

ARMS CONTROL IS PROPOSED BY U. S.; LEAGUE GETS PLAN

trade. It was the most complete document on munitions which has been submitted here in the three previous years of disarmament consultations.

Before the adjournment of the meeting, Arthur Henderson of Great Britain, president of the conference, was authorized to convene a meeting, probably in January, which will discuss the United States' proposal and other questions.

The United States' suggestion accepts the inspection by an international committee on American soil as to whether the United States is living up to the manufacture and traffic treaties in arms, if other nations are willing to do the same.

Britain, France Sympathetic

Capt. Anthony Eden, British under-secretary for foreign affairs, characterized the American project as interesting. Both Great Britain and France were understood to be "sympathetic" to it.

The delegates of Spain and Sweden said they approved.

Maxim Litvinoff, Russian foreign commissary, demanded that the disarmament conference be liquidated and transformed into a permanent peace conference, but he did not insist on his proposal after Henderson assured him that it would be given every consideration.

Wilson's suggestion would create a permanent disarmament commission at Geneva.

President Roosevelt, through these proposals, agrees to seek legislation to tighten the manufacture of arms and prohibit all trade not granted by the arms treaty. The licenses would be valid for five years and would be renewable.

Geneva to Sean Orders

All governments would be required to take the same steps and to transmit all licenses of arms and all orders for the import and export trade to Geneva. Full details for all war vessels for other countries would have to be given to the commission within a month after the vessels were laid down and a month before they were completed.

The commission would have the right to make annual or more complete investigations in all countries and to send special investigating parties when complaints were made of violations. The commission would be composed of one member of each of the signatory powers.

KING GEORGE ASKS PEACE

(By The Associated Press)

Civilized warfare and mankind's right to fight as he pleases were commented and acted upon by most of the powerful nations of the world today.

The United States proposed at Geneva the manufacture and sale of arms be licensed and inspected by an international commission which would make public just what was arming for war and to what extent.

Austria demanded of the disarmament conference that she be given the right to build up her fighting power, saying she was too weak to protect her independence against aggression. This was approximately the same demand Germany made last year before she retired from the conference and the League of Nations.

King George opened a session of parliament with a plea for peace and for the success of the disarmament conference. He said Great Britain would continue its support of the League of Nations.

France, Japan Build

France increased her military appropriations saying she feared an attack by Germany would have an army of 5,500,000 men ready for service in 1935.

Emperor Hirohito in person attended the launching of Japan's newest cruiser, a warship of 8,500 tons. And as the new ship, the Sumaya, slid into the water at Yokosuka, the keel of a 10,000-ton aircraft carrier was laid at Kure.

The preliminary naval conversations at London, intended to pave the way for a new naval treaty to take effect Jan. 1, 1937, appeared deadlocked with neither Great Britain, the United States nor Japan yielding to the others' suggestions.

DAMAGE MILLIONS IN PHILIPPINE TYPHOONS!

Evidence of the terrific velocity of the wind which swept the Philippines in an epidemic of typhoons is given in this scene, in which a giant acacia tree is shown uprooted in front of the ancient Binondo church in Manila. Six of the devastating storms have swept the islands since early September, causing damage of millions and a life loss exceeding 100.

of American farm families would be destroyed.

No one who believes in the profit system, he added, "and who wants industry the right to control its production, can fairly deny agriculture the same right."

The secretary said he too was for unrestricted production provided "there is a sufficient excess of exports over imports to service the debts owed us by foreign nations and in addition to pay a fair price for our exportable surplus; and provided, furthermore, that shipment of these excess products abroad does not improve our soil beyond repair."

Present agricultural adjustment efforts, Wallace declared, have "enabled agriculture to hold the fort while America has been pondering which way to move on certain fundamental issues, and unquestionably it has brought tangible benefits to millions of farm families." The present administration, he added, is making an effort "in response to the logic of the situation."

Firemen Asked to Provide Escorts To Annual Dance

They must be versatile, these firemen.

