

CAMPAIGN MARKED APATHY; WORKERS APPEAL TO VOTERS

Lane county will record a good majority for him.

Mott Support Claimed

William Ellis, Salem, manager of the district campaign for James Mott for congress, was in Eugene Monday night after a tour of the district and reported finding strength for the incumbent in all parts of the district with little for J. M. Devers. Even the coast section reported favorably on Mott's campaign, he said. Roseburg also was found strong for Mott, according to Ellis.

Reports at the county legislative association Tuesday indicated strong support for the ticket in Creswell, Cottage Grove, Junction City, Springfield, Westfir, Oakridge, the coast section from Bluff to Canby and in Eugene.

Mrs. Dudley Holland, from the College Creek district; Mrs. John B. Bell, from the east side district in Eugene; and Mrs. Dorothy Hesse, reported on the results of the telephone contacts indicating favorable comment for the ticket.

Indifference Found

All warned, however, that they found considerable indifference expressed in the primary vote and urged a continuation of the effort to arouse interest in the election. Dr. H. W. Titus, chairman of the association, stressed this point in his remarks, as did various other speakers, urging members of the committee not to become overconfident and cease their activities.

"The fight is not won till the last vote is counted," he said. "We must continue our battle right up till midnight Thursday, urging everyone to get out and vote. If we can get a majority of the republican voters in Eugene to go to the polls, we will be assured of success for the ticket."

Careful Selection Urged

Emphasizing the necessity of sending to the legislature men in whose honesty, integrity and ability the problems of the county can safely be entrusted, Hugh Rossman stressed the importance of having men on the committees in the legislature where most of the important work is done. Spellbinders and those who make wild promises usually do not count much when they reach the legislature. It is the man who analyzes the problems calmly and who make no promises that are of the most value to the community they represent, he said.

Rossman declared he believed that the ticket sponsored by the association would give Lane county adequate representation in the state legislature. "The care and thought given to the selection of these men by representative citizens of this community is assurance that they will give Lane county honest and intelligent representation," he declared.

Stating he did not represent labor, but that a good many members of the labor group felt the same way about their representation as Mr. Rossman, Robert M. Fischer, district representative of the American Federation of Labor, stressed the need for honesty and integrity in the candidates selected to represent a community and urged the election of the association's ticket.

Not till the disappearance of the last whisp of smoke from the last shot fired in the primary campaign will Rock-of-the-Marne McAlexander withdraw his forces in his battle for the republican nomination for governor, he implied in his talk at the county court house here Monday night. Despite rumors that his backers had given up hope for him and despite general reports that his candidacy is not getting anywhere, U. E. McAlexander refuses to be deterred in his campaign, he said.

"I still have reserves, and no commander is beaten as long as he has reserves," the retired general declared.

Talking out at the handling of the strike situation in Portland, the general said that if he were chief executive tive of this state there would be no danger of lapses in the peace on the waterfront during the strike. Regardless of the issues between labor and employers, the peace, life and property would be preserved, he declared. The Newport man indicated that if he were governor his policy on crime problems would be one of strictness embodying army ideas of discipline and treatment of criminals. The general also reiterated his policy of removing education from the influence of politics and pointed out that his Scotch ancestry would be made evident in his tax policies.

The general was introduced by Ben Dorris, manager of the McAlexander campaign in Lane county.

The institute as planned will be an annual affair, with sessions rotating among leading law schools of the Pacific coast. The committee now at work on arrangements includes Dean Morse, Harold Shepherd, dean of the University of Washington law school; Marion Kirkwood, dean of the Stanford university law school; William G. Hale, dean of the University of Southern California law school; Orrin K. McMurtry, dean of the University of California school of jurisprudence; Professor Max Radin, Dr. Herman Adler, Professor Alexander Kidd and Ronald Beattie, all of the University of California.

A committee will be appointed by the Oregon State Bar association to aid with arrangements for the Oregon meeting.

The idea of the institute was first conceived by Dean Morse three years ago, and at that time he and Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, then president of the university, interested the Social Science Research council and other organizations in the idea. Lack of finances prevented the holding of the event at that time, but the grant this year from the Carnegie Corporation makes it possible.

guard is ordered to police the waterfront here, the longshoremen's strike went into its seventh day without a winch being operated or a pound of cargo moved from docks.

It was the most serious and far-reaching labor deadlock Portland has experienced in more than a generation.

Mills Shut Down

Meanwhile headquarters of shipping agencies removed Portland from the list of ports of call. This city today ceased, temporarily, to be a world port. Several vessels which have been tied here a week or so without being able to load or unload cargo, were expected to be ordered to other ports this afternoon. The goods must be reshipped to Portland at the owner's expense and risk.

Several industries announced today they must close down because of the longshoremen's and towboat men's strike. The M. and W. Wood Working company shut down, putting about 300 workers out of jobs. The company cannot move its product. The Clark and Wilson sawmill will close tonight, affecting about 360 men. The Eastern and Western mill is faced with an early shutdown because of insufficient log supply, resulting from the towboat strike.

Girl Thought Dead

Following directions of the letter, Houston, accompanied by other authorities, found the pit well concealed by cactus and mesquite. Lifting a trap door over the living grave, he saw June's legs.

"I thought she was dead," he said, "and was about to withdraw to call an undertaker."

Then he called out, and June whimpered an answer.

Houston stepped down into what appeared to be a coffin of corrugated iron sunk in the desert.

There he found June stretched on a gunny sack for a bed and a bath towel for a pillow.

Around her ankles was fastened a chain, run through an automobile axle and so contrived that she could not free herself. The temperature was 110 in the open air and several stifling degrees higher in the iron cage.
