DILLINGER'S AIDE
HUNTED BY STATE
POLICE OF OREGON

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 15.—(AP)
State police, deputy sheriffs and all police in the Portland area were today warned to be on the alert, just in case the country's new "Public Enemy No. 1" is in these parts. It's George (Baby Face) Nelson they're looking for.

The alarm was spread this morning after a service station operator at Bonneville reported he had given highway directions to a man he later believed resembled Nelson.

The station attendant said he was approached early today by a man driving a large tan (Cadillac) phaeton, and that in the car was a young woman in man's attire. The motorist asked the way to Portland.

The couple answered the general description of the man and woman involved in a service station robbery at Salt Lake City Monday, and the car was of the same make and type, the service station man said.
