (the pink) from the Albany Cooperative, and the other from a private Portland creamery. You will note the Coops not only took 3c but went one better and took 4c. This was the very same grade of cream and should have brought the same money any place. So I don't know that Mr. Gehlhar is so far wrong.

A. M. RAYAGE.

Notes: Mr. Savage's slip from the Portland creamery shows 14.55 pounds of butterfat marketed at 18 cents or $2.62 with a price reduction of 10 cents, leaving $2.52 net. The slips which he says is from the Albany Co-op shows 15.12 pounds of butterfat on which he was allowed only 14 cents a pound of $2.12 net. Both bore the same date, Jan. 10, 1934.

A LIQUOR ORDINANCE.
 (Corvallis Gazette-Times)

THE League of Oregon Cities has sent every city in Oregon a model ordinance by which to put the Knox law into effect throughout the state. We have not seen it, but it was drawn up by the city attorney of Portland and we presume therefore that it is all right. The idea of uniform ordinances throughout the state is a good one and it is to be hoped that all cities can adopt this one as nearly like it as drawn as possible. City councilmen have a serious responsibility on their hands. They cannot adopt ordinances to suit their own particular ideas no matter how honest and worthy may be their intentions. It seems to us they have to take into consideration first what is in the best interest of the community, and in doing so they have to recognize that towns are no longer isolated by distance as they were 15 years ago. It is nearer to Portland now than it used to be to Independence. No city can control the liquor situation in its own community by putting an ordinary fence around the town. It can't be done any more and any effort to try it will be certain to make conditions worse than they would be if all followed the plan laid down by the Knox law. The city which attempts to be dry will make a serious mistake and well intentioned councilmen will only make matters in their community worse.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 (Register-Guard Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—When you come to Washington, you'll find the first visible evidence of the New Deal in your own hotel.

You'll be surprised—if you haven't been here this last year—to find the manager happy, the bellhops grinning, and a lot of other people staying in the same place. You even may have trouble getting a room.

A year ago the lobbies were deserted and the establishments were broke. Since March 4 the New Deal has been paying off hotel mortgages all over town.

The big places have run almost at capacity and sometimes were full-up in summer for the first time on record.

Code business, federal disbursements in dozens of directions, contacts and lobbying with new federal agencies reaching to every state, patronage, more national conventions, curiosity—these are reasons.

In the lobbies you sense the new spirit of things. Everyone seems to have a feeling of going somewhere. The click of portable typewriters echoes in the corridors, with the click of cocktail shakers. Many rooms become impromptu offices.

Some guests have set up personal office suites, including Frank Walker of NEC and Joe Guffy at the Mayflower and George Bronson Rea, Manchukuo's agent, and Henry L. Doherty of the Shoreham.

"Suffers" to Play Safe
 Herbert Benjamin, veteran Communist hunger march leader, says he avoids even cheap hotels because reports always spread that he's living extravagantly at a swell one.

Last time I saw him he was in a low-price restaurant, working on some vegetable soup, a hamburger sandwich, and a glass of beer.

Here and There
 Around Town: Handsome Rex Tugwell of the "brain trust" totting his tray at the Department of Agriculture cafeteria. . . . Bald-headed, jovial Thomas H. Beck, president of Collier's, and tall, spectacled Ding, the cartoonist, two voluble conversationalists, talking each other's heads off. They're the works on the president's new commission for restoration of wild game.

Mrs. Roosevelt, driving out with her first cousin, Mrs. Joseph A. McKim, member of Connecticut's legislature. That's one republican cousin who maintains affectionate relationship with the White House. She's a sister of Theodore Douglas Robinson, one of the five assistant navy secretaries from the Roosevelt family, and a niece of T. R.

NRA: Ed McGrady, Johnson's right-hand man, stalking out and throwing his topcoat back so he can jam his hands in his hip pockets. . . . Attractive, blond Mrs. Don Riechberg and her little daughter, waiting for big, bald Don in his office at the end of the day.

Mrs. Mary Ramsey of Consumers' Advisory Board, hustling down a corridor in her daily different dress, but always the same hat. . . . Frank R. Wilson, expert Blue Eagle publicity campaign organizer, thinking of leaving soon, because publicity days at NRA are over.

A questionnaire as to feasibility of a "place your order now" campaign drew a favorable majority, but not enough enthusiasm to warrant one.

One Sleigh in Capital
 Snow here is something seldom. Folks who telephoned around trying to rent a sleigh after the recent blizzard located only one in the whole capital—and that would cost $12 an hour.

