ANTI-SEMITISM COVERS ISSUES

An old man named Mendel Bellis died in a hospital in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., a few days ago; and if the name doesn't mean anything to you now, that is only because the world has just about forgotten one of its most sensational murder trials.

In 1911, Bellis was living in a suburb of the Russian city of Kiev. The suburb had 10,000 inhabitants, of whom Bellis was the only Jew. Since anti-Semitism was almost as rampant in Russia then as it is in Germany now, Bellis was not popular.

One day the body of a 13-year-old boy was found in a cave on the edge of the suburb. The lad had been murdered; his body was pierced by no fewer than 47 stab wounds. And Bellis was promptly arrested and charged with murder.

Strictly speaking, there was no evidence against him. But that made no difference; the accusation and the trial were matters of passion, anyway. For Bellis was accused of having performed a "ritual murder." He had killed the boy, it was said, so he might use the blood to sprinkle on matzo, the Passover bread.

It is hard for us today, to understand how such a charge could be taken seriously—but it stirred all Russia. Citizens of Kiev shrieked for Bellis' blood. The trial was not held until 1913 and the case had to order out 1500 Cossacks and 1500 infantrymen to keep Bellis from being lynched. Once a bomb was thrown at the carriage that took him to court; another time, a mob tried to burn the street car in which he was being carried.

In the end, of course, Bellis was acquitted. Shortly afterward a woman member of a band of thieves confessed the murder. She was executed, and Bellis, after many tribulations, made his way to America, where he lived the rest of his life in peace.

Now all this would hardly be worth recalling today, except for the light that it throws on that strange of human phenomena, anti-Semitism. The anti-Semitism of Russia was an artificial growth, pumped up by the government to distract the populace's attention from its real troubles. It betokened, as it always does, a society ready to crash from its own rottenness.

Looking back at it, we can remind ourselves that the man or the organization that raises the banner of anti-Semitism usually does it to keep people from noticing something of infinitely greater consequence.

CASE OF SILLY "JUSTICE".

That Kentucky judge who has been handing out daily jail sentences or fines to the two reporters, who refused to reveal the source of certain information they printed, seems to be bent on bringing his own court into contempt.

The background of the case is absurdly picaresque. A state representative, who happened to displease his constituents, was hanged in effigy one day—that is, a gang of indignant voters made a dummy of him, labeled it with his name and strung it up by a rope, by way of indicating their displeasure.

These two reporters found out in advance that it was going to happen; and because they won't tell the court who told them, so that the court can get to the bottom of the whole business, the judge has been cracking down on them every day.

In the first place, the judge ought to realize that no reporter worth his salt is ever going to reveal a confidential source of information, no matter how great the pressure. And in the second place, making all of this fuss over a demonstration which is common and harmless enough in a hot election campaign is just downright silly.

WAR'S AFTERMATH.

A FOREST fire recently swept through a part of Apremont Forest, near Chalons-sur-Marne, France. Immediately the air was filled with the crash of exploding shells, which jarred the countryside and put the fire-fighters in grave danger.

Bitter fighting took place in this forest during the war. Many shells were shot into it. Some of them were "duds"—they had defective fuses, or something and failed to explode. So, during all the years since, they lay there, waiting for the fire to come and touch them off.

There is something very ghastly about the thought of those messengers of death hiding their time in the depth of a peaceful forest. But they simply parallel the effects of war in human relations.

War leaves many unexploded shells—hatreds, jealousies, suspicions, injustices, desires for revenge—and they lie inert, sometimes, for many years... waiting for the moment of heat that will blow them up and let them destroy human lives.

There must be some attraction in the Indiana state prison. A recent check shows some of the convicts are still there.

All the untouchables are not in India. Some of our best panhandlers report they have encountered several on downtown streets.

Love is not such a torrid affair in Spain, after all. A Madrid butcher, closing his icebox when he suddenly returned home at night, opened it the next morning to find a male friend of his wife there, frozen to death.

Dry's checking a saloon in an eastern city announced that hill-billy songs had attracted scores of young people to the den of iniquity. But they overlooked the fact that they must have driven hundreds away.

Eight companies are said to control 85 percent of the natural gas in the U. S., not counting.

however, the inexhaustible supplies of crude gas in the state legislatures and congress.

British prison libraries are barring American murder stories. But England better not try taking such books away from children.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

ZIMMERMAN AND THE SOCIALISTS

(The Oregon Statesman)
 THE socialists appropriately endorsed Pete Zimmerman at their state convention at Albany, by inference, since they decided 18 to 6 against putting a candidate up against him. Zimmerman was supported by Albert Streiff who has been a perennial socialist candidate. There was some argument however and a Eugene socialist said with truth:

"What do we owe Zimmerman, who though he has claimed for 40 years to be a socialist, has never contributed a dime to the party treasury?" That's Pete all over. He can supply the socialist oratory; but is slow on the digging for funds for the cause. He should be able to run on the socialist platform all right because it endorses most all his "progressive" principles: state-owned bank for deposit of public funds; state-owned industry; repudiation of all debts other than owed by defunct banks; free dental and optical care for needy, etc. What aren't on Pete's list are included in the socialist "new deal."

