FUTURE OF COLLEGES.

SOMETIME during the next 25 years the American college will enter a new phase in which its enrollment will be vastly increased and its methods of teaching will be revolutionized.

This is the prediction of Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University.

No one, he believes, will remain out of college simply because he cannot pay tuition; on the other hand, no one will attend simply because he can pay.

Anyone who has the ability to profit by a college education will become a student; and the colleges will have far greater resources than they have now, so that they will be able to give more attention to the individual student than they do now.

All this, says Dr. Scott, will reflect changes in the national life. Leisure will be more abundant, money will be more plentiful, the national culture will be more closely integrated.

As a result, we shall have mass education on a greater scale than anything hitherto dreamed of, and the college will play a larger part in the national life than ever before.

Now this prediction is interesting, not only because it holds up an attractive future to our gaze, but because it is just one more proof that far-sighted men can see a great development and enrichment of national life just ahead of us.

During the last few years we have fallen into a peculiar mental attitude. Somehow we seem to have got the notion that our great days are all behind us, that the depression has dissipated and vitiated the boundless energy of America, and that the most we can hope for, hereafter, is to keep our hands just above water.

It is only natural that we should feel that way. In a time of great confusion and trouble. But it is good for us to be reminded that the last few years have not been an end to everything, but have simply been a breeding space between two great epochs in our history.

Now, if ever, is the time for us to be making great plans for the future. The era that is just beginning can be extraordinarily rich and fruitful, if we have the courage to dream.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

THE three plains of the mid-Atlantic offered a fascinating and uncommon sight not long ago—the spectacle of a race between an old-time square-rigged sailing vessel and one of the fastest of modern ocean greyhounds.

The four-masted bark Abraham Rydberg was coming up from Australia to England carrying grain. She was flying before a moderate gale at a tremendous clip—and suddenly she found herself alongside the Mauretania, going in the same direction.

And while the Mauretania's passengers lined the rails, the skipper of the bark cracked on all sail and for a time, actually held abreast of the great liner.

In the end, of course, when the wind moderated, the sterner drew ahead, and the "race" was over. But the event is a deeply interesting illustration of the fact that, when conditions are just right, the wheelman can hold his own with the best of them—for a little while, anyway.

SIDELIGHT ON BUSINESS.

THE selection of a federal trade commission investigator that Henry L. Doherty obtained control of the billion-dollar Cities Service Co. with an investment of only $1,000,000 brings into light one of the strangest quirks of modern society—the device that can exist between ownership and management.

Control of a great property, that is to say, can rest in the hands of a man who actually owns only a very small fraction of the property. On the other hand, thousands of people can be owners without ever having any thing consequential to say about what shall be done with their property.

This, of course, is not to say that any criticism attaches to men who buy control of a corporation without buying majority ownership. It simply illustrates the strange course that corporate development has taken in modern times.

WHEN THE LAW SPEAKS.

THE language of the law can be a delight to the layman—when it isn't a pain in the neck.

In Italy a farmer let a pig stray into the road. A motorist swerved aside when the pig refused to move, and damaged his car. He sued the farmer for damages, holding the farmer responsible for the pig's acts. The case finally reached the supreme court, which rendered its decision as follows:

"When the comportment of an animal, without going into the hypotheses of fault or force majeure, sets in motion elements which otherwise would have remained inert, and these elements in turn, through no fault of their own, but due to the animal's comportment, cause damage to be done, the casual connection between the comportment of the animal, for which the law holds the proprietor to be responsible, and the occurrence causing the damage, appears to be uninterrupted."

In other words—the owner of the pig was responsible, and had to pay.

If the great powers stop the shipment of munitions to fighting Paraguay and Bolivia, they'll have to much more to use among themselves, see?

Postmaster General Folley says he was only joking about issuing a Santa Claus stamp. It's too late to say that for his Mother's Day stamp.

California grows 55 per cent of the lemons consumed in North America—and that doesn't include the Hollywood variety.

A motorist at Kalamazoo, Mich., beat a train to the crossing and then hit it coming around the other way. That fellow wasn't going to let the train get away with it.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

PAYING OFF ITS WARRANTS

(Salem Statesman)

THE city of Eugene has been making excellent progress in reducing its indebtedness. Both the city and school district were forced to expand their indebtedness greatly in the decade following the war because of the rapid growth of the city. Railway and highway building centering at Eugene, the increase in population and all stimulated general expansion and the city kept pace or a little ahead with new schools, paved streets, sewers, etc. The depression brought its reaction but the city has forged ahead in its financial program with success.

The city recorder, R. S. Bryson, said the other day that in five years the warrant indebtedness had been cut from $84,825.52 to $32,285.87, reaching now the lowest point since 1926. This has been done when other communities have let warrant indebtedness increase. Recent heavy payments of taxes have helped out, then the city has cut its expense budget sharply.

Oregon cities and taxing units would be in very healthy condition if the back taxes would come in; and numerous delinquencies are being wiped out from month to month. Stricter laws now in effect will be of value in the future in preventing the piling up of so much bonded debt, and enable the cities to keep their treasuries in healthy condition.