Tuesday morning the fire alarm jangled Eugene firemen into activity and Chief W. E. Nushbaum answered, "Who is this speaking?" wondered a feminine voice over the wire.

"This is the chief," volunteered Nushbaum.

"That's fine," said the feminine voice. "I've got a ticket to your dance and now all I need is somebody to take me to it. Can you arrange that?"

which is preparing a utilities report for congress, is seriously considering recommending that holding companies be licensed. Then they would not be permitted to operate in interstate commerce without a federal license. Such a plan might be used to attain objectives like those outlined above.

The trade commission's report on United Corporation, a concern holding minority interests in a large group of other utility holding companies, was prepared while Haley was still directing the commission's study. This report found that the United Corporation represented 27 per cent of the kilowatt-hour power output of the nation; 25 per cent of the installed generating capacity, and 30 per cent of the hydro-electric capacity.

Other examples, which the commission's report includes are Cities Service Company, described as representing a billion dollar empire controlled by Henry L. Doherty with an investment of only $1,000,000 Electric Bond and Share, Associated Gas and others.

The effect of the three-point plan would be to limit the influence of holding concerns to so-called economic areas. The plan also would aim to prevent holding companies from charging "excessive" management fees, and curb the "pyramiding" of security structure.

retain the current 45-cent an hour minimum wage for common labor. The lumber code minimum is 42½ cents. It was requested by some of the 26 board members, however, that the wage question might be reopened late today to give consideration to a 50-cent minimum.

The hourly wage scale was said to be generally satisfactory, but both operators and employees mentioned that serious curtailment of production, dictated by the lumber code, pared weekly pay checks to an inadequate total.

The wage committee reported to the 26 board members that the average wage paid workers in 4-L camps and mills is 5 per cent greater than that paid those on non-affiliated operations.

Africa ranks second in the proportion of her surface under irrigation. Of the total of 11,511,000 square miles of surface, approximately 22 per cent or 10,310,000 acres are under irrigation.

ROTARY DISTRICT OFFICER VISITS IN EUGENE ON TUESDAY

The Eugene Rotary club greeted Percy B. Scurrah, Victoria, B. C., governor of district one, at its weekly luncheon, Tuesday noon at the Osburn hotel. A group of 110 was served at the luncheon. Mrs. Scurrah is accompanying Mr. Scurrah on the trip south. As a surprise, wives of local Rotarians, attended the luncheon, some 30 of them being present.

In giving his message to the club upon the official visit, Mr. Scurrah stressed the importance of international service, vocational service, community service, and club service as the four major parts of Rotary.

"On the whole, Canada and United States are too provincial in their thinking to realize the necessity for cultivating the international viewpoint," Mr. Scurrah declared.

It is difficult for two large nations that have lived side by side for more than 100 years in peace and good will to understand that there exist the terrible barriers of misunderstanding found in relations between European countries, the speaker explained further.

It is the international factor that makes Rotary possible throughout the world, Mr. Scurrah declared. He then went on to explain how Rotary clubs in the European countries have sponsored inter-club meetings, exchange of speakers, editors and school children among the clubs of different nations to break down these feelings and prejudices.

"I am not here to say Rotary is going to prevent war, but it is doing a great work to create good will and to break down animosities," the speaker stated.

Mr. Scurrah told of two incidents to show what striking results Rotary has brought about in foreign countries. One of the international officers was sent to Yugoslavia to present a charter to a club there. He stopped off in Hungary to visit a Rotary club. The hospitality was wonderful until he suggested it would be a fine thing if the Hungarian club would send a telegram of congratulations to the Yugoslavian country. Immediately he was informed that the Yugoslavians were the enemies of Hungarians. Seeing he could make no headway, he dropped the case and had nearly forgotten it.

Then a year later, a telegram came to him from the Hungarian club telling of the inter-city meeting it had held with the Yugoslavian club and of the highly satisfactory results.

