INS AND OUTS OF LAW.

CONSIDER the pleasant ins and out of the law's technicalities. New York lawyers, who have studied the case against Bruno R. Hauptmann, Lindbergh kidnaping suspect, point out that what the general public has taken for a very strong case against him is really pretty weak.

To begin with: Is Hauptmann to be tried in New Jersey for kidnaping? By New Jersey law, kidnaping is a felony, and no indictment on a felony can be drawn there if two years have elapsed between the time the crime was committed and the time the grand jury takes the case.

But this statute is voided in cases where the prisoner has been a fugitive from justice. Very well, then—from what was Hauptmann a fugitive? There was no charge against him at any time before his arrest. No kidnaping indictment was ever handed down.

Can New Jersey try him for murder? To do so, the state must prove that he was at the scene of the crime—which, unless the authorities have important evidence at whose existence they have not even hinted, may well be quite impossible. They must prove that the Lindbergh baby was murdered, which may also be difficult.

Indeed, some lawyers assert that as the evidence stands now, there is actually room for doubt whether Hauptmann could even be extradited from New York to New Jersey.

Suppose, then, that he stands trial in New York for extortion. It is reported that Dr. John F. Condon is unable to identify Hauptmann definitely as the man to whom he gave the ransom money. In that case, say the lawyers, the New York extortion charge might not survive a session in court.

All of this indicates that the road to a conviction in the Lindbergh case may be a rocky one. The fact that a man is found in possession of money definitely identifiable as the ransom money may be damning, in the eyes of the general public; in a court of law, more evidence is needed.

Now this does not necessarily mean that the law is, as Mr. Bumble once remarked, "a ass." The law is quite properly devised so that an accused man gets the benefit of every doubt. A man must not be convicted on mere likelihood; the jury must be certain.

But it does throw a light on some of the difficulties that lie in the path of a prosecutor. A case that looks strong to the man in the street may look weak indeed to the lawyer.

EXPENSIVE DEFENSE.

IT is naval technicians had not evolved their art to such a high degree of complicated and costly perfection, the price of building a first-rate battle fleet would be a great deal less than it is—and the economic argument for armament reduction would lose much of its force.

Construction was begun the other day at the Philadelphia navy yard of two new 1500-ton destroyers, the Cassin and the Shaw. Each boat will cost approximately $2,700,000 for hull and machinery.

Contrast that with bills that were incurred a generation ago, when the United States began to rebuild its fleet following the post-Civil War let-down. The Olympia, a heavy cruiser used as Admiral Dewey's flagship at Manila bay, cost almost exactly what one of these new destroyers will cost.

In other words, the cost of building one of the lighter craft, which a first-rate navy must number by the dozen, is equal to the cost of a main unit of the fleet a generation ago. No wonder modern navies are expensive!

USELESS AIR RACING.

MAJOR JIMMY DOOLITTLE is the dean of America's speed racers, and knows about as much about airplane races as any man alive. So when he tells the National Safety Congress that air racing has just about outlived its usefulness—as he did, a few days ago—his words demand attention.

Major Doolittle cited five principal advances in airplane design in recent years, and asserted that none of them was attributable to air racing. Admitting that air races did, originally, promote aviation safety through the testing of planes, materials and engines, he added that "it would appear, of late, that the value received is not commensurate with the personal risk involved."

Death takes a heavy toll of our speed flyers. Perhaps the time has come to question, with Major Doolittle, whether the game is worth the price.

A 70-year-old Hungarian farmer wanted to be put into an asylum for marrying 50 years ago. A wise bird, to wait 50 years before letting it be known he was crazy then.

Rumanians are still trying to get Mme. Lupescu out of the country. Many wouldn't mind if King Carol got sore and threatened to go with her.

The police inspector of Lille, France, was caught running a gambling and dope racket, and the French people for a time thought they were in Chicago.

New York's police dumped a year's supply of confiscated weapons into the ocean. This still makes it an even fight with the gangsters.

