

WESTERN SILVER MINES NOT MUCH HURT BY POLICY

DENVER, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The silver mines of the Rocky Mountain west which cheered for "Roosevelt, silver and Santa Claus" last December when the president boosted the price of silver ore to 64½ cents an ounce, will not be affected by the president's executive order today nationalizing silver at 50.01 cents per ounce.

Silver ore was specifically exempted in the new executive order, along with certain other classes of silver. The president's new order was interpreted today by James F. McDonald, of Leadville, president of the Colorado Metal Mining association, R. P. Reynolds, manager of the American Smelting and Refining Co. properties in Colorado, and others as intended primarily to end speculation in the white metal.

"The miners will keep right on digging for gold and silver," McDonald said. "They will get their 64½ cents an ounce for silver at the mint, and that's what they're interested in."

The increase in silver ore price, effective since last December, has not stimulated silver mining in Colorado as much as was expected then, McDonald said, because of the low price for lead and zinc, with which silver usually is found in this state.

"The only way that silver miners might be affected," said Reynolds, "in my opinion, would be if the nationalized price of silver were to be increased above the 50.01 cent figure, and the present 64½ cent price for new-mined ore. In that case the miner, presumably, would be allowed to take advantage of the higher price."

matter and allowing alleged unlawful conditions to exist in order to influence the vote in favor of a dry city is concerned, there is absolutely nothing to it."

Dr. Simon said such rumors undoubtedly originated some time ago when the proprietor of a certain beer parlor asked the police department to send an officer through his place every half hour to see there was no disorderly conduct and to quell any disturbance that might arise. This request was refused, he said, because it would be an impossibility to meet the request even from one proprietor, let alone such requests, if made, from proprietors of other places.

"It is assumed by the police committee that the beer joints are legal and that they are operating within the law, and are entitled to the same protection as any other business in Eugene, and they are going to get it," Dr. Simon said, "but of course it is an impossibility to place an officer in any of the places."

"Our town is bigger than any beer joint and bigger than any political issue, and the members of the police committee resent any inference that we are allowing disorder or lawlessness to prevail in any of these places to influence anybody's vote," he continued.

"It would be the height of folly to allow the ruin of the boys and girls of the town for the sake of political issues."

Dr. Simon declared, as other members of the committee and Chief of Police Bergman have stated, that in case of a brawl or any other disorderly conduct in any of the beer parlor officers will be sent to take care of the situation but that it would be a physical impossibility to police any or all of the parlors constantly or at stated intervals as suggested by one proprietor.

Pear Conserves
7 cups of pears peeled and run through chopper.

7 cups of sugar, boil till thick
1 large can of shredded pineapple
Add 2 cups of sugar, boil slow till thick then pour together and boil till thick enough, add one of blanched shredded almonds just before taking off. Pour in sterilized jars and seal.

Mrs. Geo. D. Heitman, 338 Madison St., Eugene.

Baked Pears
Take enough pears to fill a small bread pan when cut in halves. I do not peel them but remove the cores. Then instead of using white sugar I cover them with brown sugar and pour enough water in the pan to cover the bottom of it. This will make a syrup when cooked. Bake until the pears are soft.—Mrs. Chas. L. Ellis, 282 N. Polk St., R. 1, Box 46, Eugene.

Baked Pears
Make a quantity of syrup, using 2 cups sugar to 5 cups water. Wash and dry small or medium sized pears. Remove blossom but leave stem on. Put a clove in the blossom end of each pear. Prod skin two or three times to allow steam to escape.

Put one layer of fruit in large flat pan. Pour hot syrup about two inches deep over pears. Then bake, turning if necessary. Two quart jars are a good size to use. Fill jars with pears, pouring over them the syrup they are baked in, filling jars with the remaining clear syrup.

These are especially good to serve for breakfasts during the winter, when one tires of other fruit.—Gertrude Porter, 1649 East 25th St., Eugene.

bank of the Suslaw between the steep edge and steep hillside, the depth varying from nothing to about 70 feet. A 40-foot right-of-way taken for the road is said to have ruined the property. A summer home constructed there 20 years ago on one of the home sites was said to have a value of $700 before the building of the road but is now said to be valued at $250. Ten other home sites held to have had a value of $250 each are now held to be valueless.

