OTTO KAHN—LIFE'S CONTRASTS.

The odd way in which the public and private sides of a man's life can be in contrast could hardly be better illustrated than by the career of the late Otto H. Kahn.

Here was a man who, like many other rich men, had two roles to play in the life of his times. One of them was that of banker—high-powered banker, as the saying is, of the essence of Wall Street, a man who had a prominent seat among the money-changers and used it as such seats are meant to be used.

The other was that of patron of the arts, a position not unlike that of the grandees of Renaissance Italy—who, it might be remembered, also led double lives, enriching themselves with one hand and playing the magnifico with the other.

It is in this second role that most of us were familiar with Mr. Kahn's name. He was a main-spring in the activities of the great Metropolitan Opera House; he sincerely and honestly loved fine music and the other arts; he gave substantial encouragement to practitioners of those arts; and, altogether, he left his country somewhat richer, in those respects, than he found it.

Yet it is very hard to say whether, in the life of his time, this role actually outweighed the other—that of big-shot banker.

For the Otto Kahn of Wall Street was another man, and those of us who live outside of New York and have little or nothing to do with the money markets of the metropolis weren't so familiar with him.

But if you let your memory wander back to the early days of the century, and recall the famous "Northern Pacific corner," in which Hill and Harriman waged a bitter fight for railroad control and precipitated a panic on the country in consequence, you'll get an understanding of it.

Kahn was Harriman's banker, in that titanic dog fight; he was, in other words, one of the top money lords of the stock market, one of those men whom cartoonists used to caricature as paunchy folk in frock coats and top hats, with money bags clenched in their fists.

And so you have the contrast; on the one hand, the patron of the arts, the man who helped to make American life richer and fuller—and, on the other, the money changer, a leader in that class whose leadership has been so profoundly called into question of late.

How are you going to strike a balance between the two roles?

PRIVATE ARMIES IN U. S.

RAYMOND MOLEY'S magazine, "Today," reveals in the current issue that Hitlerism has invaded the United States on a systematic and nationwide scale. According to this magazine, Nazi outfits have been established in 19 American cities, recruits are being sworn in at the rate of 400 a week in New York City alone, and uniformed "storm troops" are conducting regular drills in nearly a score of places.

It is only this last point that seems especially disturbing. This is a free country, and if a man wishes to become a Nazi, that surely is his right—precisely as it is his right to be a Communist, a Democrat, or a Single Taxer.

But it is hard to see why there is any place in the United States for these private armies on the European model.

Overseas, those organizations invariably lead to trouble; on this side of the Atlantic, we can get along without them very nicely.

MODIFIED LOYALTY.

POLITICS never took an odder or a sharper turn than it did in Congress between the votes in the House on the president's veto of the independent offices appropriation bill and on the new tariff measure.

In the first instance, only a scant handful of Democrats remained to uphold the president. The congressmen indulged in revolt on a grand scale, and ominous prophecies were made about the decline of Mr. Roosevelt's influence.

But hardly 48 hours later these same insurrectionists were back at his side, putting through for him a measure of the very type on which Congress could be expected to balk the most—a tariff bill putting in his hands powers which the House of Representatives has always hitherto used.

It looks very much as if the Democratic majority were trying to say that it is and will be fanatically loyal—on all issues except one.

London had 21 murders in 1932 and New York had 41. If New York can't beat London in population, at least it'll pass that city in depopulation.

Mrs. Roosevelt has brought the president a straw-cradled bottle of 40-year-old rum, from Puerto Rico. She must want the bottle.

A Salvation Army official credits Mac West for the rise in employment. Well, yes, if you've noticed the pronounced curve in business.

The new emperor of Manchukuo gets $1,750,000 a year. He might try doing something in his spare time, to make ends meet.

A tramp steamer was just the thing for Samuel Insull. Hasn't this country made a tramp of him?

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

GIVING UP THE GHOST (Albany Democrat-Herald)
SIX Oregon rural schools have closed already and forty-four others will wind up shorted terms this week and during April. This is the statement of O. D. Adams, state director of vocational education, who is in a position to know something of the true financial condition of Oregon schools.

Some of the schools that have closed had outstanding warrants dated as far back as 1930. Imagine district creditors waiting four years and more for their money!

In some districts the warrants are no longer salable. In some they are being discounted 30 per cent. How would you like to be a teacher in a school whose warrants were shamed 30 per cent?

Schools which will close this week or during April are located in Baker, Coos, Curry, Crook, Douglas, Grant, Harney, Lake, Tillamook, Umatilla and Wallowa counties. The condition is general, not local.

In Linn no schools have been closed; and it is likely that none will be this year. Here the trouble lies ahead—in the immediate future.

Linn county schools have been getting all their common school fund money, although the money has not been paid in full during these days of tax delinquency. The county court has been advancing the money to the schools from the county general fund. It is reaching the point where it can no longer continue to discharge this act of generosity. On this account there may be no distribution of the common school fund in May. At best, it is likely that the appointment will be partial.

