but thought it was O'Ryan, (former Police Commissioner O'Ryan).

Asked whether it was a policeman in uniform, Hauptmann said it was not. He said he would know the man if he saw him and several police officials stood in court, asked whether Chief Inspector John A. Lyons was the man, Hauptmann said "Yes."

Visited Jersey Couple Times
Hauptmann denied that he was in or near Hopewell, N. J., March 1, 1932, the day the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped. He was asked how many times he was in New Jersey before the kidnapping and replied: "I was in New Jersey a couple of times."

Asked by his counsel whether he thought for several moments and replied: "In the fall of 1931." Later he added that he was in New Jersey sometime in October, 1931.

During the cross-examination Hauptmann several times answered by either shaking or nodding his head. He was admonished by Judge Hammer to make his replies verbally.

Crossing and uncrossing his hands, Hauptmann appeared pleased when Attorney General Wilentz referred to his "skill as a carpenter." He even corrected the prosecutor when Wilentz referred to the finding of a wood plank on a roof.

"Not on the roof," Hauptmann said, "in the south wall of the garage."

Took Wilentz that he was at his East 22nd street home in the Bronx the first day of March 1, 1932, the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped.

Asked by his counsel whether he recalled "the first day of March, 1932," Hauptmann testified without hesitation that he remembered taking his wife, Anna, who preceded him on the stand, home from a Bronx lunch room where she worked that night.

He remembered clearly, also, he said, taking her to work that morning. The prisoner said he called at the bakery between 6 and 7 p. m., the night of the kidnapping, had supper there, and went home with his wife, remaining at home that night.

As soon as Hauptmann took the witness chair, the attorneys went into a conference at the bench.

Wife Takes Stand
Hauptmann sat rigidly in the chair, his face freshly shaven, and wearing a grey suit, white shirt, and tie, the first time in his court appearances since he was placed in the Bronx county jail, he wore a necktie. The tie was a dark blue with polka dots.

Once while the attorneys were in conference he looked over the courtroom and seemed entirely composed.

Mrs. Hauptmann who preceded her husband on the stand, testified that her husband must have been home the night of March 1, 1932, the night of the kidnapping, as it was Tuesday and he always called for her to take her home from her work at a Bronx bakery on Tuesday nights.

On cross-examination she said she had told Inspector Henry Bruckman, in charge of Bronx detectives, a short time after her husband's arrest, that she didn't know whether her husband was at home the night of March 1, 1932. On re-direct examination, however, she said then she found March 1, 1932, was Tuesday, she knew her husband must have been home that night because he always called for her at the bakery on Tuesday nights.

MIAMI, Oct. 15. — (AP) — American Legion leaders today predicted another battle over the soldiers' bonus at the 17th national convention. Commander Edward A. Hayes, who arrived yesterday, said he expected the controversial measure to reach the convention floor next Tuesday or Wednesday. The convention opens Sunday.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Oct. 15. — (AP) — Frederick Hennings, 17, of Camas, Wash., died in a hospital here last night as the result of a hunting accident. Returning from a rabbit hunt with several friends, Hennings dropped his 22 caliber rifle between several rocks. When he reached down to get it, the trigger apparently caught on a fragment of rock and the gun exploded. The shell entered the boy's face just below the nose, knocking him over a 20-foot cliff onto rocks below.

It has been suggested that the county erect temporary wooden approaches in place of the fills, so that the new span could be used, but this is deemed a waste of money as this work would all have to be torn out when time comes to put in the fills, it was pointed out.

VARIED PROGRAM GIVEN KIWANIS AT WEEKLY MEET

Three speakers were on the program for the weekly luncheon meeting of the Eugene Kiwanis club, Monday noon at the Osburn hotel, W. A. Dahlberg of the university speech department, who talked on "Strange Behavior," Mrs. Wendell L. Van Loan, Girl Scouts commissioner, who discussed the purposes of the annual Girl Scouts drive, and Dean Wayne L. Morse of the university law school, who spoke in behalf of the State Army's annual drive.

Listing some of the contradictions and paradoxes that exist in the economic and social life of today—as ample, the building up of tariff walls that tear down trade and the move to subsidize to accelerate that trade—Mr. Dahlberg declared the need to day in the field of social sciences is for clear thinkers, experts, and those who can talk in understandable terms rather than those spellbinders and "persons of influence" who have dominated the field heretofore.

We do not have all things in order for such a set-up, however. While we recognize the need for objective, clear, and scientific thinking, yet we have not given enough attention to conditions among individuals and groups in bringing about such an organization, he said.

Among obstacles in the way of bringing about such a set-up, Mr. Dahlberg listed for one thing that the majority of us allow our thoughts to be formed by the press, radio, and associates who make many headlines and false assertions, and as result we have not developed our critical faculties, and we have denuded our capacities of thinking. People are too quick to disperse with problems in a hurry, too, and they are given over too much to dogmatism.

What he termed "wishful thinking" and prejudices were listed as outstanding obstacles, too. Under the topic, wishful thinking or deceitful reasoning, Mr. Dahlberg pointed out that people get in such a habit of arguing by their own wishes only that they convince themselves their stand is right.

Prejudices often are unconscious and many of the religious institutions, racial, and political prejudices are founded upon some personal experience in youth. The point to remember on prejudices, since some of them may be justified, is to know when you are thinking prejudice and when you are not, the speaker said.

He concluded his talk by comments on some of the advertising and the political candidates' methods of appealing, "not to the reasonable and rational man, but to one the man himself does not know." They plan their appeals to reach the different classes, those who are conservative, those who are young and adventurous, or those who have a fear of being "too singular," among others.

he said. Dr. C. L. Huffaker introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Van Loan outlined the character building purposes of the Girl Scouts work in her talk, declaring the "Girl Scouts help the girls to find themselves both in the home and out of it."

Dean Morse in presenting the announcement of the Salvation Army drive, brought out the fact that the organization is carrying on a program, among other things, to rebuild character. He pointed out that the director of the Army here had been receiving only $4 a week in order that the funds of the Army be given to others in more unfortunate circumstances.

Edwin Johnson, president of the Active club, appeared at the meeting to challenge the Kiwanis club to volleyball games as features of the open house planned at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening, by the Active club.

C. L. Kelly, W. T. McDonald, and E. G. Boehnke were named a committee to work from the Kiwanis club with the Salvation Army drive.

On Oct. 29 the club is to hold a "100 per cent attendance" meeting. George Babcock to be chairman.

Guests at the luncheon included Mr. Dahlberg, Mrs. Van Loan, Dean Morse, Robert Hall of Portland, son of E. C. Hall in the club, Adjutant C. Ford of the Salvation Army, and Harold P. Drake.

exhausted, they are huddled down there in the heat, lying on the dirty, water-soaked bed of the mine, with the huge chunks of coal for pillows. "Some are unconscious. Nearly five days without water to drink has parched their throats, and they could not eat if they had food. In their agony and thirst and hunger some of them utter sounds like tormented animals."

At 2 p. m. government officials wished to send troops to the bottom of the pit to force the strikers to the surface at the point of bayonet and gun, and put an end to their threats of self-elimination unless wage demands of $3.50 a week are met.

But the fact that the mine elevator holds only 16 men thus far had prevented the government from taking any steps, since authorities feared the famished and enraged miners might attempt to butcher the soldiers with pickaxes.
