PICTURE OF ITALY'S NEW STATE.

IT is always easier to figure out what is going on in a foreign country if we translate the action there into local terms. By imagining how some European program would look if it were being followed in America, with American actors in the leading roles, we can usually get a pretty fair idea of its nature.

So it is with the latest development of Mussolini's "corporative state" in Italy. It is worth while to picture this in America—not only because that gives us a better idea of Italian conditions, but also because it shows, by contrast, how far from Fascism our own set-up really is.

Suppose, then, that we have this Mussolini system in operation in America, and that you are a business man anxious to open a new factory to make, let us say, clothes-pins.

First of all, you must go to Washington and satisfy Mr. Roosevelt that the clothes-pin industry needs a new factory and that you will be able to sell clothes-pins if you make them. You must also permit the minister of corporations—Secretary Roper, for instance—to put a man on your board of directors and examine your books.

Getting the necessary approval, you open up. You automatically become a member of a vast corporation which embraces all the wood-cutters, clothes-pin makers and clothes-pin sellers in the United States; your employees, likewise, become members of an allied corporation including all other such employees.

The wages you pay are fixed by law; you pay no more and no less. Your workers can't strike, and you can't fire them. Any dispute must go before the Labor Relations Board, whose decision is final.

Suppose you don't like this, and want to appeal to Congress for a change. Congress, as it previously existed, is gone. Instead, you find a group of congressmen representing, not the various states, but the industries of steel, oil, auto-manufacture, farming, railroads, and so on.

Each of these industries is grouped in a gigantic corporation—whose head is Mr. Roosevelt, assisted by three of Jim Farley's boys.

This being the case, Messrs. Roosevelt and Farley hold the upper hand in Congress. Congress does exactly what these two wish, and no more.

Meanwhile Mr. Farley's men are forever inspecting your factory to see if you are efficient. If you aren't, then can shut you up or make any change in your method of operations they see fit.

A fantastic picture? To be sure. But it is nothing more than a translation into American terms of the actual situation in Italy today.

OMEN IN NEW TRAINS.

THOSE sleek, streamlined trains that the railway lines have been throwing about the country lately come close to being the most encouraging single thing that has happened since the depression.

Or, to be more exact, the public's response to them does.

Since those trains appeared, the newspapers and magazines have been full of predictions of vast new railroad construction programs. Hand in hand with this has come a great revival of interest in new types of construction in other fields.

Makers of fabricated houses are stirring from the long sleep. Automobile makers are playing around with new designs. Even the output of such things as refrigerators and household furniture has been affected.

Now all this, to begin with, is simply the process of putting ourselves on tiptoe to peer into an enormous new field that is fairly begging for industrial expansion.

A great opportunity awaits American business, somewhere not far off; it begins to look as if we would be moving into it in the near future.

But there is more to it than that. It also signifies the revival of the old, traditional American spirit. We are discovering that the world is not coming to an end, after all—that there is work to be done, and lots of it, and that we might just as well roll up our sleeves and get busy on it.

We talked so much about over-production, over-expansion, and over-capitalization in the last four years that we fooled ourselves into thinking that we left our golden age away off behind us somewhere.

Everything was finished, all the big jobs had been done, and the only thing that would ever set the wheels going again was a great program of occasionally useless public works.

Then we saw a couple of brand-new types of railroad train, did a little meditation, and discovered that it just wasn't so.

There is enough work crying to be done in this country to keep us all busy for generations.

What may be keeping Huey Long from taking in more territory than Louisiana is his inability to find the American equivalent for Il Duce or Der Fuehrer.

President Roosevelt's constant smile is due perhaps to his amusement at the way people try to figure out what he means by what he says.

Paying for surgical operations on the installment plan is a new idea in Boston. And if the patient stops paying, the appendix will be put back.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

A MAJOR DEFEAT
(Salem Capital Journal)
DER FUHRER HITLER sustained his first major defeat in the effort made to "coordinate" the German Evangelical church with the new totalitarian state. The embattled parsons and their congregations, enraged by the effort to, as they term it, "Nazify" Christianity, have forced the Nazis to abandon the attempt, and Christ instead of Wooton will continue to be worshipped.

Dictators are usually wise enough to follow a policy of conciliation with established churches and secure a measure of cooperation to retain their power. Mussolini, a much more sagacious tyrant than Hitler, followed in the steps of Napoleon and made peace with the Roman hierarchy. Hitler evidently thought that Naziism was religion enough for Germany, as communism had proven for Russia, but has been forced to concede defeat.

The German church thus retains its independence, the only German institution that has—the press, the radio, the universities, the labor unions, the political parties, the industries have been compelled to submit to dictatorial control. Yet the situation, despite the apparent acceptance of other features of Nazi rule by the church, contains a menace, because it sets an example in independence to which other institutions may aspire.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Register-Guard Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Pressure for jobs here is still nothing short of tremendous—and yet some good ones go begging.

Roosevelt has had trouble filling several important posts where a mere political appointee won't do. For instance, National Labor Relations Board. Lloyd Garrison was asked to continue there, but refused. The job was later offered to Judge Walter P. Stacy of the steel and textile labor boards. President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, and Miss Josephine Roche of Colorado, who has just been made an assistant secretary of the treasury.