Persons who are really interested in the schools will do well to look beneath the surface. Any person who will argue that the school system of Linn county is financially strong because none of the schools has closed is not on a safe ground.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

(Register-Guard Washington Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, April 7.—Demand for detective fiction here has fallen off. Too many mysteries close at hand. More fun to do your own gumboeing, speak your own dialog, find your own clues, and reach your own solutions.

Many local mysteries aren't ever solved except by consensus of opinion. But Washingtonists still prefer the puzzles offered by Roosevelt, General Johnson, the Brain Trust and others to the problems of Philo Vance, Hercule Poirot, and Lord Peter Wimsey. Take a few recent ones:

- 1.—Did Roosevelt care much whether he was beaten on his veto of the veteran-federal pay bill?
2.—What's behind the NRA censorship order?
3.—Were the airmail contracts canceled so as to give more contracts to E. L. Cord?
4.—Who kidded Dr. Wirt?
5.—Why did the Justice Department announce trial of its suit against Remington-Brand right after Rand had viciously attacked the New Deal?

These are the most complete answers anyone can give at this time, though scores of wisecracks can explain more luridly and cock-surely.

1.—Apparently not. Administration defense in the House was sloppily managed. Roosevelt could have saved the veto in the Senate had he exerted himself. He hasn't yet whispered to anyone why he didn't stay and fight.

2.—General Johnson is staggering from exhaustion. Recently he became incensed at a series of newspaper interpretations and comments.

3.—Apparently it just happened that the peculiar airmail policy left Cord in an extremely favored position to bid for contracts.

4.—Dozens of names have been mentioned in current gossip and several inaccurate versions have been printed. Perhaps several persons had a hand in it, but the list is narrowing and the tale will soon be told. 5.—Such "coincidences" happen so frequently that it's a moral certainty the White House gave the word. But try and prove it!

Here To Last Below

Senator Joseph Bailey of North Carolina was hero of one of the big moments in the Senate's fight over the veto. He began his defense of Roosevelt with a great veto, but within half an hour his voice had worn down to a shrill squeak.

The galleries were tired and irritated. But many leaned forward and some stood and craned as Bailey finally gasped:

"Mr. President, with my last breath, I want to say this— (It did seem like Bailey's last breath and there wasn't a tear in the big house.)

"The American people will never get out of this depression until they balance the budget." . . . It was Bailey's obvious cue to collapse. But he thought better of it, regained voice and roared boisterously for another half hour.

Racket in Gorillas

Don't buy any live gorillas from Washington by mail. It's a racket and a fellow has just been indicted for collecting money through the mails for gorillas he didn't possess. . . . Curtis Dill, presidential son-in-law, hadn't been here for some time until he publicly protested the Securities Act. . . . Alice Roosevelt longed for the Senate veto debate.

Longworth, Ickes, and Margenthau are all enthusiastic stamp collectors. They trade with one another and traded with Litvinoff during Russian negotiations. Whether Litvinoff is a bona fide collector or brought stamps as an added attraction is still unclear. . . . Pat Harrison has been waving a bandaged thumb and forefinger in recent debate. He burned them in fighting a match. . . . Blind men are being given the newspaper-magazine concessions in lobbies of federal buildings and it's expected that 150 of them will begin working at it, with the result that most blind beggars will be off the streets.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.
DO you believe that green apples always cause a stomach ache; that the mixing of ice cream and lobster is certain to result in food poisoning? . . . Do you always pour canned fruit and vegetables out of the can into a glass dish, for fear that retention in the tin vessel would give rise to poisoning? Have you heard that fried foods are indigestible?

These are some of the common notions that prevail among the ununiformed in relationship to health. More and more, doctors are learning that it is not safe to accept any of these common ideas without checking them through scientific study and experimentation.

The Child and the Kingdom

Text: Matt. 18:1-14; 19: 13-15
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 8.

By WM. E. GILOY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

JESUS is unique among world teachers in the simplicity with which he expressed and illustrated the deepest things. When the disciples came to him asking, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven," Jesus perceived their false perception of greatness and their wrong notions of greatness. He found it necessary to teach them the lesson of humility, and he did it in a very concrete way.

Calling a little child to him, he set this child in their midst and said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

How puzzled the disciples must have been, and how their minds and consciences must have been aroused as Jesus added that the greatest in the kingdom of heaven was the one who should humble himself like a little child! To illustrate the nature of this humility Jesus linked it with lowly service.

The achievement of a man's life, his greatness, and the measure of his success are not determined by the approval that he wins from the great, but by the spirit in which he serves those who need his help. To do something for a little child is greater than anything else, and to offend a little child is to do something so tragic that it were better that one had been cast into the depths of the sea with a mill-stone around his neck.

It was in this same spirit that Jesus spoke of the spirit of his religion, the gospel of God's grace surrounding men and seeking to bring them back when they had gone astray.
