U. OF O. FORUM STORY

Students are not sensitive enough to the subject.

New Method Prescribed

Classes in the college are of an entirely new type. Visual aids, such as motion pictures, are freely employed. Students see the inside workings of business, politics, newspaper editors and other phases of society. Some of them join the writing laboratory, others spend much of their time in the art studio, others devote their attention to sciences, the speaker pointed out.

Many of the classes are very large. Since a study has shown that this method is effective for many types of courses, examinations are not given by course, nor necessarily by those who teach the courses, but cut across the courses so that by the "comprehensive" method an idea of what the student has actually learned can be obtained.

Good Word for Politicians

The outstanding need in government today is more and better political leadership in congress and elsewhere, especially from those who have given a higher education to the people. This attitude, he said, is a great credit to the University of Oregon. He pointed out that the University of Oregon has given a higher education to the people. with the question, "How do we relate our education to the political and social world in which we live. Are we a part of that world?" She reprimanded the teaching profession on its lack of sufficient interest in governmental problems, and public service, and stated: "No small number of men and women in teaching positions are very conversant with the doings of Mert and Marge, Mae West, and the latest crooner, who know nothing whatever of the doings of their city council or legislature, and who even think it queer if any of their colleagues has such knowledge or interest. It is easier, we admit, to follow Mert and Marge than the council or legislature, and it is the easy think that wins."

bygone, but rather of deriving it from the heart of our people—and there to anchor it. "If today I read in foreign newspapers that I am filled at present with deep apprehension with economic worries, I can give but one answer: Yes. But anxiety is not a thing that weighs me down only today. It has always weighed me down."

community doing the work and the women furnishing a picnic lunch. She outlined plans for landscaping the east end of Skinner butte park and the construction of a stone fireplace in the open. SERA funds totaling $1000 are available for this project, being made so through the Business and Professional Women's club underwriting costs of workmen's compensation for the job.

In discussing the court house park in the city, Cal Young, county commissioner, reported that a member of the Eugene water board had told him that if the county would see that the ground was spaded up this fall and grass planted, the water board would furnish all the water necessary, free of charge. He suggested the labor could be obtained through utilization of city jail prisoners.

Labor Backs Improvement

Tom Sheridan, in charge of SERA personnel here, announced that the organization he represented planned to submit the labor for this work as a SERA project this fall. "We now have projects enough to keep our men busy till the latter part of October," Sheridan said. "At that time, we plan to submit this project for further employment. Judge Fish has assured us the county would furnish grass seed to start the lawn."

Sheridan pointed out that in the past any attempt to produce a lawn in the city park was hindered through granting of concessions during carnivals, this practice resulting in ruination of grass. He suggested that in the event the park was re-seeded, it would be wise to prohibit further concessions in the area.

F. M. Wilkins, member of the park board and long noted for his interest in city parks, commended the action of the chamber group in seeking park improvement. "Nature did a lot for us and with a little effort we can have parks we will be proud of," he said. "It is the best monument we can leave for our children."

Mr. Wilkins stressed the necessity of eliminating poison oak in all the city parks. Hugh Reynolds, secretary of the Central Labor council, made the suggestion that a public natatorium should be included in plans for city park improvement.
