KNITTING POPULAR WITH LOCAL WOMEN

In times of stress, the wives of the men who are frantically trying to "do something about it" have calmly sat down to knit. As startling as this may seem, history verifies the fact by recalling knitting's place in the French Revolution. And what did the pioneer mother do as the Indians slunk about the house? She knitted! No doubt even Poppea knitted in rhythm to Nero's fiddling as Rome burned.

Eugene women, too, have rallied to the old standard and are proceeding to help outwit the depression by knitting some of the season's most attractive garments. At present two knitting clubs, headed by Mrs. Herald White and Mrs. DeMott McMorran, are teaching dozens of Eugene women how to create lovely boucle suits. Knitting needles have invaded the homes, and the knitting bag now occupies the favored sites about the parlor. The only fear is that American women will do what the Oriental did ages ago, and convert the knitting needles into chopsticks.

As an example of this trend toward knitted wear, witness the hand-made coats, gloves, hats and even bathing suits made of soft, non-shrinkable, non-fading yarns. Not only woollens, but silk, linen and cotton yarns are rapidly losing their string-like identity and becoming unusual and clever outfits. One woman, displaying her pastel boucle, said that it not only cost less than the average dress, but wore "forever," as hers was two and a half years old and still like new.

An interesting yarn is Mrs. Eyer Brown's homespun, which she is knitting into a skirt. The wool that went into the skirt was sheared this spring from her father's sheep, which gambled, until the hot weather bid them off their coats, on a farm beyond Cottage Grove. Mrs. Brown's mother, Mrs. A. Soderstrom, chose the finest fleeces, preparatory to making yarn of them.

"She washed the raw wool thoroughly several times to get the oil out of it," Mrs. Brown stated, "and then hung it on the line in wads to dry. Next she picked and carded it to remove all foreign matter, and rolled the wool into long, thin, fluffy rolls. She spun it into long one-ply threads and then again until they were ready for knitting. The unbleached yarn varies slightly in shade, but blends well together after sizing."

Mrs. Brown returned from an extended European trip with her husband this spring. While in England she was amused to discover how much the English women knit.

"Everywhere you go the women are 'knitting their needles,'" she said. "They have knit all their lives and are so clever that they can read and knit at the same time. I was disconcerted one evening in the Embassy theater in London to hear the sound of needles close at my back."

"The yarn in England is so cheap that you can buy enough for a suit for only about three dollars. The women seem to take advantage of this, because they knit continually, on buses, in the stores, and even in art galleries. It will be some time before the Eugene women knit at that rate."

Van Loan Speaker At Bethel School Graduation Tuesday

W. L. Van Loan, principal of the Roosevelt junior high school in Eugene, will deliver the commencement address before the graduates of the Bethel school this Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Presentation of diplomas and awards will be made by L. C. Moffitt, county school superintendent.

The rest of the program will be as follows: Processional, Grace Potter; violin selections, Madeline Glustina; class history, Eunice Anderson; class prophecy, Elberta Brown; class will, Eunice Nielsen; and Roy Thorby.

Positive Relief From Earwigs

DIAMOND L BRAND Ant and Earwig Powder absolutely kills Earwigs. Earwigs do not object to walking into the powder when it is spread lightly. It sticks to their feet and when they lick it off, the chemical sets up an irritation in their internal organs which results in their death. Not dangerous to birds. Enough for average city lot, $1.
