MACLAREN ON SCHOOL BOARD.

AN excellent appointment is that of Gilbert D. MacLaren to the Eugene school board to take the place made vacant by the resignation of A. A. Rogers. With four children of his own, Mr. MacLaren has direct interest in the welfare of the schools. As a business man and property owner he has a keen appreciation of the taxing and financing problems which are involved. His approach to anything he undertakes is workmanlike and thorough; he is known as a man who is absolutely fair and judicial. To a board which has been doing a good job in difficult times, Mr. MacLaren is a welcome addition.

The problems of the next few years are going to be critical. This year sees the falling due of $19,000 out of the $87,000 refunding bond issue of 1927 which was used to drag out the payments on the Eugene high school built in 1913-14. Next year sees the falling due of the first of the ten postponed installments on the $248,000 issued for the junior high schools in 1924 and the total of bond payments which must be made will jump to $25,000 a year. In 1927, we must add in the first of the ten installments on the $90,000 issue made to build Edison and Whiteaker schools in 1926, and the load jumps to $54,000 a year. In 1943, the load jumps to nearly $45,000 with the falling due of the $11,000 refunding issue made in 1923 to clean up old accounts including payments on the now abandoned Patterson school built in 1901, and other old debts some of them dating back to 1877. In 1944, the debt load drops back to $34,000; in 1945 it drops to about $7,500; in 1946, with a final payment of about $7,500, it vanishes.

Luckily, the total load of "debt service" is balanced somewhat by the fact that interest charges decrease as principal is paid off. Thus in 1934 "debt service" requires a total of nearly $37,000 due to the $19,000 payment being made and the interest on bonds still outstanding. In 1935 this total jumps to nearly $42,000; in 1936 it drops to $40,000; in 1937 it jumps to over $47,000; then it shrinks gradually till the peak year of 1943 when we shall have nearly $48,000 to pay in principal and interest.

Nor do these calculations include the problem of the warrant debt, which at the close of the fiscal year in June stood at $137,734. Luckily the improvement in tax payments is making possible a rapid reduction in this burden. If times improve to the point where the schools get all the tax money overdue to them, the warrant debt can be liquidated entirely and operations put on a cash basis. Nevertheless the next ten years present serious problems because the schools must not only be maintained but constantly improved, if possible. If there are any substantial increases in school population during this period we may face the necessity of building.

Tempting as it would be to resort to the old device of refunding debts, the only sensible plan is to "take the medicine." We should have learned our lesson in the high cost of such borrowing. That $11,000 issue which will be paid off in 1943 will have cost Eugene taxpayers $2.10 for every dollar of value received. The junior highs will have cost $1.72 and Edison and Whiteaker $1.74. We need on the board during the coming years cool, determined men who will not try to "kid the people."

TAXATION AND HEALTH.

AN idea that has been gaining headway is that of group hospitalization, involving the payment of a definite sum every year by persons who may receive all necessary care during the year at no additional cost.

There are strong objections to this plan by some of the interested organizations, however, and so an alternate idea is suggested in the form of federal aid for voluntary hospitals. But the snag proponents strike here is the question, "How will the government get the necessary funds for such federal aid?"

A 5 per cent manufacturers' sales tax is proposed by Franklin S. Edmonds, past president of the National Tax Association. It will produce $1,000,000,000, he says, and could be distributed among those states that would co-operate in the federal aid plan and would also promise not to tax sales in any other way.

The hospital program is an endeavor to maintain the health of the people, but would not the additional burden of taxation offset that effort?

Orators at the Mapleton bridge dedication made so many references to Valley Forge, the Delaware and Gettysburg that it was only the presence of such Siuslaw familiar figures as C. C. Beck, Joe Morris and others that assured us we still were in Lane county.

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing prison had to undergo a second operation to have a sponge, left by a previous operation, removed from his leg. Only those who were ever left inside prison walls by mistake may laugh.

Since Mussolini demands military training from the age of 5 up, it won't be long until Italian army officers on leave will be calling at the nearest kindergarten for "dates."

With all the European mock wars in progress, tourists can only be certain as to a war's validity by asking Sir Basil Zaharoff.

Six-day bicycle race managers are kicking because there are three times as many free passes as paid admissions. But why kick about a dozen more people seeing the races?

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

HIGHWAY DEBT REDUCTION

(The Oregon Statesman)

WITH the retirement of $107,000 in Oregon highway bonds October 1, the total of the highway bonded debt will be reduced to $25,868,750, which includes $1,000,000 bridge revenue bonds issued to PWA for bridge construction. The peak of the highway debt was reached in 1924 when the total was $38,700,000. The total has been out more than one-third in the past ten years. When you get a downhill pull on a bond debt, the reduction proceeds steadily and finally becomes a speeding snowball of debt extinguishment.

As a paper which has led in the effort to drive top stakes in our debt load and prevent any further piling up, and in the additional effort to proceed steadily on a debt cutting program The Statesman rejoices at the progress that is being made. There have been times when the forces for more bonds to speed up road work have exerted heavy pressure from the time of Gov. Patterson forward. Fortunately the governors and the commissions have on the whole held firm to sound plans, and as a result not a debt payment has been missed and the results are apparent now in the lighter debt burden.

