HOME TOWN SAYS HAUPTMANN 'BAD'

KAMENZ, Germany, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Local residents said today that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, arrested in New York in connection with the Lindbergh baby kidnapping, was the town's bad boy.

Even before he was ordered to jail in 1923 he had been in frequent conflict with police authorities. In those early days he always was left off, but finally a court sentenced him to prison.

Hauptmann's father is dead, but his mother is still living.

Gas Station Men To Claim Reward

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Walter Lyle, the man who trapped the Lindbergh ransom recipient didn't wear his overalls to work today.

Out of many who handled thousands of dollars in ransom money he was quick enough to suspect his source and had presence of mind to jot down a clue to the identity of the man who passed it.

Part of the reward money for the information leading to the Lindbergh kidnappers may go to him if the case against Bruno R. Hauptmann is a success. Part also may go to John Lyons and Joseph McCarthy, the other men at the gasoline station, who aided in tipping federal agents to Hauptmann.

Kuchitak said he refused to permit the man in the house and then the stranger wanted to see the stairway. "What made me suspicious of him," Kuchitak said, "was that he said he had been out picking chestnuts and yet he had only three or four of the nuts in a tin pail he carried on his arm."

NOT ONE-MAN JOB, OFFICIALS THINK

Authorities Indicate Lead Involving Others in Ghastly Crime

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Federal, state and city authorities today considered the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, alleged receiver of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money, as a definite "break in the case," but they were proceeding on the theory that others were implicated.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, disclosed that three angles of the case have formed the basis of investigation and enumerated them as:

- 1. Murder of the Lindbergh baby. 2. The kidnapping. 3. The extortion.

"We will continue along the same plan," he added.

New Jersey, meanwhile, took the first step toward trial of Hauptmann for the killing of the Lindbergh baby, Governor A. Harry Moore signing an extradition for the prisoner charging "homicide."

Hoover's theory that others were implicated in the crime was shared by Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan, who questioned Hauptmann in the police lineup today and subsequently.

Three Pinpoints May Convict Hauptmann As Baby's Slayer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Washington Evening Star says today three tiny pin holes are the link by which federal authorities are definitely connecting Bruno Richard Hauptmann with the actual kidnapping and murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr. Says the Star:

Handwriting comparisons and other means of identification may be questioned—but when the writer of the 13 ransom letters received after the kidnapping drew two mystic interlocking circles at the bottom of each missive and punctured them with three tiny holes, he gave convincing, incontrovertible proof he was the actual kidnaper. He clinched the proof by submitting later a piece of cloth positively identified by Betty Gow as part of Little Lindy's clothing.

"Even the strange symbol of blue ink circles, with their overlapping portions filled in with red ink, conceivably could have been duplicated by an imposter—but no person on earth other than the man who wrote the note found pinned to the baby's nursery could have duplicated those pin holes, investigators declare.

"This is the reason: The crudely written note on the window-sill and all subsequent notes received as a result of the 'Jafsie' negotiations by Dr. John F. Condon had been piled on top of one another—probably in blank sheet form long before any of the letters were written—and punctured simultaneously in three places on the circle symbol. "In the original ransom demand found on the sill of the nursery by Colonel Lindbergh on the night of March 1, 1932, special attention was called by the kidnaper to these holes. This note read: "Dear sir: "Have $50,000 ready 25,000 in 208 bills 5,000 in 108 bills and 10,000 in 58 bills. After 2-4 days we will inform you where to deliver the money. "We warn you for making anything public or for notifying the police. "The child is in gut care. "Indication for our letters are signature— "Below the interlocking circle symbol. The circles may have been drawn around a coin the size of a quarter. The symbol had been pierced in three places by a five point. "At the bottom of the note was a continuation of the final sentence regarding the signature, reading 'and 3 holes.' The emphasis on the three holes served to heighten interest in them by investigators, who found that all succeeding notes bore the same kind of holes in exactly the same relation to each other, geometrically."

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was ordered held without bail until Monday by Magistrate Richard McKinstry in West Farms today when he was arraigned on a charge of extortion of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

In the charge the $50,000 was identified as "the property of Charles A. Lindbergh, in care of Dr. John F. Condon." Further hearing was postponed until Monday at the request of District Attorney Samuel J. Foley. In his request Foley said the federal and the New York and New Jersey state authorities should be congratulated on their work. Magistrate McKinstry congratulated the authorities responsible for the arrest, and plauded cooperation of the Bronx authorities.

At the police "lineup" in the Bronx station which preceded the more formal arraignment in the West Farms court, Hauptmann was given an unmerciful cross-examination by Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan. It was his first public "grilling."

Hauptmann's appearance was a climax to the usual parade of prisoners, but was the last to be called to the stand. He appeared greatly agitated. A uniformed policeman walked at his side; a plainclothesman followed him. The prisoner tottered as he walked to the stand.

As Sullivan fired questions at him, Hauptmann blinked in the strong glare of the spotlight, focusing his gaze on the floor. He seemed to have difficulty in hearing his inquisitor who frequently had to repeat his questions. Hauptmann spoke with strong Teutonic accent.

Bad Record Is Read After Sullivan read the prisoner's record and announced he was charged with extortion the quizzing began. "How long have you been in this country?" asked Sullivan. "Thirteen years," Hauptmann replied. "How did you get into this country?" "I was a stowaway."

"What port did you come in to?" "New York."

"Did you make your home in New York then?" Hauptmann appeared not to hear.

HAUPTMANN'S PAST RECORD UNCOVERED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The labor department said today a man who gave the name Carl Pellmeier, alias Bruno Richard Hauptmann, had been deported to Germany on July 17, 1923, after he had entered this country as a stowaway.

At that time he gave his age as 23, which would check approximately with the man arrested in New York in connection with the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby. It said he admitted that he broke in the house of mayor of Pombach, Germany and he and another man stole about 1,000 marks, and that he was sentenced for five years, served four and was paroled.

The man is a native of Kamenz, Saxony, and that he had a mother, Paula, living there in 1923.