The progress which cities like Eugene are making in these trying times may be painful but it is necessary and once done gives its citizens a feeling of deep satisfaction.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

(Register-Guard Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 7.—If munitions industry investigators look sharply enough, they'll find some interesting evidence in the government's own files.

Exports of arms and other war materials to South American and other warring countries haven't always been made without the knowledge—or even the encouragement—of certain persons in central federal departments.

The boys who learned from Mr. Hoover how to high-pressure our foreign trade didn't see why we shouldn't sell our machine guns as vigorously as anything else.

Some of them are still here and even their recent activities, when and if revealed, may cause such a flurry as to result in the loss of a few minor jobs in two departments.

In the present Chaco war, Paraguayan soldiers actually used to find dead Bolivian soldiers clad in U. S. Army uniforms with regimental and other insignia.

The War Department had sold the uniforms and other surplus stocks to private contractors here. But that's only a sidelight.

Stephen T. Raushenbush, chief investigator for Chairman Nye of the Senate munitions committee, is checking files of the Commerce, War, State, and other departments. The White House sent word down that he was to have full access.

Some of the investigators who worked with Ferdinand Pecora on the stock market investigation, digging up dirt on J. P. Morgan, Albert Wiggin, and other emperors of finance, will now work under Raushenbush and delve into affairs of huge corporations which make munitions.

What ever did become of the famous mechanical horse which Calvin Coolidge used to ride in the White House?

Ted Clark, Coolidge's former personal secretary, thinks it must be in storage up at Northampton.

But a lot of pretty, bare-legged girls are thrilled every day by rides on an iron steed which they understand is the very same animal. It's installed out at the Shoreham swimming pool and the check girl who passes out tickets tells everybody to "be sure and take a ride on Mr. Coolidge's horse." Everybody does.

It seems that a man who had the horse and didn't like it came around and offered it if he could swim free when he wanted. The nug was a gift to him from a lady whose husband wasn't in love with it either.

Maybe it's the Coolidge horse and maybe not, but everybody agrees it isn't much fun unless you think so.

Again, your correspondent is forced to point out that that great slugging match, The Administration vs. Huey Long, is far from one-sided.

Huey isn't getting federal patronage, but neither are the administration's appointments to important Louisiana jobs, made against his wishes, getting through the Senate.

What do you suppose became of that nomination of Daniel D. Moore to be collector of internal revenue in Huey's state? The Finance committee reported it favorably after the Kincaid had shown Moore's connection with Colonel Bradley, the gambler man, and created no uproar here at all around the country.

Lawmakers are sure it won't go through in this session. The only other anti-long appointment referred to the Senate was that of Rene A. Vioqua as U. S. District Attorney at New Orleans. Perhaps you didn't notice that the Judiciary committee, after plenty of words from Huey, turned down Vioqua, whose name was then withdrawn by the White House.

Explanation: The Senate is a back-scratching institution and few members care to incur Huey's enmity. Huey has an uncanny way of turning up scandals involving his foes.

Also, senatorial courtesy—which seldom allows confirmation of a man "personally objectionable" to a member—extends even unto Huey.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

THE people who really have to worry most about their vacations are those who take to the road. It is astounding how much wreckage a family vacation in a motor car can bring about from a health point of view. Driving all day means that the calls of nature are ignored.

Cinders fly in the eye; elbows and knees are bumped and rubbed. The digestion is disturbed and the muscles are cramped by hours of sitting in constricted positions.

Children suffer from the glare of the sun, the dust of the road, and the impossibility of getting the right kind of food, insect bites, bad meals and water. A baby should never be taken on such a vacation, and even children from 2 to 6 years of age are likely to suffer by such performances.

Fortunately, most of our states have taken over control of motor camps, so that you can be reasonably sure in such camps of suitable water and milk supplies. Smokeless stoves nowadays carry along 20 or 30 yards of mosquito netting to fend off insects. There is little fear of infection from the swarms of mosquitoes in the northern parts of the United States, but a mosquito bite that itches or bleeds can spoil any vacation.

A weak solution of camphor or one per cent solution of menthol in a suitable lotion will stop the itching and give comfort.

Every camper ought to take along a spade and a first-aid kit. The spade is used to bury remnants of food, empty tin cans, and bottles. These always should be buried 25 feet from any running stream or body of water. The spade is also used to cover fires.

The first-aid kit should contain at least a bottle of tincture of iodine, a cake of soap, two rolls of gauze, some cotton and adhesive plaster. It should also consist of some of the family favorite laxative, vasoline or petrolatum, and a simple ointment for abrasions, chafing, and sunburn. Any ordinary zinc oxide ointment serves this purpose.

There should be cold cream for use on dry, chapped lips, and perhaps a small amount of some antiseptic solution that is really antiseptic and will not act as a caustic on a burn.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep... Vigor... Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and distress. If kidneys don't empty 3 times every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS...

A doctor's prescription: "If you have been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes."

But don't take chances with strong drugs called "kidney cures" that may claim to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist that contain no "dope" or "kidd-forming" drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-McBurm Co.