Illinois Relief Commission will rent cows to families on relief. Tired of being milked, itself.

Revolutions of late have become a NEW Spanish custom.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

AS THEY COME (Portland Journal)

AN OFFICIAL land report recently submitted shows the Willamette valley to be better prepared for settlement than any other section of Oregon. A lot of people are moving this way. There is a big job ahead, and it must be done as quickly and as well as possible. It was a broad and highly informed statement of the needs of the Willamette valley that Senator McNary made to the Willamette Valley Flood Control association. His position that the time has come to cast into one program the needs and opportunities of the Willamette valley was well taken. His confidence that the government will help in such a program was based upon personal knowledge.

To do something real, however, requires strong organization representing all interests. It calls for aggressive policy. The uses of the land and of the water, the understanding of potential power and the advancement of industry, are essential. The fear of members of the Flood Control association that the railroads would be hostile if they considered navigation and that the power companies would be displeased if they canvassed potential hydro-electric energy, need not bar the flood control organization from identification in a forward-looking movement. It may concentrate on flood control studies. Others may create the complete picture of magnificent opportunity in the Willamette valley, adding as it is prepared, flood control information, and making sure that no land speculation mars the integrity of the work to be done.

WASHINGTON LETTER

During the absence of Rodney Dutcher, Register-Guard Washington Correspondent, on vacation, the daily Washington Letter is being written by Willis Thornton.

By WILLIS THORNTON

Register-Guard Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—All your life you've probably heard about government red tape. Did you ever see red tape unwinding? Well, I did.

The Veterans' Bureau is just completing the unwinding and throwing away of 200 miles of real, authentic, tangible government red tape.

It has inherited from the old Pension Office the dusty document files that record the cases of soldiers of post-Civil War days. Down in a dungeon-like cellar, three floors below the street, the records lay. The folder documents those relating to each case tied neatly together with red tape about a half inch wide (the same kind you see on documents in lawyers' offices), stood upright in deep, narrow, galvanized iron trays with a handle on the front to slide them in and out of their shelving.

The Veterans' Bureau, which now contains records on some 10,000,000 individuals, is crowded for space. So last March, Chief Clerk W. C. Black started 237 emergency employes to taking these red tapebound packets of documents from the shelves, sorting them, and re-filing them in a modern flat filing system.

As the red tape, often faded and rotten, was snapped on each package, a cascade of dust sprang on the table-tops, for the tin trays were open at the top and not dust-proof. Three hundred and sixty thousand of these packets have been unwrapped and transferred to 2500 filing cases, the 200 miles of red tape going into the wastebaskets.

FILES TO FLOWER POTS

Of course that's only the cases actively drawing benefits. Thousands of tin-tray files of inactive cases remain, with their red tape about them, because it's figured that it's hardly worth the time to unwrap and re-file them.

One result of all this is that many Washington households will have new window boxes. Re-filing made the ancient tin cases useless. But though narrower than the usual window box, they're really excellent for flower pots, and the bureau sold them for just that, thus getting some small by-product return on the job.

Don't get the idea that these millions of files in the cavernous depths beneath the Veterans' Bureau are all the soldier files. The bureau has 15,000 feet of widow's records in one detached warehouse and 50,000 feet of similar bureau records in another. To say nothing of the Revolutionary and War of 1812 records, which are at the Navy Department.

Many of these documents have already been flattened, because their condition demanded it—there are commissions on which "His Majesty George III" etc. is crossed out and "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts" scratched in with a pen—that's the vintage of those records. Some of them may be transferred to the Archives building when that's finished.

MORE EFFICIENCY

Speaking of red tape, the Indian Bureau just unraveled some itself. For 50 years Indian agencies have been making out a complete new roll of all Indians every year. Thus an Indian 50 years old has been reported 50 times.

Just this year somebody had the happy thought that if the agencies merely reported the births and deaths each year, these could quickly be checked against a permanent list at Washington, thus giving just as good a record, and eliminating work that has been calculated to have wasted the equivalent of the time of one stenographer working seven hours a day for 853 years.

