

DEAN MORSE GIVES GRANGERS VIEWS ON SOCIAL TRENDS

Stating that the depression has pointed out many weaknesses in our political and economic structure but has made clear the fact that increased government controls, inconvenient and bothersome as they sometimes can be, are nevertheless necessary...

"Throughout the century and a half we have cherished individual liberty," he said, "however, we need to remember that broad general concepts such as liberty, freedom, patriotism, democracy and constitutional rights are subject to many shades of meaning..."

"What does Mr. Fletcher offer by way of a constructive campaign?" the speaker asked. "He is the present leader of a party whose national administration from 1920 to 1932 was honeycombed with fraud, corruption and smug indifference..."

Neither practice is consistent with our ideals and Dean Morse expressed confidence that a program providing a maximum protection of individual initiative compatible with the balanced interests of a complex society will eventually be worked out.

Speaking of the status of the American farmer, he said that he is a tax and interest slave and that by clearly shifting an undue proportion of taxes to the farmer's back, the money interests have succeeded in making the farmers an ally in their opposition to increased governmental regulation and control of the economic life of the nation.

Dean Morse congratulated the grangers in their study and discussion of the tax problems and he urged them to continue, saying that it is basic to the farm problem. Farmers at the present time are forced to pay high local taxes to enjoy the educational facilities, the cultural advantages, the modern improvements to which they are entitled while many non-property city residents enjoy similar advantages at little cost.

The laissez faire doctrine failed us; the uncontrolled profit system nearly wrecked us and as republicans and democrats alike we must pledge ourselves anew to the ideals of constitutional government which is a representative government and set our hands to the task of maintaining that delicate balance between private interests, social welfare and governmental responsibilities which is essential to keeping up a free people, he concluded.

piece of cloth and tie each dumpling up separately. Tie loose as the dumplings swell up. Put in a kettle of boiling water slightly salted and boil for half an hour, taking care that the boiling water covers the dumplings. Serve hot with a milk dip made by simply sweetening a large pitcher full of milk, making it quite sweet.

Potato Soup Pare, wash and cut in cubes 1 pint of potatoes. Let boil for 5 minutes, drain, put back on the stove, cover with boiling water and let cook until done. Then add 1 pint of sour cream, a tablespoon of butter and salt to taste. Take 1/4 tablespoons of sweet cream, mix flour enough with it to make a stiff dough, roll very thin, cut as for noodles, and add to the soup. Let boil about 5 minutes and serve with crackers. Sour cream makes better soup stock than meat broth.

Watermelon Preserves Soak about 2 gallons watermelon rinds cut up (green and red) in enough very weak salt water to cover, in the morning drain well and add as much sugar in weight as you have rinds. Cook till clear and tender, then add one can sliced, diced pineapple and one very thin sliced lemon. Cook till clear or about 1 hour; seal.

Composition Cake One and one-half quarts of flour, half pint of sour milk, one pint of butter, three-fourths of a quart of sugar, eight eggs, one wine glass of wine and one of brandy, one scant teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of raisins stoned and chopped, two pounds of currants, half pound of citron, a nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one of allspice, one of mace, half a teaspoonful of clove. Beat the butter to a cream, and add the sugar gradually, the well beaten eggs, the spice, wine, and brandy. Dissolve the soda in a tablespoonful of hot water, stir into the sour milk and add to the other ingredients. Then add the flour, and lastly the fruit. Bake two hours in well-buttered pans in a moderate oven. This will make three loaves.

Fried Dried Apple Pies Roll out an ordinary baking powder biscuit dough as thin as you can handle it. Lay a pie plate on it and cut around the edges so that you have a big circle of dough. Take tart dried apples, cooked and mashed (run through a sieve if possible), add sweetening to taste and plenty of spice. Spread half of the circular piece of dough with the apples, fold the other half over, pinch the two edges together, so none of the fruit will escape, and fry in deep hot grease, like you would doughnuts, except that you want your grease neither so hot nor so deep. Use a large iron spider and fry the pies one at a time.

Convicts Are Armed The convicts were armed with two guns, a rifle and a shotgun, and were believed to have ammunition for one gun.

State police have thrown blockades across all roads and highways between Scio and Sisters. They believed they had the prisoners surrounded at an early hour today.

The break was discovered by annex officials about four p. m. yesterday when three of the convicts, Taylor, Sweetland and Corliss, who are dairymen, failed to return with their cows at milking time. A thorough hunt revealed the trio and Kambout and Fickus were missing. Annex officials informed Warden James Lewis about 6 o'clock. The annex is 5 miles from the penitentiary.

Meanwhile, police were informed by Harry Haskins, Salem, that his Dodge coupe, parked near the annex pastures, had been stolen by five men wearing the blue-grey prison uniforms.

Penitentiary possees were formed under the leadership of Eugene Halley.

Seven grand jurors, who could have no interest in the issue, decided that the Foster boy should not be accused of manslaughter.

"The city authorities thought he should receive some punishment and filed a charge against him of reckless driving. All of the available facts were presented to this jury, and the jury disagreed, not on the facts, but on the moral aspects of the situation. Subsequently Mr. Foster pleaded guilty and was fined $100. Mr. Bryson is an officer of very high attainments and wide experience and had heard and knew all of the facts.

"There are two ways of disposing of offenders. One is to permit him a fair trial before disinterested persons, and a sentence from a disinterested judge. The other is for those who feel most deeply aggrieved to go to his house, call him out and shoot him. From the standpoint of efficiency, the German way is the better. From the American standpoint of fair play, our way is better.

"Mr. Foster has been given the benefit of the American system. "The trial was conducted in the presence of some very competent and disinterested observers who will say, if asked, that there was no incompetency or lack of preparation in the presentation of the case. "The public, generally, will be glad to know that every means of aid was afforded Mrs. Jackson, such as compensation, insurance, etc. "S. M. CALKINS, city attorney."

Farmer is Kidnaped

The fugitives abandoned the Dodge at Scio and entered the farm home of Carl Lindback. They secured a rifle, shotgun, two pairs of blue overalls, three pairs of khaki trousers and a child's bank containing between $2 and $3.

Next they entered the home of A. C. Rahm, near Scio, and demanded that he pay them $250.

When he said he could not, one prisoner said, "All right you — then you're coming with us." They commanded his 1925 Maxwell coupe.

When the fleeing party reached a point some 4 miles from Sweet Home they abandoned the car and entered the brush, commanding Rahm to do likewise under threat of death. They forbade him to emerge from the brush.

Rahm, elderly, said he remained in the brush about five hours before he came out on the highway and made his way to Lebanon.

Escape of the five trustees was the first mass break from the annex since several years.

During the past eight years escaped trustees have been returned to the penitentiary, records show.