Mrs. Veverka, wife of the Czechoslovak minister, has painted a picture of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, Smithsonian anthropologist, and is one of the few here who can pronounce his name. He's a Czech, too.

Secretary Frances Perkins received a damned-up shower of calling cards after she gave up keeping her home address secret. She lives in a Georgetown house with Mrs. Ramsey.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

YOUR foods have been classified according to their ability to give you a sense of satisfaction. When the stomach and the upper parts of the intestines contain food and when the digestive processes are going on normally, you have a feeling of satisfaction. You no longer perceive the sense of hunger.

This is not wholly because your stomach and bowels are distended, for it has been shown that merely distending the stomach will not develop this feeling. It is a combination of the two factors.

For example, meat remains in the stomach from three to four and one-half hours and stimulates a certain amount of secretion of gastric juices; hard boiled eggs remain about two and one-half hours; soft boiled eggs about one and one-half hours, and raw eggs slightly more than one hour.

The same amount of bread by weight as meat will remain in the stomach two and one-half hours, or one to two hours less than meat. Both substances will develop about the same amount of secretion of digestive juices.

Meat seems to have some special ability towards stimulating secretion of stomach juices.

It has been found that bread and potatoes rank low for giving satisfaction if eaten by themselves, but when combined with either meat or fat, their value is increased greatly.

This may be one of the reasons why bread and butter frequently are so taken together.

Green vegetables do not have the same satisfying value as meat, but sugar gives a distinct sense of satisfaction, and a meal containing a sweet remains longer in the stomach than one without.

Roughage in the form of coarse, indigestible foods is not particularly satisfying, because such foods pass rapidly through the stomach. Moreover, roughage seems to be responsible in some people for a considerable amount of abdominal discomfort and even pain.

Some people simply cannot tolerate coarse and indigestible foods.

It must be remembered that man is perhaps the only living being who regularly eats without being hungry. The animals eat only when they have a desire for food.

In the human being, the reaction toward food depends largely on the mental point of view as well as on the physiological factors involved.

It is simply because the human being has this choice that he must be especially careful in selecting his foods wisely.

THE COLD FACTS ABOUT COLDS!

What a Cold is and What is Required for Relief

Clearing Up a Subject on Which Much Misinformation Has Been Promulgated!

EVERY YEAR colds take a heavy toll in healthy, time and money. As a result of the prevalence of colds, much misinformation on the subject of colds has been spread about. There are so many "cures" for colds now that one wonders if there is anything good for anything else.

All kinds of self-appointed experts tell you what to do for a cold. Some tell you to soak your feet. Others tell you to fill your head with vapors. Still others tell you to wash your mouth and gargle. Still others advise chest rubs. Between them all you would be doing everything but painting yourself.

The joke of it—or rather the tragedy of it—is that these measures for the most part are like trying to cure dandruff by clipping the hair. They just don't reach the seat of the trouble.

An Internal Infection That May End in Flu!

It is well to remember what a cold is. A cold is an infection produced within the system by a germ, a germ so small that it will pass through the finest filter and hence it is easily spread. A cold, in other words, is an internal infection that may pave the way for other diseases, including flu.

A cold, therefore, plainly calls for internal treatment.

A cold also is something of a definite condition. Relief calls for certain definite effects. How, then, can a preparation that's good for half a dozen things besides colds be equally effective for colds? Yet medicines that are good for neuris, toothaches, halitosis, dandruff, etc., seven months of the year suddenly blossom out as cold remedies during the winter months! If there is anything that common sense dictates, it is a cold remedy for a cold.

The Four Effects Called For

Obviously, to get rid of a cold you must kill the infection within the system and drive out the poisonous matter it has created.

That calls for a remedy that will do certain definite things.

The remedy called for is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine because it does the four things necessary.

First, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly, the first step in expelling a cold.

Second, it combats the cold germs and fever in the system.

Third, it relieves the headache and grippiness feeling.

Fourth, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Safe to Take!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is absolutely safe to take. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippiness tablet of the world, the formula always keeping pace with Modern Medicine.

Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 50c and 50c. Good dealers won't try to talk you into something else for the sake of a few pennies more profit.

When a cold threatens, play the part of wisdom. Don't wait or waste time with makeshift methods, but get a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and start taking the tablets immediately. Taken in time they will usually expel a cold overnight and that's the action required for safety.
