

ROSEBURG IS DUE FOR ENCAMPMENT OF SPANISH VETS

Commander, spoke again in the address of the morning Tuesday, giving further details of the campaign to restore pensions lost through the economy bill, and urging strongly the election of a new congress and state legislatures favorable to the veteran and his cause. Dr. Oliver R. Austin, national surgeon, and Dr. Paul I. Carter, of the veterans hospital in Portland, were guests of honor.

Comedy relief during the morning session was furnished by the presentation to Seneca Fouts, Portland attorney and prominent veteran, of a red shirt and pellow Oregon Trail necktie by General Lawton camp. The presentation was made by Dr. W. E. Buchanan of Eugene, and Mr. Fouts promptly responded by donning the red shirt and necktie then and there, on the platform.

Discussion, at times sharp and penetrating, was carried on informally during the morning session, on the subjects of pension restoration, hospitalization for veterans, approval and disapproval of various candidates for public office, including General Charles Martin, candidate for governor, who was roundly denounced as opposed to all veterans. Seneca Fouts, department liaison officer, made his annual report, embellished with an epic poem, as he does every year. This year the subject was Admiral Byrd, whose attitude toward veteran organizations was humorously criticized.

AUXILIARY NOMINATES

Ada May Smith, of Newport, won the nomination for president of the department of Oregon auxiliary to the United-Spanish American war veterans, at the session held Tuesday morning at the W. O. W. hall, Blanch Landburg, of Portland, was named for senior vice-president, with Millie H. H. of Eugene, slated for the position of junior vice-president.

Other department officers nominated: Irene Campbell, Portland, chaplain; Ruth Brant, Salem, patriotic instructor; Cora White, Eugene, historian; Margaret Rogers, Roseburg, conductor; Rose Burklitt, Rogue River, assistant conductor; Frances Klinger, Roseburg, guard; Gertrude Van Overn, assistant guard; Irene K. Campbell, Minerva Hurst, Jessie Shaw, delegates to national convention; Mamie Stauffer, Helen Ellsworth, Mae Ross Walker, alternates.

The last event before noon adjournment Tuesday morning was an address to the ladies from William H. Armstrong, national commander, who was received with honors along with his party which included Harry V. Reed, department commander, Dr. Paul I. Carter, of the veterans hospital in Portland, and Dr. Oliver R. Austin, national surgeon. Commander Armstrong spoke on the economy bill, telling instances from his own experience of suffering and privation caused among veteran families by loss of their pensions.

Of special interest was a report given by Mrs. Gertrude McClellan of the educational committee. Her report stressed education of children to the principles of American government, declaring that communists are carrying on an educational campaign among children opposing military training and teaching anti-government and anti-American policies. She cited the case of an Oregon summer camp for children, in which she said they taught communist principles.

General Lawton auxiliary number five drill team exemplified the ritual as the crowning feature of the Tuesday morning session. The ladies have new gowns for the occasion. Consideration of resolution barely got under way Tuesday morning, and is taken up in detail in the afternoon session.

57 Past Presidents Attend
A record number of past department presidents was counted in the gathered guests were honored. At the introduced and conducted by the drill team to their seats. Fifty-seven were present, a larger number than ever before attended.

The ladies of the G. A. R., the Daughters of Union Veterans, and the women's relief corps, each in turn sent delegates with flowers, gifts, and greetings. The ladies' auxiliary of the American Legion sent flowers and greetings. Distinguished guests were honored. At the joint session Monday morning at the Elks temple, an embroidered silken banner bearing the department insignia was presented to the department staff on behalf of the various auxiliaries. This banner was paid for by pennies, given by each member on her birthday in the number of her age.

This year's session of the auxiliary is known informally as the "Birth-day Celebration," since the encampment meets in Eugene for the first time since the formation of the department auxiliary, in Eugene, June 15, 1910. The organization was known at that time as "Sweethearts of '08"; later being changed to the more formal title of auxiliary. Objectives of the organization center about Americanization, child welfare, and custody of the Battleship Oregon.

ECONOMY BILL PLAYED

James W. Mott, republican representative from the first Oregon district, criticized the New Deal economy bill in a strongly worded discussion Monday evening at the Spanish-American War Veterans entertainment at the Elks temple, a feature of their state encampment here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Mott described legislative processes necessary to obtaining legislative action in Washington, and told of the campaign the veterans' organization waged there whereby partial restoration of pensions in certain classes was obtained recently. The Roosevelt economy bill, cutting deeply into Spanish-American war veterans pensions, was strongly criticized.