NEW DEAL CHIEF JUSTICE

Now that everybody is speculating on the attitude of the supreme court, it may contribute something to note that Chief Justice Hughes has had his bushy beard trimmed much shorter during the recess, leaving what is comparatively little more than a Van Dyke. When President Roosevelt spoke on the radio the other night from the oval room in the White House basement, attendants upstairs on the ground floor couldn't even hear him on the radio that stands in the reception hall. Wrong kind of current. . . . For the most romantic name, we nominate Golden Bell, that new special assistant to the attorney general, generally believed to be handling the Louie case. . . . And speaking of names, one guess as to who is the habitué of Philip Mainwaring Broadhead, Right! British Embassy.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, in the Health Magazine ALTHOUGH doctors are still in the dark about the cause of cancer, you have less need to dread this condition than ever before. The reason is that the medical profession has made great strides in the control of cancer by application of radium and X-rays.

Part of this advance is due to improvements in the manner in which both radium and X-ray are used. Long ago it was found that the tissues which make up a cancer are more sensitive to radium and X-ray than are ordinary tissues. The tissues that make up a cancer are like those of a growing infant after birth. These are very much more sensitive to radiation than are the tissues of grown people.

It has also been found that beneficial effects of X-ray and radium on cancer are due not only to changes produced in the cancer itself, but also to the reaction that takes place in the tissues around the cancer.

Radium may now be applied in cancer not only directly to growths on the surface of the body, but also to growths within the body. This is accomplished by the use of gold and platinum seeds in which the emanation of radium is put directly into the growth. X-ray apparatus has been improved so that it is now possible to give, in a short time, enormously high dosages of the rays.

During the last 25 years, extensive study has been made of the use of both these methods. Cases have been recorded and have been reported before medical societies, and in that way the science of medicine has been advanced.

With development of the new devices, methods of treatment of cancer in various portions of the body have been modified. Particularly has radium been found to be of value in cancer of the internal generative organs of women. These methods are a great advance over previous methods of treatment.

Cancer of the breast in women used to be treated with irradiation methods only when considered inoperable. Nowadays irradiation is used sometimes before operation, sometimes in connection with the operation, and in many instances after operation.

By studying cases treated with various methods and by reporting their results in medical meetings and in medical journals, the collective experience of the medical profession is kept before the profession, so that eventually standard methods of almost certain benefit can be worked out.

The Christian and His Bible

Text: Acts 2:26-39 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 14. . . . By W. M. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

CHRISTIANITY existed before the Bible, or at least before the New Testament. It was not the Book that made Christianity, but Christianity that gave us the Book.

It is somewhat important to remember this, because there have been those who would make the Bible and its formal interpretation more important than the direct experience of the soul in God and in Christ.

In our study of the Bible, and especially the New Testament, the most important thing is to grasp the reality of the experiences that created both the Book and the Church, and to find the reproduction of those experiences in our own lives.

The Ethiopian in our lesson was a man of the Book. That was to his credit. He had discovered the Old Testament, and he evidently loved it and read it with zeal.

But, like more than one man of the Book, he had not yet come to the fullness and richness of the experience underlying the things that he read. So it was that he needed some expositor, like Philip, to interpret the meaning of spiritual truth for him and to make it vital in his own life.

The Ethiopian evidently was an apt and ready student, as every true and open-minded lover of the Scriptures must be. He responded with simple sincerity to Philip's exposition of the Christian way, and he was immediate and urgent in his determination to be baptized. When that had been achieved, Philip suddenly disappeared.

Morning worship, 11 o'clock; sermon topic, "In His Steps."

Elmira Church of Christ James Mathew Alley, minister. Bible school at 10 a. m. Bible centered classes for all ages. Adult classes meet to hear Elmer Jordan, Bible lecturer, on "The Holy Spirit."
