

HARLAN TACTICS ON MILK PRICES MEET CRITICISM

Vigorous protest against the latest regulations for the Eugene milk shed as laid down by E. G. Harlan, chairman of the state milk board, is voiced by Mrs. R. L. Gawley, whose family operates a dairy on Route 1. Mrs. Gawley assails the milk code as a scheme to drive Grade A people out of the market and corner retail business for the creameries and pasteurizing plants.

Mrs. Gawley's statement follows: "There has been a constant under-cover warfare on the part of the creameries to drive out the Raw Milk producer-distributor. The high city license was one feature. They tried price cutting, as Tom Olsen said, 'to make the market attractive.' They tried Grade A raw milk pasteurized—that didn't take the business. The next move was the code lineup with the producer-shippers to help us run out these raw milk distributors. He is taking the business. One big producer-shipper told me that they'd 'throw' their milk into the creameries and help 'em run us out. The creameries tell the shipper that if he had all the business he could pay him more for his milk, true enough he could but would he? One big creamery offered us 4 cents per quart for our Grade A raw milk bottled, delivered in Eugene. The price then was 12 cents retail.

"The raw milk man is the fly in the ointment. Hence all this railroad legislation which is without parallel in the history of a state loaded with crazy laws, class legislation of the most vicious not excepting the Zorn-Macpherson bill. I want to explain to the public just exactly how this milk commission law affects the consumers, who have not been given an opportunity to express an opinion so far. It means that the farmer who has a dairy herd of Jersey or Guernsey say cows testing about 4.2% butterfat must now raise the price of his milk or lower the quality.

"If we raise the price the creamery man will call on our customers (as they have already done), ask them who do you buy milk from? What do you pay? One of my customers told the solicitor it was none of his business. They will explain to the housewife that their milk is 10 cents, testing probably 4.5%. My milk will test 5%. How many consumers can tell the difference. All they can see is the 1 cent difference in price. I know, because I tried to hold up our milk to 10 cents when others were selling for 9. It just can't be done.

"The next alternative is standardize. Our milk inspector says a farmer cannot standardize his milk and still put out Grade A raw milk. Personally, I'd just as soon have pure water added to milk, as skimmed milk like the creameries do. It's just another trick and as far as Gawleys are concerned we positively are not going to adulterate our milk and will not raise the price above the minimum set, without a just and fair hearing on the subject. Has the community no rights in the matter?

"I'd like to ask the buyers of Grade A raw milk in Eugene, hereafter buy only from a producer-distributor. He is fighting with his back to the wall and if it weren't for him you'd be paying about 12 cents for milk and the farmer would be getting about $1.50 for his milk.

"Mr. Harlan, it seems to me, is taking rather a high-handed way with this business of price fixing, he utterly ignored a petition signed by 10 or 12 raw milk producers, asking for a hearing here on the prices set. He called 4 or 5 together for a brief meeting Monday morning and bluffed told them that he'd give them this week to comply with his orders, or he would be summoned to PWA for a hearing. It would be like the other hearing held in Portland; the consumer would get no chance to be heard.

"I've seen pride go before a fall before, right here in Eugene, too. The joke of this whole business is this—the farmer-producer gets a raise of less than one cent per gallon for his milk, the creameries have already raised the price of buttermilk, skim milk and cream to take care of their added expenses. The raw milk producer-distributor has a tax put on him and no recourse. And finally Mr. Harlan, Mr. Mickle, Tommy Olsen, Mr. Chadwick all get a nice fat job. Who's the goat?

"I most respectfully ask the public to stand by the small raw milk distributor. He is a taxpayer and a worthy citizen. 'MRS. R. L. GAWLEY.'

the vegetables thin). Pepper and salt to taste. Simmer 3 hours, skimming occasionally. The pieces of meat and the vegetables should be blended by now and a wholesome smooth soup be the result. Serve with toasted bread sticks.—Mrs. E. F. Young, R. 1, Junction City.

Soup With Egg Sponge
Clear chicken broth, either freshly made or canned can be used. For the sponge use one egg to each person. Beat the eggs well to a foamy consistency. Put one cup of soup in a small saucepan and bring to a boil. Drop the egg mixture in it, keeping the fire under the pan at a minimum but with enough heat to boil until the egg forms a spongy cake, watching carefully to prevent scorching. Lift the egg from the saucepan and cut into small squares. Pour the chicken soup over these squares. If a thicker soup is desired, boil a package of medium thick noodles in salt water and add them while egg sponge is being made. The remainder of the soup should be kept hot.—Mrs. L. J. Estes, Wendling.

commission has taken no official step in the matter and the council wishes to find out what is required of it in handling these applications.

The matter of policing the state liquor store was not brought before the council as the police committee decided that no action was necessary for the time being, according to Dr. George Simon, chairman of the police committee. The committee believes it will be necessary to hire an additional policeman in the event the store is maintained at 73 West Broadway, but the matter will not be presented to the council till later, he said.

Declaring that the state highway commission's policy on development and maintenance of highways in this section of the state was commendable, the council adopted a resolution expressing its "strong endorsement" of policies being carried forward by the highway commission on development and maintenance work in this vicinity. The city recorder was instructed to forward a copy of the resolution to the highway commission.

The council also adopted a resolution in memorial on the death of Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state.

Two ordinances on pavement assessments in the vicinity of Sixteenth and Mill streets were adopted by the council and the installation of a new red light at the dead-end corner at Tenth and Mill was ordered. These lights are destroyed almost as fast as they are installed, more than five having been taken down in the past few months. Councilmen warned that this was a dangerous corner and that if the red light were not there a serious accident might occur.

