An old, half-worn piano is a big handicap to the student who is compelled to use it. Working with such an instrument causes faulty technique—and an ignorance of good tone that is deplorable. Often the student gets discouraged and gives up trying to learn, where, if he had used a good piano the results would have been just the opposite.

Put a Kimball piano in your home. You will find that your children will learn more rapidly and will have a far better conception of good music as they grow up... and in the long run the cost will be only a little more.