At the rate the federal government is traveling however, these socialist planks will look hopelessly reactionary in a short time; unless the public revolts against what is happening.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Reports that James A. Moffett will be relieved as head of the Federal Housing Administration are not based on any belief that Mr. Moffett isn't getting enough publicity.

Publicity is vitally essential to F.H.A. The trouble is that it's Mr. Moffett who's getting it all—or all, that is, except as the limelight reflects upon the housing drive after first bouncing off Mr. Moffett. The stories, to be sure, mention the fact that Mr. Moffett is housing administrator.

The day Mr. Moffett wrestled away for F.H.A. the new offices of the Indian Bureau, in the middle of its big new program, you could tell you were going to hear more of Mr. Moffett. And you did, sure enough.

First you heard how he has moved his big yacht Bidou here—wily an office in it, though he has two others. Then how his daughter Adelaide was looking for a night club or radio singing job—she got one, I believe.

Then how somebody was suing Mr. Moffett for an alleged $18,000 unpaid balance on the yacht. And most lately Mr. Moffett was demanding that local officials boot out from their wharf the yacht of John Hays Hammond, Jr., so Mr. Moffett could moor the Bidou there.

Then you actually saw and heard Mr. Moffett himself at a Press Club luncheon as he stumbled through a prepared speech which apparently he hadn't read before.

Between one thing and another you got to understand the current local impression that Mr. Moffett, though a large campaign contributor and an old friend of Roosevelt who sold oil to the navy during the war, wasn't "so hot."

But you tried to remember that Mr. Moffett was a New Deal hero, who, as a $100,000 Standard Oil of New Jersey official, had defied Walter Teagle and resigned the job to serve the New Deal without pay because Teagle wasn't New Dealish.

And to forget the story certain other oil magnates tell that Mr. Moffett's own home of $200,000 was all due to resentment because President Bill Farish of Humble Oil had been advanced over his head to be chairman of the board.

Meanwhile, every good citizen should hope that the current local impression of Mr. Moffett will prove to be mistaken. Because F.H.A. has a very important program on and ought to succeed. And even if Mr. Moffett did let F.H.A. fall into the hands of the professional politicians, he didn't mean to.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

SCARLET FEVER is one of the most treacherous of the diseases that afflict children, principally because in so many cases it is so mild as to be almost overlooked.

In many cases, nevertheless, it attacks the kidneys, the heart, and the hearing organs, bringing about a serious crippling of these organs, if not death.

We really know enough about this malady to bring the illness and death rates down to the vanishing point if we could apply all the information we have. Unfortunately, it is simply impossible to reach all the people that one would like to reach with such information or to persuade them to avail themselves of what medicine has to offer.

In most of the cases of scarlet fever, swelling of the glands in the neck is a common sign, so that any time a child has a fever, nausea, vomiting and swelling of these glands, with a more or less severe sore throat and even a slightly red eruption on its skin, a diagnosis of scarlet fever must be considered.

Next to the serious effects on the kidneys, which are rather common in scarlet fever, is the danger to the hearing. The severe inflammation and swelling in the throat may extend into the tube which passes from the back of the head to the ear and thereby affect seriously the organs of hearing.

It has been found that almost every patient with scarlet fever has some slight inflammation of the kidney.

If children with scarlet fever are put to bed promptly, if their kidneys are spared by the feeding of a light suitable diet, if they get the right kind of fluids, and if examinations are made regularly day after day, to control trouble as soon as it starts, the danger to the kidney is much less.

The best protection one can have against complications of scarlet fever is a careful watch for their development by the doctor.

At the same time, the doctor will watch the state of the blood and food substances available to maintaining it in a good condition at the earliest possible moment.

Due to the work of Drs. George F. and Gladys Dick we now have a skin test which makes it possible to determine whether a child is likely to catch scarlet fever when exposed to it and also methods of raising the resistance of the child in case its resistance is low.

Amos Denounces Self-Indulgence

Text: Amos 6:1-7. 11-14
 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Aug. 19.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
 Editor of Advance

BENEATH the sham and injustice of self-indulgence. In the seemingly prosperous society that he observed as he came from his fields and farm life, he saw not only the depth of social corruption, but he saw also the debasement of individual life and character.

He perceived that the character of men and women was being corrupted by the ease and luxury that they had brought into their lives.

He challenged the worth of much that every age has tended to call culture and refinement. He questioned what could be the real culture or refinement of a people who cared nothing for the affliction of their fellow men, and he predicted the overthrow of those who had not established their lives in strength and right and truth.

He saw the great houses smitten with breaches and the little houses with clefts. He saw ruin and depression settling upon the nation that had been building a luxurious superstructure and disregarding the foundations of simple verity and right.

He warned the people against their false security, and he spoke of a preparedness of a different sort, that was essential to a nation and people. He did not tell the rich to secure their ill-gotten gains, and the luxurious and cultured to defend their easy ways, by building up great armies to provide even heavier burdens for the tax-ridden masses. He told them that