All refused. Finally, Francis Biddle of Philadelphia was persuaded to take it.

At least three newspapermen have turned down the chance to be public relations director for NRA—an important position, because it involves selling a reorganized NRA to a skeptical public.

Other jobs for which Roosevelt seems to have trouble getting the men he wants include seats on the RFC and Federal Trade Commission.

Florida Goes in For Wine
Prohibition repeal in Florida means more than the opportunity for Floridians to buy legal drinks.

Down there they've been developing vines and lemons from grapefruit, tangerines, oranges, and even lemons. The Department of Agriculture laboratory experts are rather enthusiastic about these beverages and now that they can be legally manufactured, you'll probably be hearing more about this.

Bargling Around Town
Lots of election smiles which still persist. And some new ones. Jim Farley's grin is constant except when you ask him about Senator Cutting's New Mexico victory or Sinclair's big California vote.

Bob LaFollette has been around, still horse from campaign speaking, but youthfully robust. And stocky little Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who will be right on hand if a national progressive political movement starts, here for the Security conference and 100 per cent happier than after his 1932 congressional defeat, when he wanted to retire from the picture to be governor of Puerto Rico.

And Senator George Norris, back from Nebraska with his son-in-law and secretary, Jack Robertson, chuckling gleefully over victories of progressives, New Dealers, and his own one-house referendum proposal back home.

Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, father of the 18th amendment, who announces a new campaign for prohibition, lunching at a tiny waterfront seafood restaurant, where everyone but he and his woman companion drank beer. (The waiter says he's a good customer.)

Herwood Brown, America's most famous poker player, playing 10-cent limit dealer's choice with Jerome Frank of AAA, Steve Rauschenbush of the Munitions Committee, Griffin Barry, Peggy Bennett, Mory Taylor and others—and losing!

Morris and Margaret Ernst dining at the Mayflower with Edna Ferber and Dr. Fred Howe. Ernst was here to argue the New York mortgage case before the supreme court. Miss Ferber was telling of her first visit to Washington, when she came down with a typhoid, and her second, when she told Hoover at a White House party that he reminded her of the White Rabbit in Alice in Wonderland and nearly caught pneumonia from a resultant chill she hadn't expected.

On this, her third visit, she again became indisposed and fled back to New York without waiting to hear Ernst argue.

A queerly assorted luncheon party: Harry Hopkins of FEHA, White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre, Jim Barnes—lobbyist for shipping interests, Deputy General Manager Charlie Jones of HOLC, Arthur Mullen, Jr., of Nebraska and the Export-Import Bank, and a couple more.

An in the cocktail lounge none other than Pennsylvania's Senator-elect Guy Guffy, receiving congratulations, wearing a handsome tailored gray suit, blue tie—and the still familiar election grin.

AN EDITORIAL ON HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

THERE was a time when between 250 and 300 babies out of every 1000 born in certain large cities of the United States died before they were one year old. With the advance of modern medical science these rates have been greatly reduced, so that the average rate for 1933 cities in 1933 was 57.1.

Since the previous year, cities of Texas and South Dakota have been added to the birth registration area. If only those cities which were in the birth registration area in 1932 are compared with those for 1933, the rate for last year is 55.9—the lowest ever recorded in the history of this country.

This is highly significant, because the period was one of financial emergency and financial depression, with many people on relief.

Furthermore, health authorities believe that the infant mortality rate is a good measure of medical and public health effort. It means that, even during the financial depression, medical and public health officials have held their own in the battle against disease.

It is of great significance to realize that Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., and Oakland, Calif., have for several years been among the first with the lowest infant mortality rates. In 1933 the rate for Portland was 33, and for Seattle and Oakland, 38.

Smaller cities, such as Fort Wayne, Ind., Long Beach, Calif., and Tacoma, Wash., report rates of 33 and 35. Among cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population, Berkeley, Calif., and Newton, Mass., have death rates of 21, and San Jose, Calif., a rate of 23.

In contrast with these enviable records, Memphis, Dallas, and Atlanta have the highest rates among cities of over 250,000; namely, 112, 86, and 89; El Paso, San Antonio, and Chattanooga have the three highest among cities from 100,000 to 250,000; namely, 125, 113, and 89. And Charleston, W. Va.; Montgomery, Ala.; and Huntington, W. Va., have the highest rates for cities of from 50,000 to 100,000; namely, 131, 110, and 106.

The lowest rate among the 10 largest cities in the country was 44. This rate was reported for Cleveland and St. Louis, Chicago, which had the lowest rate in 1932, and Philadelphia tied for third place with rates of 49.

But all large cities of the United States had rates under 70, and the average is about 56.

The infant mortality rate is a reflection not only of the medical and public health care available in a community, but also of the social and economic status, the climatic conditions, and similar factors.

Nevertheless, among the factors of greatest importance is the provision of a clean, carefully controlled food supply. Infant mortality rates have been lowered primarily by cutting down the number of deaths from dysentery and from diarrheal disorders, due to infected water and infected milk.

The manner in which American cities have maintained their wonderful record during the period of financial depression is a further testimony to the self-sacrificing character of medical and public health efforts.