Representative Mott praised certain features of the New Deal, but insisted on the necessity for a check on executive powers to guarantee individual liberties and rights of veteran groups.

Gen. Hammond Heard

Major General Creed Hammond, formerly commander of General Lawton camp number ten and a son of Mrs. Elizabeth Rankin of General Lawton auxiliary number five, spoke on the present situation in the Philippines. General Hammond was appointed insular governor of the Philippines by President Hoover, and served during his term until the administration of President Roosevelt, when a new governor was appointed and General Hammond recalled. General Hammond warned against the danger of Japanese occupation of the Philippines and said they were planning to "move right in" as soon as independence is granted. Americans and other white peoples in the islands, he said, do not pull together as they should, seeming to ignore the ever-present danger of conflict with the Asiatics, who outnumber them greatly, in order to quarrel among themselves.

Music and special "stunt" features took up the remainder of the evening's program, with the dancing beginning at 10 p. m.

PIONEER PARADE STORY

The more spectacular entries. The tree from which the wheels were cut yielded 45,000 feet of lumber below the first limb.

Huge oxen and beautiful stock from the Edgar Simpson ranch of Hood, California, will have a prominent place. The cattle will be driven through the streets loose, and with their long horns, will be a sight long to be remembered. Four beautiful white steers, one of the most novel ox teams ever seen will be entered by Long's market, and numerous other oxen, teams of horses and stock will be in the line of march.

One of the most touching sights will be that of a man pushing a wheelbarrow, which holds his worldly possessions. This will be an exact replica of a pioneer who actually did push the one wheeled vehicle all the way across the plains to Oregon.

An early day court scene will be shown on one float, while others will depict early schools, early churches, homes and other buildings. Many pioneer scenes will also be recreated along the line of march.

HOPE FOR PEACE GROWS AS VOTE COUNT IS MADE

Pacific coast, Los Angeles was 80; voted on whether to submit their case to arbitration. Late last night the uncounted ballots were sped to San Francisco by air plane, there to be tabulated by members of the mediation board.

E. P. Marsh of the department of labor, who supervised the Portland election, left this morning by plane for San Francisco to be present when the votes are counted.

There was every indication here, and at Vancouver, Wash., and Marshfield, Ore., that the longshoremen had voted to arbitrate.

Meanwhile cargo was being worked on five vessels here, and it was planned to take a caravan of about 20 trucks to municipal terminal No. 4 this afternoon. Police, however, had urged that hauling activity at the terminal be postponed until the result of the arbitration vote was announced.

All the talk of a threatened general strike was quieted until the outcome of the balloting was learned.

A shortage of gasoline, critical last week, had today been entirely relieved as oil companies sent dozens of trucks hurrying over the city. Pickets of seamen's unions last week prevented movement of the fuel.

RADICALS SEEK DELAY

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—(AP)—Left wing leaders revived the hiring hall issue today in a final effort to prolong the Pacific coast maritime strike while longshoremen were voting, apparently favorably, on accepting federal arbitration.

Harry Bridges, chairman of the joint maritime strike committee, protested against longshoremen's plans to return to work immediately if a majority favor mediation.

Bridges dominated the meeting of San Francisco longshoremen at which the vote on returning to work at once was delayed until another meeting tonight.

Business Picks Up
Sentiment in Los Angeles, Portland, and other ports favored an immediate return to work if results of the vote are favorable to arbitration.

Results of the balloting will be announced here late today or tomorrow.

Meantime the strike which started May 9 was in almost total collapse. Violence yesterday reached its lowest point in 11 weeks. Commerce, on the other hand, reached new high totals.

In San Francisco, strikebreakers and union trucks attacked a huge pile of 300,000 tons of merchandise. Ships brought more freight into ports. All ports experienced the revival of business.

hand, he reported he had "a bad arm." He did not indicate his condition otherwise.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, in charge of the tractor party which was to leave two observers at the advance base and return with Admiral Byrd, reported by radio yesterday it had decided to turn back.

Most of the flags marking the trail are buried in drifts, he advised, and a blizzard appeared to be setting in. The party was expected to have great difficulty in returning to camp, as snow drifts apparently have all but obliterated the trail. Dangerous crevasses lie along the route.

