FOR VOTERS TO DECIDE.

If the petition pushers have a good season, there will be no less than 20 initiated measures on the ballot when Oregon voters go to the polls November 6.

At the prevailing rate of 5 cents a signature, it costs a minimum of $1333.35 to get a measure on the ballot; actually the cost is around $1500 in the average case.

At the present time there are no less than eight different measures in circulation for repeal of the Knox liquor control bill and the substitution of somebody's pet plan for handling the traffic.

The state grange also has a state bank bill, and a bill to transfer corporation taxes to school funds, and a bill to authorize the issuance of legal tender by state banks.

There may be some good with the bad on the initiated menu next November, but the voter who can't find time to investigate the antecedents and consequences of each proposal can vote "NO" straight down the line and feel pretty sure he has made very few mistakes.

OAKLAND WINS NEW LAURELS.

FOR many years the little city of Oakland, Oregon, has been famous as the place where the big turkey shows are held every year.

The young man had little difficulty in surprising T. B. Garrison and his son, Earl, who run the Oakland bank.

Earl Garrison was loose before the bandit could get up speed in his car and roused the town with shots. Telephones, pines, state police from Roseburg did the rest.

Oakland is to be congratulated for this little demonstration of the fact that the Oregon citizen is a bad place for "stickup artists."

BABSON SEES DICTATORSHIP.

THAT eminent prophet of American business, Roger Babson, sees this country headed straight for a dictatorship, and rather likes the idea.

"For the first work of a dictator will be to move population out of over-manned industries to under-manned industries (name three Mr. Babson). This will be brought about not by Republicans, Democrats or Socialists but by foreign competition."

Maybe we have a sort of dictatorship right now. It looks that way to a lot of Republicans and Communists.

Now we'll venture a guess. If we come to a dictatorship we won't call it that. It isn't Yankee to call a spade a spade if there's a fancy trade name in sight.

And come what may, we'll retain the inalienable American right to squawk about everything. Right?

Vice-President Jack Garner modestly describes himself as "just the spare tire" of the administration, but we notice by the news reports that the "spare tire" is being carried around Washington on a new 16-cylinder auto with a roof high enough for a high hat.

Speaking of Jack Garner as the "spare tire" at Washington, McGurk observes that most spares are flat and somewhat cracked.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

(Register-Guard Washington Correspondent) WASHINGTON, June 21.—Don't make any mistake about it. Professor Tugwell is all washed up as a major issue in the fall campaign.

In retrospect, it seems a little silly that this bright young man threatened to become just that.

But he definitely faded out as a firebrand of political contention when Senator Charles McNary, republican leader in the senate, voted to report favorably his nomination as undersecretary for agriculture.

Only one republican on the agriculture committee voted against Tugwell, and but one democrat—of 18 votes.

The Wirt and Tugwell sensations turned into fiascos principally because those who promoted them were incompetent and ignorant. The New Deal ranks here contain many who hope for drastic revision of the profit system and a greater or lesser extension of government control and ownership.

And many who would like to return to pre-New Deal days. And still others who cling to the Brandeis idea that Big Business should be broken up into smaller units.

An honest symposium of private beliefs among New Dealers would be of great interest. But not terribly important, because Roosevelt has shown he can make his own decisions and keep close to the middle of the road.

The most spectacular attacks have come from special interests seeking to preserve large profits in the stock market, in processing and distributing foods, in public utilities.

Since such profits are unpopular when the issue is directly presented, they are forced into wild accusations of plots to thwart recovery or to hollowize the country. Such charges are easily knocked down—and the attackers retire disgruntled.

Nevertheless, it's too bad no senator was sufficiently willing or adroit to draw from Tugwell his real views as to regulation of profits and protection of consumers. He has quite a few.

The fine hand of Alice Longworth appeared visibly at the latest Tugwell attack. She conferred for nearly half an hour with Senator Josiah Bailey of North Carolina before he began his long questioning of the professor. And then she sometimes seemed to be whispering to him between questions.

One of Mrs. Longworth's closest journalistic friends is a persistent Tugwell foe. He was guest of honor at a party which she invited Tugwell. The professor came, but didn't go near either hostess or guest of honor after the first salutations. And he wasn't invited again.

When Senator Dill of Washington blocked unanimous consent to immediate consideration of the Tugwell nomination, he was keeping an old promise to "oppose everything that concerns Tugwell."

Tugwell came here with the notion that consumers shouldn't be poisoned. Apple-growers, for instance, Apple-growers have to spray trees with lead arsenic and even after vigorous washing there's some residue on the apples, the tolerated percentage amount of which is set by the department of agriculture.

Tugwell inspected the industry in Washington, found washing equipment had been neglected during the depression, insisted there must be new equipment if the tolerance standard were to be met, and set up on order for a lower tolerance.

Dill charged to the defense of the apple-growers, who were faced with heavy expense. Tugwell finally agreed on a compromise, but Dill didn't forgive him.

Recently, Tugwell co-ordinated the research work of the department and organized an attempt to find a substitute bug-killer for lead arsenic which will not be harmful to human beings.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBKIN

(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine)

FOR the health of your child today, you can feel indebted partly to a famous British navigator, Capt. James Cook, who sailed the seas for the Royal British navy in the latter part of the 18th century.

Because of Captain Cook's keen observation and experiments with his sailors, we now know the cause of scurvy, a disease that debilitates and causes much suffering. To be sure, we know also that scurvy can be prevented by adequate amounts of vitamin C, but Captain Cook reported that he was able to prevent the trouble by keeping fresh fruits and vegetables on board his vessels.

It was on his voyage around Cape Horn, back in 1768, that Captain Cook noticed many of his men were getting tired and pale, that large black and blue spots appeared on their bodies, that they gums would bleed and their joints would become painful because of the bleeding that took place in them.