The National Rifle association chapter here was given permission to install a rifle range in the basement of the building at 931 Oak street.

Bob Schiska was appointed a special policeman without pay for Hendricks park.

Other council business: Received report from boxing commission showing $850 taken in with $250 allotted to charity and $300 to veterans' organizations; council voted to accept federal bonds at par on account of city liens; decided to contribute $25 monthly to transient relief hotel; heard Recorder Bryson's report on 36 new applications for re-bonding delinquent assessments, bringing the total to 251 amounting to $67,086.25; heard Recorder Bryson's report on correspondence with R. P. company relative to establishment of grade at Alder and Broadway in which he reported he had asked the company to agree to a width suitable for the installation of another track east of the present tracks instead of two new tracks as requested.

Gov. Whiteaker STORY

soon evident that he had been definitely opposed to the political views of Abraham Lincoln and the abolitionists. He was distinctly a southern sympathizer.

"He didn't believe in freeing the slaves and leaving them in the United States, an environment in which it would be difficult for them to live as free men, feeling that such procedure would be both unfair to the negroes and a menace to the white people," Miss Whiteaker explained.

Writing in his diary, he made this statement concerning his nomination for governor, "This nomination took me much by surprise, and I was very sorry it was made. However, I accepted and took the field and was elected by a very respectable majority."

He was a man of humility. In his diary, he makes the following summary of his term as governor, "I am not aware that anything worthy of note occurred during my administration. The usual amount of abuse from my political opponents was heaped upon me; and when my term of office had about half expired, the revolution of 1861, which is now raging, broke out, and I, being opposed to the administration of President Lincoln and his policy, Oregon having voted to support him, and almost all the state officers having changed their politics in favor of Mr. Lincoln, the abuse heaped upon me during my last two years of office was bitter."

Some of his views regarding government are expressed in a note in his diary, written Jan. 1, 1865. "It is exceeding strange that some well informed people believe or effect to believe the federal government is a government of the people and not of the states forming. Such an idea not only carries with it that absurdity that the creature is greater than the creator, but it betrays what to me appears to be a lack of honesty."

"Although he himself had only about six months of formal education above the primary, he was greatly interested in the advance of education in the state. Anne Whiteaker graduated from the University of Oregon in the class of 1881, and a brother graduated in the class of 1878. Most of Governor Whiteaker's education was by reading books.

After his term as governor expired, John Whiteaker spent many years in public service in other offices, finally retiring to his home in Eugene.

$240,011, leaving a year's surplus of $935,282 remaining in hand. There was a balance of $268,000 the year before, totaling a balance of $1,161,282.

The revenue from gasoline tax and motor vehicle fees would exceed the actual fixed requirements of the state by less than a quarter million dollars, Scott said. It was estimated $7,230,000 would be taken from these sources compared to $6,304,648 in 1933. Of the gross receipts taken in from gasoline and motor fees the state highway commission received 64 per cent, the remaining going to counties and for operation expenses in collecting the fees.

Credit Restored
State revenues for highway purposes in 1933 was 38 per cent under the amounts received in 1932 and 1931, when motor vehicle licenses were higher, the report showed. Almost $10,000,000 was collected in 1931 from these sources.

"Last year's strain on the state's finances has been relieved," Scott declared, "and the state's credit has been restored to its former high plane. A year ago the state could not dispose of its bonds to eastern buyers, and Portland bankers took them as a civic duty."

Canada was the chief export buyer of American tractors in 1928, taking more than $10,000,000 worth.

—said Leopold Schmidt when he established the first Olympia brewery at Tumwater in 1896

ABOVE is a reproduction of the "Olympian," September 5, 1895. It announced that Leopold Schmidt was to build a brewery at Tumwater and that he had acquired the site because of the special brewing qualities of the water which came from pure, sparkling, subterranean springs.

In 1896, he completed the brewery and marketed "Olympia Beer" with the famous slogan, "It's the Water."

Thirty-seven years later—in 1933—the Schmidt family of brewmasters built the modern Olympia Brewery, one of the finest in America and now offer you Olympia Beer, made exactly as it was before prohibition.

Delicious, Mellow Flavor
The solvent quality of the subterranean spring water of Tumwater, used exclusively for Olympia Beer, performs four very important functions:

1. Extracts from the hops and grains hidden flavors.
2. Gives golden color and sparkling life to the beer.
3. Creates a more active fermentation of the yeast cells, thereby making the beer more digestible and of constant purity.
4. Prevents detrimental changes when the beer is bottled and chilled.

Serve It in Your Home
Olympia Beer is a wholesome, mildly stimulating beverage. Original imported yeast stock from Denmark guarantees complete fermentation; this means that Olympia Beer is predigested and, therefore, non-fattening. You can obtain it from your dealers. Olympia Brewing Co., Olympia, Wash.

IMPORTANT!

Wherever you see the Authorized Draught Dispenser Certificate, you will know that this dispenser is fully equipped to serve you Olympia Draught Beer, properly kept and served as it should be served—bringing you the full-flavored goodness unchanged from the Brewery.

Walters-Bushong to Quit Retail Trade
The Walters-Bushong Lumber company, originally known as the Elmira Lumber company, has disposed of its stocks of retail lumber and builders supplies to five other local retail lumber yards and will henceforth continue in business as wholesaler of lumber and retailer of wood.

This transfer closes the retail lumber activities of a firm that has been selling lumber in this city constantly since the spring of 1901. The company wishes to extend its best regards to the many patrons it has had during this long period and to the well-equipped yards that will remain to carry on in the lumber and building material service.
