

STRAW SHED FIRE SPREADS AND NOTI HOUSE IS BURNED

A slashing fire on Bert Trout's farm between Elmira and Uoti Tuesday spread to his straw shed and destroyed it, together with a lot of straw, according to Carl V. Ogleby, supervising warden of the Western Lane County Fire Patrol association, who was in from his home at Walton Thursday. About a hundred men assisted Trout in preventing the flames from spreading to his barn and other buildings, Ogleby said.

Practically no fires are burning in the district covered by Warden Ogleby and his men but during the past summer there has been an average of about one every week, he said. Last Sunday a fire broke out in timber owned by B. M. Sutherland south of Noti and spread over several hundred acres but no green timber was destroyed and the blaze probably did more good than harm, according to the warden.

He deplored the mounting death toll in the south.

Defies President's Call

"We do not know," Gorman said, "whether the union will be asked to submit the textile strike issues to arbitration but if an arbitration proposal is made we shall agree to it only after we have closed all mills in all divisions of the industry."

"When I say we will not even talk about arbitration until the mills are closed, I mean that we shall close the mills. We are not looking to employers to close them. Leave that to us. The strike goes on!"

Board Ready to Meet

Gorman's statement followed an announcement by Governor Winant of New Hampshire, chairman of the mediation board named by the president yesterday, that the board would begin its work in Washington tomorrow.

"The president has named a board," Gorman said, which has power to investigate, mediate and arbitrate, but it can arbitrate only when the parties seek arbitration.

Gorman said 450,000 workers were on strike and that today's reports showed the list of closed mills was increasing steadily.

"Even sections that we knew would lag behind are joining the strike," he said. "Today the strike tide is flooding up across North Carolina. New England is racing ahead."

SALEM OUT

SALEM, Sept. 6.—(P)—Union workers of the Thomas Kay woolen mills plant here were officially on strike this morning. Following a meeting between mill officials and union representatives with W. A. Edmunds, national union director for the Pacific coast, in which no decision, agreeable to both sides could be reached, union workers took up positions as pickets around the plant.

EUGENE QUIET

Carl Koppe, manager of the Eugene Woolen Mills, declared Thursday that he knew nothing of any plan to organize a company union among the workers at the plant, when asked about a report that such a union is contemplated. A report was in circulation that a meeting was called for Thursday evening to take steps to form such a union.

Mr. Koppe said he had heard that some of the workers had "got their heads together," but knew nothing of any plans to organize. He said he did not know of any members of the textile union among his workers.

Mooney Not Allowed To Attend Funeral

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—(P)—The last hope of Thomas J. Mooney he might be allowed to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Mary Mooney, faded today after announcement by acting Governor Frank F. Merriam of California that only a pardon or parole could release him, even temporarily, from San Quentin prison.

"There is no other legal way," the California executive said at Sacramento after he had received a request from the American Civil Liberties Union, New York, that Mooney be released under guard from the prison where he is serving a life sentence for the San Francisco preparedness day bombing.

SCHOOL DATE CHANGED

The Walker high school will open Monday, Sept. 17, instead of Monday, Sept. 10, as was previously announced, according to Harvey Trout, principal. It had been planned to start Monday, Sept. 10, but after further consideration, the board set the later date, Trout said.

Metals in use are said to suffer from fatigue.

more direct and informal the procedure, the better.

Approves Purpose of Meeting

General discussions, of course, have their value but I think the gain from conferences will be in proportion to the definiteness of aim, that is, it will depend on the extent to which specific problems are dealt with in an analytical and objective manner.

"The art of friendly cross-examination in intimate inter-course can be used most helpfully to remove prejudices to expose fallacies and ill-advised schemes, and to lay a sound basis for the practicable measures of a rational improvement. Such conferences may be influential, not only in bettering administration, but in developing intelligent opinion in the community."

"I greatly regret that I cannot be present at the conference, and I trust that this first meeting will prove to be a most auspicious beginning of the important work of the institute."