Another incident was related in an city in Asia where there were four nationalities, Chinese, Indians, Malaysians, and Europeans. Rotary, through persistent work did much to break down rigid social customs and rulings that had prevailed for centuries until all four nationalities were mingling together socially as well as in the Rotary club. Singapore, he said, has 24 nationalities in its club while Cairo has 19 in its club with an Arab gentleman as president.

Codes may have done much to straighten out business methods, but the government can not do it all; therefore, such groups as Rotary, which maintain vocational service departments, should keep up the good work, the speaker said. Because there are codes is no sign all that is bad has been eliminated, nor is it a sign that it will continue to be eliminated, he added.

Rotary has done much in community service, he said, pointing out as an example the Spokane club which has spent $32,000 for crippled children. "In addition to the underprivileged and crippled children, however, Rotary must remember all the youth of the community, the privileged as well as the underprivileged," Mr. Scurrah added. America is fortunate that its youth is well educated instead of being illiterate, the problem being much easier during this depression, for that reason, he said.

Coming to the subjects of attendance and programs at the club meetings, Mr. Scurrah declared, "You can not get anything out of Rotary, unless it can give anything to you, if you are not there. When you are on the program, committees, you should do your best to make the programs the best possible ones you can get."

At 6 p. m. Mr. Scurrah meets with the officers and directors indicated the following cast of characters:

Lorenz.

Nuggerod.

A negro deck hand aboard Nuggerod's yacht Dinamita.

Baroness Eloisa Boquet de Wagner Wehrborn, of Austria and France.

Robert Philippon, a German businessman.

Arthur and Margaret Wittmer, Germans resident on Floreana island.

Of these, the first five are missing.

Two years ago the baroness, Lorenz and Philippon went to the Galapagos islands to augment the little colony of nature lovers. The baroness and Lorenz went as sweethearts, apparently; Philippon as a mutual friend.

Last week Rolf Blomberg, a Norwegian newspaper man, and Prof. Martin Voegel, a German scientist, arrived from the Galapagos and reported the disappearance of baroness and Philippon.

They told the following story to authorities, based on information given them while they were in the Galapagos:

The baroness, Lorenz and Philippon lived in a house they built on Floreana island.

Apparently, as the time passed, the baroness and Philippon found their liking for each other increasing.

Lorenz was placed in charge of the cooking and menial tasks. There was a fight one day and he fled to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wittmer for refuge. He lived there for several months, melancholy and restless. The baroness persuaded him to return.

On March 23 last, the Wittmers heard loud voices from the vicinity of the baroness, Lorenz-Philippon abode. They ran to investigate. Lorenz approached them. He said that the baroness and Philippon had gone away in an American yacht. Lorenz and Wittmer went to the baroness' house, to find it in great disorder. A few days later Lorenz dismantled the house, built like others on the tropical island, of corrugated zinc, and sold the zinc, wood and utensils of the group.

Lorenz seemed more distraught than ever. He posted a notice on the barrel which serves as postoffice for the island, asking for the first passing ship to take him away. Many islanders have these barrels. Ships passing know of them and in calling for water, look for outgoing mail. Some vessels have mail for the islanders.

The yacht Dinamita, with Captain Nuggerod and a negro deck hand, called and responded to Lorenz's plea to take him away.

That ends the Blomberg-Voegel story.

to Portland as secretary of the Oregon State Automobile association. In the May primaries of 1934 he sought the democratic nomination for secretary of state, carrying Lane county by a vote of 1396 over the successful candidate, Horace E. Walter, who won 1331 votes.

Since the May campaign Mr. Shelton has been residing in Portland. His sister, Mrs. Blaine Hovey, resides in Eugene.

The accident happened when the Shelton car failed to properly execute a curve on the John Day highway and struck the left hand railing of a small wooden bridge which formed part of the curve. The steering gear and engine were back against the driver.

Mr. Shelton suffered a crushed face between the month and forehead, breaking a number of bones. The eyes are believed not affected except badly.