The complaint further declares that the water and sewage system at the home was damaged by road workers, that the road excludes the plaintiffs from their own land, that the road is open for traffic, that the road was constructed across the land without the county condemning the necessary right-of-way, and that the county court had refused to make any adjustment.

Members of the county court declared Thursday that they had consulted with Dr. Bartle about the road, that its route had been changed to pass in front of the house instead of to the rear in keeping with his request, and that Dr. Bartle had then informed them that he would "not hold them up." This, they said, was taken to mean that he yielded right-of-way so that no formal agreement was made.

The road was said to have been blocked recently by having several trees felled across it, at the Bartle property.

Deal" as "A square deal" and quoted from a speech in congress in this connection generally attributed to Representative Burke (D., Neb.), who is running for the Nebraska senatorial nomination against Governor Bryan.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke strongly about the critics of the administration's efforts, naming those "whose objectives are wholly right and wholly progressive" but who insist upon their "own methods and nobody else's."

He said the "other type" is the "individual who demands some message to the people of the United States that will restore what he calls 'confidence.'"

"Those who would measure confidence in this country," he emphasized, "in the future must look first to the average citizen."

Meets 'New Party' Talk

In a state talking about a new party, the president, homeward bound after spanning a great stretch of the northwest and the drought-afflicted prairie states, pronounced his major declaration of the first campaign year since 1932 and said the "new deal" is going forward.

"Confidence is returning to our agriculture population who, in spite of unpredictable and uncontrollable drought in a large area is giving understanding cooperation to practical planning and the ending of useless bickering and sectional thinking of the past," he said.

"Confidence is returning to the manufacturers who, in overwhelming numbers, are comparing the black ink of today with the red ink of many years gone by; to the workers who have achieved under the national recovery administration rights for which they fought unsuccessfully for a generation; to the men and women whose willing hands found no work and who have been saved from starvation by government relief."

He found confidence returning, too, to children saved from child labor, to business men and bankers finding government cooperation in putting "the golden rule into the temples of finance"; to home owners and small investors saved from losses.

No Harm to Honest Business

"These are the elements that make for confidence in the future," said the president. And, as though to instill further confidence in business, he pursued:

"This government intends no injury to honest business."

"The processes we follow in seeking social justice do not in adding to general prosperity take from one, give to another. In this modern world the spreading out of opportunity ought not to consist of robbing Peter to pay Paul. We are concerned with more than mere subtraction and addition. We are concerned with the multiplication of wealth through cooperative action—wealth in which all can share."

If forced to pay the new code prices for fruit they might take loss. Prices for green pears established by the code run from $15 to $20 a ton. Canners have posted prices ranging from $9.32 to $21.32 a ton. In only one grade, size 10, is the canners price higher than that provided by the code. For grade size 29, the code price is $15 while that of the canners is $9.32.

SILVER PLAN STORY

tration's action was Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), a senate silver bloc leader, who hailed it as the "overthrow of the world-wide gold bloc."

He said the world would have to follow the same course and thus lead to a new international monetary system. He also forecast it would bring an international agreement on money "which will be the beginning of a new era of prosperity."

First hints of nationalization were given last night when Morgenthau ordered each $100 worth of silver, or more, imported from abroad must be accompanied by a consular invoice. Exempted from this order were bullion already in transit, that imported for re-export and the crude metal.

The treasury has been buying silver in the markets of the world under authority of the silver purchase act over a period of months, but the amount acquired has been kept an official secret. Various estimates have placed it around 100,000,000 ounces.

The treasury holds approximately 62,000,000 ounces of silver acquired from other sources.

From now on manufacturers using silver for fabricated articles will have to obtain the metal on license from the government, although Morgenthau emphasized that no interference would be placed in the way of legitimate industrial use.

Senator Thomas said that from the standpoint of inflation or as a step toward establishing a 25 to 75 ratio between silver and gold as a monetary stock the nationalization move was not important. He said the government still would need to purchase a billion ounces of silver to meet the ratio which has been set by congress.

He contended the importance of the move was "a declaration of policy that we need silver to add to our gold as money."

"It is a declaration there is not enough gold in the world to satisfy the demands for money," Thomas added. "It is a return to silver."