Barker Delivers Address

Lawyers of the state and nation were charged with the responsibility of analyzing the various phases of the "New Deal," testing them for legal soundness, and rejecting them or giving whole-hearted support, in an address delivered by Bart Brown Barker, vice-president of the university.

"The time to investigate the proposals for a new social order is now, and not after these proposals have been put into effect," Mr. Barker declared.

The country can look to the bar for expert leadership for law and legislation, and the bar can look to law schools for training for this leadership, he said.

So-called "simplified code pleading" was soundly scored by Ralph H. King, Portland, president of the Oregon Bar association, in his opening address. Such simplified pleading is sought mainly by lawyers not competent to analyze cases and prepare themselves to handle them, he declared. Speedier court action, the objective of such practices, can best be obtained by increasing the number of judges and providing them with competent assistance, he pointed out, citing figures to show that during the past 20 years population has doubled, court cases had increased four-fold, yet provisions for an increasing number of judges had never been made. He cited figures also showing that court procedure was no more rapid in states where such "simplified pleadings" were now in effect.

At the opening business meeting of the Oregon Bar association Mr. King appointed the resolutions committee as follows: Richard W. Montague, Portland; Charles A. Hardy, Eugene, and Arthur K. McMahon, Albany.

Sessions of the joint meeting of the Oregon Bar Association and the Pacific Institute of Law will be of special interest to the general public as well as lawyers and social scientists, it was pointed out today by those in charge, and a general invitation to the public to attend has been issued by Wayne L. Morse, dean of the university law school and chairman of the program committee, and Ralph H. King, president of the Oregon Bar association.

Addresses on the program Thursday evening and Friday that will be of value to the public follow. All sessions are held in the music auditorium of the school of law.

Packing Plants in Portland Process Cattle For Relief

PORTLAND, Sept. 6.—(P)—More than 500 head of cattle a day are being slaughtered in Portland packing plants under the government's plan for processing of meats for the unemployed and for relief of distressed livestock ranchers.

The state emergency relief committee said that about 500 men and women have been given employment in the packing plants as a result of the recovery plan.

Cattle from Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and Nevada are coming to the Portland plants. The livestock men are getting "real money" for their cattle which otherwise might die from lack of sufficient food and market demand, and thousands of pounds of packed meat is being made available for the unemployed and those on the relief rolls.

The state relief committee today announced that work projects had been approved for development of 26 additional springs in Crook county, making about 1000 springs which the SERA has developed in 11 of the counties placed in Oregon's drought area.

FUNERAL FRIDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Rachel Boardman, who was killed Tuesday north of Florence, will be held at 2 p. m. Friday in the Florence church, Rev. Paul Siler officiating. Interment will be in the Masonic cemetery.

Plans were being forthright today for the closing day's program Saturday when the Boston-to-Salem overland covered wagon will arrive in observance of the Jason Lee Centennial. Tomorrow will feature farmer's organizations at the fair.

The addresses for the centennial observance will be given by Governor Julius L. Meier and Bishop Titus Lowe of the Northwest diocese of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Dignitaries of church and state to whom invitations to participate have been sent included Premier T. D. Pattula, of British Columbia; Governor C. Ben Ross of Idaho; Governor Clarence D. Martin of Washington; Governor Frank H. Cooney, of Montana; Archbishop Edward D. Howard of Portland; Rabbi Henry J. Berkowitz, Portland; U. S. Senator Charles L. McNary, Salem; U. S. Senator Frederick Steiwer, Portland; Congressman James W. Mott of Salem, Charles H. Martin of Portland and Walter L. Pierce of La Grande. Dr. J. C. Harrison, superintendent of Portland District Methodist Churches, is chairman of the national committee on the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the coming of Jason Lee.

The Jason Lee centennial is national in scope, a resolution of congress and proclamation by President Roosevelt calling upon the nation to observe the event as a fitting reminder of the winning of the northwest territory for the United States. The modern Jason Lee covered wagon left Boston April 16,