The group encountered some of the coldest weather of the year, with the mercury dropping to 71 degrees below zero at one time.

Men were obliged to go ahead on skis to guard against crevasses. Distances were more than doubled by the zig-zag course necessary to find the flags.

that he changed to another cab about a mile away, as he had done on each previous time he was observed.

"Incidentally, Dillinger was always accompanied by at least one woman, and sometimes by two.

"By using two taxicabs he shook us off Saturday night, but when we drove back past the theater we saw that a new film would be shown Sunday, and we guessed that Dillinger would come again. We therefore got in touch with the federal agents of Melvin Purvis' staff and the trap was laid.

"As expected Dillinger strolled up to the theater with a woman. A second woman entered about the same time, but we could not be sure whether or not she was with Dillinger.

"When he left the theater, two women were again near him. One of the women seeing the officers, seized Dillinger by the shirt and cried, "Oh, John—those men."

"Caught off his guard this last time, Dillinger leaped back, reaching for his gun. At that moment the woman, or women, disappeared. And a moment later Dillinger fell dying as he had seen many men die at his hand—only this time it was a human man dog the bullets hit.

"And at any time in the past ten days we could have taken John Hamilton and George (Baby Face) Nelson. But we realized that if we arrested these men, Dillinger would escape."

AUSTRIANS SEIZE 1200 SOCIALISTS

VIENNA, July 24.—(AP)—Twelve hundred socialists were arrested today in connection with an alleged plot to overthrow the Dollfuss government. It was the biggest roundup of political prisoners since the bloody February civil war.

Political police were picking up threads of evidence which they said indicated socialists, communists and nazis had verged into a common front for a huge campaign of terror against the fascist government.

Prisoners were herded into a former coach building plant.

Police were uncommunicative but a government spokesman explained most of the arrests were merely "preventative," pending a search of suspects' homes for explosives and incriminating documents.

Those whose connection with a plot cannot be established "will be released within a few days," he said.

CAR IS STOLEN

W. F. McKevey, Eugene, reported to state police the theft of his car from where it was parked near the county jail sometime around noon Tuesday.

FARLEY VISIT STORY

Edward F. Bailey, chairman of the Lane county democratic central committee and Chief Ticker of the Bush in the Bushwhackers, greeted the postmaster-general and led him to the kangaroo court on the truck.

While cameras clicked, recording what Farley declared was "the most unique experience of my life," the tall, affable cabinet member climbed up onto the truck, mounted the wooden horse while Ticker Bailey read the initiation ceremony, making Farley an honorary member of the Bushwhackers. Since he had not time to grow his own whiskers, a set of false ones was plastered on his face. The cameras clicked again, showing him in the false whiskers, Farley grinned, and said, "Well, now the initiation is over, I feel better."

Following the initiation, court was called to order and the noted visitor was asked to explain why he had no whiskers.

"For the same reason I have no hair on my head," he replied. "However, I imagine if I lived out in this climate for a while, I probably could grow some hair. The climate here seems to be conducive to hair growing, from what I can see around me."

"Big Jim Farley," intoned Judge Shy Huntington, "you have been found guilty of having no whiskers, for which you are hereby fined three postmaster's stamps."

"You're letting me off easy," the prisoner replied, as he got off the horse.

Accompanying Postmaster Farley on his trip are K. P. Aldrich, chief investigator for the postal department;

Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to the postmaster, and Wm. Lyons, of the postmaster's staff, former salesman in this section and known to many Eugeneans. At Portland, Mr. Farley will appear over the radio between 5 and 9 p. m. Tuesday evening.

Hop Registration Lists Completed No Prices Yet

SALEM, Ore., July 24.—(AP)—Owners of large Willamette valley hop fields today reported that registration lists have been completed, although hop picking is not yet under way.

Picking prices have not yet been established. Individual growers probably will set rates.

There is a large carry-over parcel with former years. The crop on July 1 was listed at 14,194 bushels as great as 1933, when 2,322 bales were on hand. Over fear surpluses will tend to keep prices low.

Picking in the fuggles and clusters is scheduled to begin August 15. Later crops will be harvested about September 1. The cluster vines have shown some improvement in the past years and appear extremely healthy.

Australia will spend $100,000 on unemployment relief during financial year 1934-35.