Every million dollars paid off means approximately $40,000 saved in interest which is available for new construction or other purposes. By the end of this decade the remaining burden will be only about $12,000,000. Meantime the revenues under the present laws increase through greater number of vehicles and greater consumption of gasoline. The state may safely look ahead therefore to a comparatively early reduction in the gas tax, without endangering the road program or the meeting of debt obligations.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By WILLIS THORNTON

Register-Guard Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The NRA shuffle represents another triumph of the professors.

Of the seven men who landed on the National Industrial Recovery Board which replaces General Johnson in administering NRA, three are (or were) genuine professors.

Leon C. Marshall was professor of political economy at Ohio Wesleyan and Chicago. He taught law at Johns Hopkins, from which he is now technically on leave. He's a Phi Beta Kappa.

For some years he was connected with the Brookings Institution here, and is considered a labor specialist. He was on the original Wagner labor board.

Ever since the World War, however, his professional duties have been frequently interrupted by government service of one kind or another.

Walton Hale Hamilton taught political economy at Texas, Michigan, Chicago, Amherst and Yale. He's spent almost all his life on the college campus, and since 1928 has rated as professor of law at Yale.

He's written books on economics and on the labor problem in the soft coal industry, and is highly looked up to in the academic field as an economist.

Leon Henderson is the other professor. He taught in high school and later at Pennsylvania and Carnegie Tech. He was for six years with the Russell Sage Foundation.

General Johnson took him into NRA after Henderson had voiced some outspoken criticism of what the NRA was doing to the consumer. In a few months he was the chief "planner" for the organization.

And another professor who looks good for a still longer stay in Washington is William Lloyd Garrison, head of the Labor Relations Board. At a recent press conference, one of the newsmen suggested "I understand President Glenn Frank of Wisconsin wants Garrison back there."

The presidential reply was simple, short, and to the point. It was:

No Target For Labor

The sudden exit of General Johnson altered the order of business at the A. F. of L. convention in San Francisco. Led by the disgruntled United Textile Workers, an anti-Johnson faction was ready to pour a barrage of stinging resolutions into the general. But the target was taken down before the gun could be fired.

Two Profits in Strike

Aftermath of the textile strike about which you don't hear much. Three weeks of non-production depleted surplus stocks in most lines in which they had become a menace, leaving the condition of the industry "healthier" than before the strike. Also the industry saved $15,000,000 which it didn't have to pay out in wages during that time—a nice piece of change for any industry. . . . Ambassador William C. Bullitt is expected to come home for the Christmas holidays. He'll come home via China and Japan, and return in January.

Bonus Fight Kept Alive

Representative Wright Patman isn't letting up any on his drive for the veterans' bonus. He's urging it before the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which is favorable.

Best bet is that the American Legion will "lay off" bonus demands this year, especially if the president takes a whack at it, as he is expected to do when he dedicates a new veterans' hospital Oct. 10 at Roanoke, Virginia.

All the veterans' organizations are winding up to take a terrific swipe at war profits this year, inspired by the revelations of the Senate investigations of the munitions game.

Labor Looks Ahead

Don't say labor doesn't think ahead—one of the new A. F. of L. unions is the Radio and Television Workers. There isn't any television yet, but when there is this union is ready for it. . . . Both the Democratic and Republican National committees are warming up to the fall campaign in great style—never a morning without a statement from one or the other. . . . Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire had no sooner finished the famous committee report that settled the textile strike than he turned to the convention here of the National Recreation Association, in which he is a moving spirit.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

ONE unfortunate individual who requires sympathetic and patient consideration from his family and friends is the person who is subject to epileptic fits. At the same time, the epileptic himself should do his part in avoiding those occupations where there is danger of serious accident in event of a fit.

Police have reported many cases of automobile accidents due to sudden attacks by epileptic drivers. And, in some instances, epileptics have fallen into machines used in industry.

In very severe cases, epilepsy seems to shorten life, but early death as the result of a fit is rare. In mild cases, epileptics may live to old age, and there is some tendency, with advancing age, to spontaneous cure.

When epileptic fits start early in life, and when they are frequent and severe, the outlook is not as good. When there is some degree of mental deficiency and a history of epilepsy in the parents or grandparents, the outlook is not as good for long life as under other conditions.

With advancing years, the tendency to develop epilepsy decreases. The type of disease is a matter of great importance in determining the length of life.

Unquestionably the use of the new diets known as the ketogenic diets, has been helpful in improving the condition in many children.

There are some epileptics who have their convulsions only at night. They are less likely to be subjected to accident, but the indications are that this type of epilepsy is less easily cured or even benefited than the type in which the fits occur during the day as well.

Much of the hope depends on the patience and persistence with which the epileptic and his friends can be induced to carry on treatment. All kinds of treatment must be used for a long time, and continued even after the fits have subsided.

In fact, many authorities believe that two years without a fit is the shortest period that should elapse before the treatment and the watchfulness of the doctor are relaxed.

Fashion Showings—School Dress

Edited by LAURA I. BALDT, A. M.

For many years Assistant Professor of Household Arts, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York

Isn't that a darling dress for school-age daughter? And it's so entirely practical, too.

The first model carried out in red plaid Scotch woolen was especially effective with its white starched linen collar and bright red shiny bow buttons.

Plain navy blue wool crepe is quite as lovely with matching velvet collar and bright red buttons matched by a red patent leather belt.

In checked wool crepe in beige and brown with plain brown trim, it is also most attractive.

You'll enjoy so much making this little dress with its simple bodice and skirt treatment.

Style No. 3381 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Size 8 requires 2 1/4 yards of 35-inch material with 1/4 yard of 35-inch contrasting.
